Hoffman Estates Officials Oppose Tax Levy Freeze

Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session to pass a proposed property tax freeze is not bringing kudos from Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates officials.

School Dist. 54 also strongly protests the idea of freezing the total amount of property taxes collected.

"The board is not opposed to freezing the tax rate, but is strongly against freezing the total tax levy," Hoffman Estates Mayor Fred Downey said.

Last spring the board wrote letters to the governor and state representatives protesting a proposed bill to freeze taxes, Downey said.

"With the community growing, if the total tax amount collected is frozen, the tax rate goes down. This works a hardship on a community like Hoffman Estates," Downey said. "If we freeze just the tax rates, that would be all right."

DOWNEY also asked, "Why adopt home rule and then take it away? With home rule, localities determine for themselves what's best for the community. This makes it difficult to do so."

He commented that the suburbs will receive much less from the compromise version of the federal revenue-sharing program than they were originally to receive. "Ogilvie talks of money the villages will get from revenue sharing. But the suburbs got shafted on that."

Ogilvie's action on the tax freeze proposal stemmed from congressional passage last Friday of the federal revenue-sharing bill, which will bring additional monies to municipalities.

Schaumburg does not levy a village property tax, but a tax freeze could affect it. Village Atty. Jack Siegel said a tax levy ordinance was passed 1 1/2 months ago to make certain the village could collect taxes if needed.

"We knew of the existence of this bill last spring, and passed a tax levy ordinance just in case the bill passed," Siegel said.

SCHAUMBURG intends to abate (void) the tax levy before the end of the year, as it has with previous tax levies, Siegel said.

When asked if a tax freeze would mean Schaumburg could not collect a tax throughout the duration of the freeze, since it never has collected a village property tax, Siegel said it depends on the wording of the legislation.

"If the language is in terms of taxes actually levied, Schaumburg could not collect taxes during the freeze. But they could decide to do so if the wording refers to a tax levy ordinance," Siegel said.

"If the governor could guarantee a freeze on our spending, a tax freeze would be wonderful," said Marvin Pallola, School Dist. 54 business manager.

"He'd also have to guarantee the teachers don't ask for salary increases again. If the lag in the collection of taxes and inflation could be controlled, then it would be very fine and realistic to freeze taxes," Lopicola said.

Korean Family Finds

The Cultural Gap Wide One, Too

by MARILYN HEISER

It's a long way from South Korea to Chicago.

Not just in miles. The cultural gap between an Eastern and Western society is a wide one.

But Mimi and Charles Kim, who made the trek 4 1/2 years ago, are happy with their new country and its lifestyle.

They and their two sons, Edward, 4 1/2, and Mark, 3, just moved to Schaumburg, trading in their Chicago apartment for a home in the Timbercrest subdivision.

Commenting before yesterday's imposition of martial law in his homeland, Kim made some comparisons of political systems.

A model of the United States democratic system was imposed on Korea after World War II, Kim said, but it hasn't worked there. "I doubt if it ever will,"

he said.

THE DEMOCRATIC social system grew up in America and doesn't transplant successfully, Kim said. "This is a unique country. The civilization and values are so different in Korea. There's a fundamental philosophic conflict between the two countries," Kim said.

"The West is based on now. The Eastern philosophy is based on the future. You are trained to think things happening now are only a temporary situation and an insignificant segment in your life."

The Kims have opted for now, with a little bit of the Korean values mixed in. "Mark's the only American in the family," Kim said laughing. The other members of the family will apply for their citizenship as soon as they are eligible.

Naturalization rules require a five-year permanent residency, which the Kims established in 1970, and the passing of an exam.

Downey To Write Rep. Crane About Revenue Sharing Plan

"I'm going to write to my congressman," said Hoffman Estates Mayor Frederick Downey as he complained that Hoffman Estates and other Northwest suburbs are going to be gypped of thousands of dollars in federal revenue sharing receipts.

When congress passed the federal revenue sharing bill this month it called for distribution of approximately $30 billion over a five to six-year period, Downey said.

Hoffman Estates first year's share is $73,000.

"Each city, town or municipality's share is determined on a three point formula using population, local tax effort and economic level as factors," said Downey.

"Yet neighboring Elk Grove Village, with almost equal population and economic levels, is getting $137,000," said Downey. He explained that according to the federal government's figures, Elk Grove Village residents make a greater tax effort than Hoffman Estates does.

"That's ridiculous," said Downey. "We are being penalized because, like most of the Illinois suburbs, we are taxed by a lot of separate taxing bodies. In Hoffman Estates we pay to separate fire and library districts. However, the federal government only uses the municipal tax as its guideline. Elk Grove pays higher municipal tax as its guideline. Elk Grove pays higher municipal taxes because the fire department and library are village operated, and not separate taxing districts.

"So they are considered as making a greater local tax effort and get $137,000 as their first year's share," said Downey.

"Yet, when it comes down to basics we both are paying the same amount of taxes but ours are spread out," he said.

Downey also pointed out that Schaumburg, like Hoffman Estates, is rated to get $3 a person. "It's true they are at similar economic and population levels as Hoffman Estates. But considering they levy no municipal tax I wonder at how congress arrived at the same rate for our towns," said Downey.

Downey said his letter to U.S. Rep. Philip Crane (R) will ask for clarification of the formula and also if the congress made provisions to consider special census results.

'Sloppy' Canvass Irks Local Voters

Confusion continued yesterday throughout the Northwest suburbs about what was alternately called "overly aggressive" and "sloppy" techniques by election canvassers attempting to wipe the names of no-longer-eligible voters from the registration rolls.

The canvassers, it seems, challenged at least 4,000 eligible voters at the same time. Those voters have been barraging local village and township offices with their complaints.

Some 150,000 notices informing persons that their names will be stricken from registration lists unless they appear in the Chicago office of the Cook County Clerk's office were distributed late last week and early this week throughout suburban Cook County.

The distribution appeared not to be politically motivated, but was widespread in Democratic as well as Republican areas. Each notice was signed by a Democratic and a Republican Canvasser. CONFUSION AROSE as some suburban officials told irate callers that they must appear at the Cook County Clerk's office as of 9 p.m. yesterday in order to revalidate their voter registration, as indicated in the notices.

The election division of the clerk's office, however, has indicated a willingness to waive that requirement in most cases.

Federal laws that protect the right of persons to vote can be interpreted in such a way as to allow challenged voters who have not moved or changed names to sign the backs of the notices they received as an affidavit of their eligibility to vote, according to election supervisor Thomas King.

"Some people work or just can't make it to Chicago," he said. "We try to work something out. We're not here to take people arbitrarily off the rolls."

Signed notices mailed to the clerk's office should have been postmarked by 9 p.m. Tuesday, King said, but may be accepted later if the voter calls the clerk's office and explains the circumstances.

King estimated that some 4,000 of the 150,000 persons who received notices challenging their eligibility are duly registered and will be allowed to vote.

KING SAID THAT the election canvassers in each precinct, one Democrat and one Republican, are supposed to be reasonable certain that an individual no longer lives at the address at which he is registered before leaving a warning form, indicating his voter registration may be canceled.

The warning is to be followed by a post card. However, many residents said they never received a warning notice.

Des Plaines City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach attributed the widespread distribution of notices to "sloppy canvassing."

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nixon's chief Vietnam advisor, Henry Kissinger, met with North Vietnamese negotiators, in Paris then headed for Saigon to consult with South Vietnamese President Ngy Nguyen Van Thieu. The stepped up activity fueled speculation that progress was being made in the peace talks.

South Korean President Park Chung Hee proclaimed martial law in a surprise move he said was to protect the nation from unfavorable changes in the country.

At least four persons including two foreigners have been arrested by military authorities for involvement in an alleged Communist assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

The Nation

A squadron of 40 search planes flew through fog, wind, and rain along the southern Alaska coast seeking a missing plane carrying House Democratic leader Hale Boggs, Alaska's lone congressman and two other men.

Law enforcement sources in New York disclosed 100 policemen were among 677 persons with alleged mob involvement subpoenaed in what officials called the biggest crackdown on the Mafia in history.

Hoping that he has found an issue that Democrats will rally around, George McGovern stepped up his attacks against what he called Republican sabotage and subversion.

Soviet missile men have conducted their first long-term flight test of a beefed-up SS-11 intercontinental ballistic missile believed capable of carrying the Soviet Union's first U.S.-style multiple warhead.

The State

A 28-year-old Chicago man was arrested after a robber took a secretary hostage and was given $10,523 in a brown paper sack at the First Bank of Oak Park.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears charged that State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan has closed his eyes after the 1969 Black Panther police raid to everything but the police version of the case.

Gov. Richard Ogilvie said he will order a complete reassessment of property in Cook County if the county assessor does not make drastic changes in his operation next year.

The War

Communist troops believed working under a "plant the flag" directive called the "X-10" resolution" seized five Central Highlands hamlets and an artillery base, but South Vietnamese forces quickly recaptured one hamlet, and retook the artillery position.

The Market

Stock prices gained on the New York Stock Exchange as investors were encouraged by some favorable economic news and the possibility of progress in the Vietnam peace talks. The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 4.82 at 926.46. The price of an average share of common stock was increased 28 cents. Advances outnumbered declines, 813 to 574, almost 1,765 issues on the tape. Turnover amounted to 13,410,000 shares. Prices were mixed on the American Stock Exchange.

Barrington Girl Shooting

Youth Held In Slaying Case

Lake County sheriff's police said yesterday a 12-year-old juvenile had confessed to the Monday night slaying of Eileen M. Gallagher, 19, in her Barrington home.

Police declined comment on reports that the juvenile is a brother of the victim.

Det. Sgt. Fred Zeason, head of the sheriff's police investigation department, said that the youth was making a statement to Lake County State's Atty. Jack Hoogasian.

"We're treating it as a homicide," police said.

The apparent murder weapon, a .38-caliber pistol, was found in the master bedroom of the Gallagher home, where the body was discovered.

Miss Gallagher had been shot in the head between 3 and 7:15 p.m., according to police.

They theorized that Miss Gallagher had returned home from her part-time job at a Lake Zurich hotel, taken a shower and rested in her parents' bedroom while watching television.

POLICE SAID there had been no forcible sign of entry to the house, and nothing was reported missing.

The body was discovered after Mrs. Gallagher and three of her children, May, 17, Tom, 15, and John, 11, returned home from shopping.

The other Gallagher child, James, 12, was not home at the time.

The victim's father, out of town at the time of the slaying, is director of corporate advanced development engineering for Bell & Howell Co.

Bible Translators Group To Feature Liberia Tribesmen

The public is invited to hear and see two tribesmen from Liberia, West Africa, Joshua Flumo and Mulba Luther, when they appear at a complimentary dinner given by the Lutheran Bible Translators (LBT) Oct. 30, at 7 p.m. in the Holiday Inn, 3801 N. Mannheim Rd., Schiller Park.

The two men will speak and play their unique native instruments, the "country woodpile" as their handmade xylophone, is called, and a vine-string instrument referred to as the "belly harp." They are being accompanied by Lindsay Hubby, executive director of the Lutheran Bible Translators.

The two Kpelle men became Christians after Bible translators visited their tribe, devised an alphabet, taught the people to read and translated the Bible into the native tongue. Lutheran Bible Translators, based at Orange, California, is dedicated to helping reach 2,000 forgotten tribes of people of the world who are as yet without a single word of Scripture because their languages thus far remain unwritten.

In addition to the 12 men on the job for LBT in Liberia, they have teams of workers in 11 other countries. The members go out "on faith," raise their own support, serve as support personnel in various capacities such as teachers, medical workers, pilots, mechanics, etc., but the chief recruits are the language specialists and Bible translators. LBT works closely with the Jungle Aviation and Radio Service (JAARS), The Summer Institute of Linguistics (SIL), and Wycliffe Bible Translators (WBT), the latter being the real pioneers in the challenging task of language analysis and translation.

The dinner at the Holiday Inn is free, but reservations are necessary. Mrs. Albert Warnke, 1489 Van Buren Ave., Des Plaines, 60018, the Great Lakes Regional Director for LBT, is the reservations secretary. Write or phone her at 824-4309 for reservations before Oct. 27.

Case Closed On Alleged Break-In Of Dunne Files

The state's attorney's office has closed the file on an alleged break-in in 1968 of the files of then county commissioner George Dunne.

"The incident in question evidently did occur," First Asst. State's Atty. Jack Schmetterer said yesterday. "But the statute of limitations would bar any action on it," he said. The statute of limitations is 1½ years for a misdemeanor and three years for a felony.

The information concerning the incident has been turned over to the state's attorney's office by Thomas Flynn, Democratic candidate for the state senate from the 4th District.

Flynn reported at a press conference Monday that he received the information from John Lamb, a county building department employee and a witness to the incident. According to Lamb, the break-in was ordered by John Nimrod, Republican candidate for the senate in the 4th District.

Sticker Fee Dip No Boon: Trustee

A $1.50 drop in passenger vehicle sticker fees will give Hoffman Estates car owners more money for gas but will lighten the village pocketbook by $22,000.

Although the board of trustees Monday approved the lower fee, Trustee Edward Hennessy said the action gives a false impression that the cost of government in Hoffman Estates is going down.

He argues with Mayor Frederick Downey's statement that a decrease in cost of village government is reflected by the yearly drop in sticker fees. Two years ago, a sticker cost $10. The fee was lowered to $9 in 1971, and this drop brings the fee down to $7.50.

"This is a rose-colored look at reality,"

Hennessy said. "We are operating the village at lower costs because we know how to pull in our belts. However, the fact is it costs more today to provide the same services it did last year," he added.

"MAYBE WE know how to get along without some of the frills, but most of the time we have to find the money somewhere else or do without something when we take a loss of income like this sticker fee drop," he said.

Mayor Downey agreed prudent spending has helped the village meet expenses and still give taxpayers a break, but insisted the cost of village government was going down.

The fee break only applies to passenger cars and residents aged 65 or older, with rates for trucks and motorcycles remaining the same.

Those residents 65 or older, will be charged $2 for a vehicle sticker. The special discount for the elderly is limited to two vehicles to a household.

Truck stickers cost $12 to $28, according to weight classification. Motorcycle stickers are $7.50.

The 1973 oval green and white stickers will be available Dec. 1 in the clerk's offices of the building at 1200 Gannon Dr.

TRUSTEE WILLIAM Cowin, who proposed ordinance for passage. Cowin proposed to outlaw, by refusing to license and ticketing vehicles with rear suspension alterations that would lift it more than one inch above the manufacturer's set height.

The trustee said many Indiana municipalities have adopted such ordinances, and believes Hoffman Estates should.

Cowin said such alterations are dangerous, and Hoffman Estates should attempt to keep that type of vehicle off its streets. The board took no action on his recommendation.

Tollway Power Line Weighed

Construction of a Commonwealth Edison Co. power line along the Northwest Tollway within Hoffman Estates will be discussed at an 8 p.m. Thursday meeting in the Hoffman Estates municipal building, 1200 Gannon Dr.

Representatives of the utility want to explain what proposed construction in an easement owned by Northern Illinois Gas Co. along the tollway is all about, said Hoffman Estates Village Mgr. George Longmeyer.

The Edison Co. plans to put in a second power line from Elgin to its substation in the east portion of Hoffman Estates. The line will be in the Northern Illinois Gas Co. easement that abuts approximately 90 Hoffman Estates single-family lots on Rosedale, Parkview and Northview.

Longmeyer said he has sent letters to all homeowners involved regarding the meeting. There are no easement requests involved, but the utility wants people to know what the construction is all about, said Longmeyer. The line would provide supplementary power in case of a power failure.

Longmeyer added that all construction equipment will enter the area from within the tollway easement, but construction will involve use of heavy equipment.

UNICEF Greeting Cards On Sale

Local sales of a new collection of UNICEF greeting cards have begun, according to Mrs. Arthur Weinfeld, area coordinator of the program.

The annual fund raising effort benefits children in more than 100 countries through the United Nations Children's Fund.

The cards are designed in various sizes and are priced from $2 to $5 in boxes of 12.

Persons wishing to order the cards or volunteer to assist Mrs. Weinfeld in the program can contact her at 882-5115.

Local Leaders Help Open Fund Drive

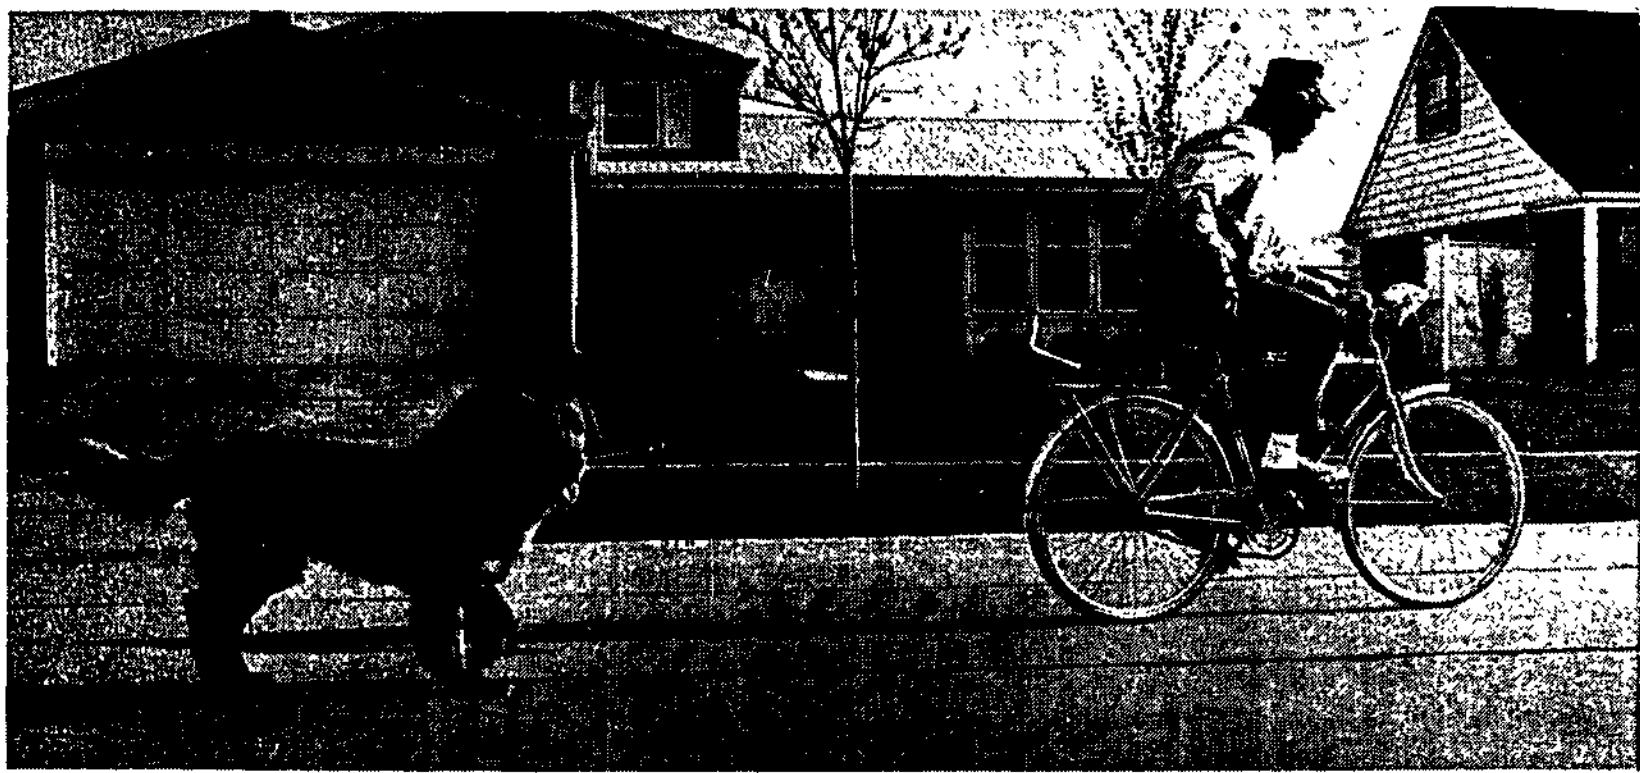

Local leaders of the 1972 Crusade of Mercy campaign joined with more than 1,500 Chicago area persons recently to open the massive fund-raising drive.

Michael Oh and John Sowa, board member and campaign chairman respectively, of the Schaumburg Township-Hanover Park United Fund, heard former Olympic champion Jesse Owens deliver the keynote address for the drive.

Oh and Sowa also met with Chicago radio personality Wally Phillips who was on hand to present awards to a number of firms who completed their fund-raising efforts before the drive actually got under way.

LWV Praised For Fund-Raising Effort

Cash contributions of $310 plus an additional $500 in pledges were collected in a 5-hour period yesterday by members of Schaumburg-Hoffman Area Provisional League of Women Voters.

At 3 p.m. yesterday, with less than half of the fund-raising team reporting, Mrs. Carol Johnson, drive chairman, said she anticipated total contributions for the day would come in close to the $2,000 goal.

At an early morning kick-off coffee, provisional league members were praised for undertaking their first fund-raising drive by Virginia Macdonald, a 3rd District GOP nominee for the Illinois House, and State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, a Democratic incumbent candidate.

Mrs. Macdonald predicted "because of rapid transition of mobility to the area," the local group may be destined to become one of the most important units in the total organization.

"LEAGUE HAS THE confidence of the voter, and while you cannot endorse candidates, you can and do endorse a much needed participation of citizens in government," she commented. She cited league efforts as invaluable to her as a 1970 state Constitutional Convention delegate. Not presently a league member, Mrs. Macdonald indicated plans to join the Arlington Heights chapter soon.

Mrs. Chapman, a league member and former finance chairman, noted she is aware of members' difficulty in going out to seek funds.

"But there is no organization more respected in Springfield, the state or the nation," she said. She encouraged members to continue efforts begun when the provisional group formed early this year. She also said she hoped many members would eventually become office-seekers.

Funds collected in the drive will be used to finance a "Know Your Town" study, a comprehensive history of both communities. Money also will provide voter service materials and enable the league to continue its work.

HOMEFINDERS REALTORS, the first major contributor, has promised to assist with the cost of publishing the "Know Your Town" study.

A mop-up committee will be working for several months to contact business prospects not reached this week.

Teen Board Member Pleased By His Appointment

Lester Hanneman III, an 18-year-old Harper College freshman from Hoffman Estates, is probably the youngest zoning board of appeals member in the state. He is positively the youngest person ever appointed to the Hoffman Estates Zoning Board of Appeals.

Hanneman a 1972 graduate of James B. Conant High School, said he first learned about the board's function as a senior at Conant High.

"The chairman of the plan commission and zoning board talked to us about their roles in village government, and invited anyone that was interested to take part," he said.

"Well, I'm interested as a resident of this village. I think it's time to take part in its affairs," said Hanneman.

"I'm pleased at the appointment. I never expected to be selected because I thought there would be so many applicants," Hanneman said. "I have a lot to learn about village government and decided to apply for the position, figuring it was the best way to learn about how a village works from the inside out."

Hanneman will sit in on his first meeting tonight in the council chambers.

"I had to squeeze in hours of reading past zoning board of appeals' minutes between my homework assignments to prepare for the session," he said.

His courses at Harper are preparing him for a career in medicine, said Hanneman.

"A part-time job at Sears in Woodfield Mall will help me pay my way through medical school," he added.

Mayor Frederick Downey appointed Hanneman to a 3-year term Monday to replace member Walter Ramsey, who resigned to move out of state.

Hanneman lives at 564 Chippendale Ct. with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hanneman Jr.

for permanent residency," Kim said. "We like America. In fact, I think of myself as American."

WHAT DO THE KIMS like most about the United States?

"The people," Mrs. Kim said. "And the customs, especially the freedoms for women."

Korea, they said, is a very traditional society, with conservative values, and rigid social restraints on individual thinking and behavior.

"Each lifestyle is individual here. In Korea, life is centered on the family, including many relatives," Kim said.

But the Kims also want to preserve their Korean background and values.

They belong to the Korean Cultural Center in Chicago, formed in 1959 by the original members of the Korean community here. There are perhaps 10,000 Koreans in Chicago now, most of whom came in the late 1960's when the immigration regulations relaxed, Kim said.

MRS. KIM RECENTLY received a letter of commendation from the prime minister of South Korea for her work in teaching her native language to second generation Korean children.

"It's one of Mimi's principles that our children should learn the traditional Korean values, respect for parents, friends, elders and teachers," Kim said.

They also speak Korean at home, so the children will know both English and Korean. "When they have finished high school we plan to send them to Korea for a year or two of education," Kim said.

Being bilingual was a problem for a while with the youngest child, Mark. "When he was very little, he used to get confused, and spoke in a mixture of Korean and English. He hears English from his friends and on television, and used to get pretty mixed up," Kim said.

Now both children know to speak Korean at home and English to everyone else, he said.

IN ADDITION TO preserving their language and values, the Kims try to celebrate Korean holidays. Mrs. Kim modeled the traditional Korean dress, a long skirt and wide-sleeved short jacket costume, which she wears on special occasions like the Korean New Year.

The biggest Korean holiday, Full Moon Day, is commemorated in Korea by visiting the graves of ancestors and preparing foods with harvest crops. Full Moon Day, Kim said, is like the American Thanksgiving.

"Mimi made some traditional cake, just to let the children know what day it was," Kim said.

The Kims came to Chicago as students at Roosevelt University. They were eligible for immigration under the professional category because both have college degrees.

Mrs. Kim received a bachelor's in education from Seoul National University, and Kim has a bachelor's in English studies from the Hankuk University of Foreign Studies, also in Seoul.

WHILE MRS. KIM DID NOT finish her studies at Roosevelt, Kim needs two courses to complete his master's degree in political science.

He worked in a travel bureau in Korea, and followed this interest in Chicago. Next month Kim will open his own company, Travel Advisors of America Inc.

"I specialize in commercial accounts, congresses, and exhibitions, encouraging American manufacturers to participate in foreign exhibitions. I'm also responsible for setting up programs of study abroad for Northwestern University, Northeastern College and the University of Chicago."

The Kims have not visited Korea since they moved to this country. "I miss my family and friends," Mrs. Kim said.

But they are enthusiastic supporters of the United States. "I try to look at the American social system very critically, and I have yet to find a better country," Kim said.

Draft Of Health Care Needs Study To Be Reviewed Soon

Review of the preliminary draft of a long-awaited feasibility study outlining the health care needs for Schaumburg Township is being planned for the last week of October.

The study, commissioned by the Northwest Cook County Health Needs study committee several months ago, is being conducted by the consulting firm of Ernst and Ernst.

The feasibility study and the work of the committee is being coordinated by the North Suburban Association for Health Resources (NSAHR).

A spokesman for Dr. Sheldon Waldstein, executive director of NSAHR, said the meeting is tentatively scheduled for Oct. 30, but that date is yet to be confirmed by other committee members.

Representatives from Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Northwest Community Hospital, Roselle and Hanover Park make up the committee.

The feasibility study was to have been completed last month, but delays in collecting data forced an extension of the completion date.

Local officials began the study to determine the need for hospital and related health care facilities in Schaumburg Township. A portion of the study is being financed by a state grant.

Democrats Still Looking For Home

A site for the new headquarters of the Regular Democratic Organization of Schaumburg Township has not been selected, John F. Morrissey, Schaumburg Township Democratic committeeman, said yesterday.

The organization was temporarily using a filling station at Golf and Higgins roads for its headquarters. The filling station is now being demolished to permit widening of the intersection.

"Until we find something financially feasible, we'll use somebody's house," Morrissey said.

He had no idea when the organization will find a new location, but said it was in the process of getting one.

Weekend Variety Show 'A Cabaret'

Schaumburg High School students will present their third annual variety show on the theme "Happiness is a Cabaret" this weekend.

The show will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the cafeteria. The program will include acts interwoven with music from the musical "Cabaret" and the nomination of cartoon character Charlie Brown for president.

Tickets for the show are $1 for adults and 50-cents for students.

The State's Attorney Race:

Edward V.
Hanrahan:

'... It's a tragedy, a disgrace and a shame that the people don't know the judges and what they are doing...'

Two warriors of the Cook County battles are squared off for the fight for control of one of the most sought-after legal posts in the nation. Battling for the job of Cook County State's Attorney are the controversial Edward V. Hanrahan and Republican challenger C. Bernard Carey, a former FBI agent, ran once before on a county ticket for sheriff. Hanrahan, after a chaotic primary campaign that placed him first on the outs, then with the dominant Democratic organization, now is the party's choice for a second term. Both candidates appeared at the Herald office before a panel of editors and writers.

C. Bernard
Carey:

'... The biggest thing we're fighting for today is greater respect for law enforcement...'

Stories By Roger Capettini

Edward V. Hanrahan:

Incumbent Says He Wants To Conduct A 'Positive Campaign, But They Won't Let Me'

"I'm no pussyfoot. I'm an outspoken, vigorous battler. I get excited about 11,000 armed robberies in the county in one year."

Edward V. Hanrahan got excited just talking about it. His blue eyes glaring, his face reddening, he reacted to the opinion of the Chicago Bar Association that he is "unqualified" to be reelected the state's attorney of Cook County.

Hanrahan sat behind a large desk in the Herald offices, his face molded into a constant frown around his piercing eyes. He seldom laughs, or even smiles. He doesn't find anything amusing about the crime situation in Cook County and he doesn't place much stock in the CBA's rating of his qualifications for reelection.

"The report doesn't question my ability, my integrity or my honesty," he said. "Just my temperament. I have to energetically combat crime. That's what I think the people want. I have to speak out and let the public know what's happening in the criminal justice system. It's astounding."

HANRAHAN finds it equally astounding that the group of lawyers found him

"unqualified," especially in view of the fact that the same organization found him "well qualified" when he ran for the post in 1968.

Since that endorsement, Hanrahan said, he has accomplished many things in the office — some of which had never been attempted by any of his predecessors.

He said 96 per cent of the youthful drug law violators completing his drug abuse program stay off narcotics — that they are not repeat offenders. He said he has produced a 92 per cent conviction rate, has reduced the felony court backlog by 50 per cent and has successfully prosecuted slum landlords.

In addition, Hanrahan said, he pointed to the in-service seminar program he instituted for both the police of the county and the assistants in the state's attorney's office.

"This has never been done before. A seminar this morning, one in a series for my assistants and the police on the new implied-consent law, is the 51st seminar we've held. Never before in the history of this office has so much in-service training been offered."

THE FIERY, 51-year-old prosecutor said he also has instituted a program to cut down on the number of improper search warrants that have hampered many police investigations in the past. "I've gotten Judge (John) Boyle to instruct the judges not to issue a search warrant until it is reviewed and approved by an assistant state's attorney," Hanrahan said.

In light of all that, Hanrahan asks, "How could I suddenly have become 'unqualified'?"

Continuing his criticism of the CBA, Hanrahan said, "The CBA has never spoken out on delays in trials and the leniency of judges. They don't do that, but you know who does."

Probably more so than any other candidate facing the voters of Cook County in November, Hanrahan has to spend most of his time, while campaigning, defending himself from an onslaught of criticism and accusations — mostly from his opponent, Bernard Carey. Hanrahan doesn't like to conduct his campaign that way — he says he would rather deal with the positive things he has accomplished — but recognizes the necessity of dealing with the charges.

When asked about Carey's statement that Hanrahan last year dropped 2,000 of the 5,000 outstanding felony indictments, Hanrahan grew angry again.

"That's a distortion in his campaign leaflet," he said. "It's a half-truth and a dishonest statement. It points out his lack of experience as a trial lawyer."

Hanrahan said last year his office dropped 1,400 indictments, but the great majority of them were stricken with leave to reinstate — because the defendant has jumped bail, has become incompetent temporarily or for other similar reasons. "We dropped 1,400, but we also reinstated 1,300 last year. This year we have dropped 1,002 so far, but we have reinstated 1,042. That's the part my opponent never mentions."

ANSWERING THE criticism that he frequently complains about judges, but never has taken any formal action against them, Hanrahan said the judges are exercising what is called their "judicial discretion," which cannot be regulated by the courts commission. "Practicing lawyers know that," Hanrahan said. "That only shows his (Carey's) painful ignorance."

Hanrahan lapsed into a slight grin when asked to compare his experience with that of his opponent. Quickly he rattled off the list of his career — private practice; five years as assistant corporation counsel for the City of Chicago; four years as special assistant, then first assistant Illinois attorney general; and four years as the U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois before becoming state's attorney in 1968.

"Carey has never argued a case or a motion in court. He's never even filed a brief. He's never practiced law — it's as simple as that," Hanrahan said.

Hanrahan said Carey also shows his lack of experience when he criticizes the state's attorney for not bringing the action against County Clerk Edward Barrett recently taken by the federal government.

"The poor kid," Hanrahan said of Carey. "He doesn't know anything about the law." He said the action against Barrett is an income tax matter. "I don't have access to the files of the Internal Revenue Service. If this kid (Carey) knew the law he'd know that."

BUT ALL is not negative in the Hanrahan campaign. He said he plans to continue his fight against crime the way he has battled it for the past four years. He plans to continue to speak out against the lenient judges, to bring it to the attention of the public, and to demand they get tough with gun law violators, and stop allowing criminals to commit "free crimes." Too often, Hanrahan feels, criminals are not punished for jumping bail or for violating probation.

"It's a tragedy, a disgrace and a shame that the people don't know the judges and what they are doing," Hanrahan said. "One judge in the Criminal Courts Building recently found 22 consecutive defendants not guilty after bench trials. That's impossible. But who is being cheated? The pity of it is — no one knows that is happening."

C. Bernard Carey:

Former Undersheriff, FBI Agent Criticizes Opponent's 'Double Standard' In Office

"The biggest thing we're fighting for today is greater respect for law enforcement."

C. Bernard Carey sits across the table, gently gripping the steaming cup of coffee with both hands. He is dressed impeccably. The blue in his shirt, suit and striped tie amplify the Cerulean tint of his eyes. At 37 years, Carey looks like a successful young lawyer.

That's just what he is.

But he wants to be the state's attorney of Cook County, and he says the way to achieve the proper respect for law enforcement is to vote for him instead of his opponent, incumbent Edward V. Hanrahan.

Carey, a resident of South Holland, is highly critical of Hanrahan and the way he has run the state's attorney's office for the past four years. He says he doesn't like to campaign that way, but Hanrahan forces him to — by making the statements Hanrahan has in recent months.

"He criticizes my lack of experience as a trial lawyer," Carey said, "but Hanrahan has never tried a criminal case himself. Neither one of us has long-standing experience as a trial lawyer, but 99 per cent of my experience has been in law enforcement."

CAREY HAS SERVED as undersheriff of Cook County for three years and five years as an FBI agent. In 1968 he became assistant director of public safety for the state and in 1970 was named assistant director of the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement, including the state fire marshal's office, the state police and the Illinois Bureau of Investigation.

Carey was defeated in 1970 by Richard Elrod in the race for sheriff, losing by six-tenths of 1 per cent of the vote, then was named special assistant to Atty. Gen. William J. Scott, leading the investigation of the estate of the late Paul Powell.

Carey points to Hanrahan's career as corporation counsel for the City of Chicago, his time in the state attorney general's office and then U.S. attorney before becoming state's attorney.

"In the attorney general's office he was involved with the industrial commission, not in the criminal justice system. He had no experience in criminal justice when he became U.S. attorney. And in that job he never tried a criminal case himself."

Carey said Hanrahan contends he tried the case against Sam Giancana, but says that is a false claim. "That case never even went to trial," Carey said.

THE CHALLENGER, for the top law enforcement job in the county said Hanrahan's actions and statements serve only to detract from respect for the entire law enforcement system.

High on Carey's list of reasons for criticizing Hanrahan is the incumbent's feud with judges. Carey said he is not familiar with all the judges and admits some of them may not be working in the best interests of society.

"But," he said, "Hanrahan has three avenues open to him to do something about the situation, if it exists. He can go to the Chicago Bar Association, the Illinois Judicial Review Board of the Illinois Courts Commission. Never in his four years in office, however, has he done anything about an individual judge. He's all talk and no action."

Carey said Hanrahan's term in office is characterized by a "double standard of justice."

Referring to the criminal charges against Hanrahan stemming from the fatal raid on the Black Panther apartment in December, 1969, Carey said Hanrahan previously refused to allow any defense attorneys to question grand jurors, but wanted to question them in his own case. "If he had been successful, he would have destroyed the grand jury system," Carey said.

"And while he screams about stalling by defense attorneys, he set a national record stalling in his own case."

CAREY SAID THE recent disclosure of vote fraud in the county is still further evidence of "Hanrahan's 'double standards.'" "For years vote fraud has been tolerated in Cook County, but Hanrahan has done nothing about it. The recent indictments were returned only after newspaper reporters gathered so much evidence he couldn't deny it."

Carey said Cook County has been plagued by an "open association of politicians and criminals. For years the precinct captain has been the pimp and the drug pusher with his arm around the police. And we are asking youngsters in these areas to have respect for law enforcement."

The examples of Hanrahan's double dealing in Carey's mind, go on and on. He said the suit filed recently by Hanrahan involving county money being placed in non-interest bearing accounts with politically connected banks "is geared to lose." Carey said if Hanrahan were really interested in enforcing the law he would have sued the county treasurer and the clerk of the Circuit Court instead of the banks. "But Hanrahan doesn't want to sue his own people," Carey said.

Continuing his criticism, Carey slammed Hanrahan's conviction rate. "The state's attorney's office drops 2,000 indictments a year. He gets too many headline indictments without the evidence needed to convict."

On gun violators, Carey almost agrees with his opponent. He said he is in favor of gun legislation, but accuses Hanrahan of oversimplifying the solutions. "He wants to get the people aroused, but does he want to get them so aroused they run around with pitchforks and guns?"

BUT CAREY'S campaign is not entirely devoted to criticizing Hanrahan. He said if he is elected he will bring civil service and a merit system to the office.

He said he will place assistant state's attorneys in high crime areas to prevent overcharges, undercharges and incorrect charges. He said he also plans to open storefront offices, staffed with assistants "indigenous to the area."

Carey said he will "point out the areas of waste in county government so the money can be reallocated to useful agencies."

But most of all, Carey said, he will work to improve the image of the law enforcement system in the county.

"The image today is that law enforcement exists to fight the people," Carey said. "Street terror is real, but the real tragedy is that the people would rather live with crime than cooperate with the existing law enforcement system because they know it is ineffective and they have no respect for it."

And, Carey maintains, Hanrahan's answer to the problem is to blame everyone else — the judges, press, defense attorneys, witnesses and victims alike.

"Everyone else is to blame," Carey said. "Everyone is out of step except Ed-

Just Politics

Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie has complained frequently that Dan Walker has distorted his positions and fabricated issues in the gubernatorial campaign.

Walker's camp now is charging the same tactic against the governor.

Walker aides have circulated copies of a flyer that they say Ogilvie supporters circulated at county fairs throughout Downstate, contending that Walker's fiscal proposals would spell the end for the fairs.

"THIS FAIR IS DOOMED," the flyers proclaim darkly. They go on to say that Dan Walker wants to abolish all earmarked funds and put the money in the General Revenue Fund. Signed by the Republican Central Committee of each county, the flyer says that could mean the end of the Agriculture Premium Fund, which supplies funds to the fairs.

It ends on a folksy note: "We want you to know about this, not just because we're Jo Daviess County Republicans, but because we're people concerned about the future of our fair. Maybe county fairs are too old-fashioned for a $110,000-a-year city slicker lawyer like Dan Walker. But not for us."

In its disclaimer, the Walker camp shows that it can be just as folksy as the Downstate Republicans: "Walker has the same position on special funds as Ogilvie — a position that has absolutely nothing to do with the future occurrence of county fairs, for gosh sakes."

At another point, they declare: "Walker is all for county fairs. He has never said one word against them. He has said several times that he enjoys them and supports them."

No hum.

A KEY WORKER in the Illinois Committee to Reelect the President has disassociated himself from the organization before of an overzealous attitude of some campaign organizers in seeking out labor support.

The campaign aide — who continues to work for President Nixon as a volunteer — quit when the committee heads insisted he go over the heads of local labor leaders to recruit their members for campaign chores.

Hired on as labor coordinator for the state, he had insisted from the beginning that Nixon's best strategy with labor was to simply neutralize as far as possible the traditional labor support for the Democrats.

With the enforced neutrality imposed by AFL-CIO president George Meany, that strategy appeared to be working to a remarkable degree, and a number of local officers were quietly passing the word that they favored Nixon.

Given an ultimatum that bodies were needed from the labor unions to staff campaign offices and perform other chores, however, the labor coordinator gave up his official status — and salary — rather than alienate those labor leaders who had listened to his pitch for Nixon.

214 Attend Athletic Day

More than 200 eighth-grade boys from the Northwest suburbs visited St. Vitor High School in Arlington Heights Saturday to take part in Athletic Day activities.

The students participated in swimming, football and basketball contests and met with students who play on St. Vitor teams. Members of the school's coaching staff were also present to help coordinate activities and to answer questions about St. Vitor's athletic programs.

Trophies were awarded to the first and second place winners in swimming, place kicking and free throw competitions. Mark Reusche of Arlington Heights took first place in the 50-yard freestyle and Kevin Carrier of Palatine placed second. Winners in place kicking were Mike Esenberg of Palatine and Gary Sobczak of Mount Prospect. Jeff Curtin of Hoffman Estates and Tom Conard of Mount Prospect won the trophies presented for the free throw contest. Bowling balls and bags were given as door prizes during the afternoon.

Kenneth Cook of Arlington Heights, whose son attends St. Vitor, served as chairman for the program. The 214 boys who participated attend several parochial and public elementary schools in 15 parishes throughout the Northwest suburbs.

Education Today

Teachers Should Take Look At Relative Value Of Degrees

During the course of the long bargaining sessions on the High School Dist. 211 teachers contract, there was one particular exchange that ought to be preserved for posterity.

In the last meeting or so before the school board and teachers reached agreement on the contract, the two sides became involved in some highly complex discussions on the salary index, which determines how much more experienced teachers make than beginners.

One teacher proposal called for a 15 per cent difference between beginning pay for a teacher with a bachelor's degree and beginning pay for a teacher with a master's degree.

Board Pres. Robert Creek, acting as spokesman for the board bargaining team, objected to the proposal saying, "I don't believe that a master's degree person with no experience is worth more than a person with a bachelor's degree and three years experience."

Creek, who is executive vice president of Union Oil Co., then went on to explain he had not found a master's degree necessary and doubted he would recommend one to a young man starting in business now.

FROM THE GASPS and mutters that came from the teachers who were assembled to watch the proceedings, it was clear that Creek had taken a poke at a sacred cow. Many members of the audience were upset because they were sure a master's degree was worth more than a bachelor's.

Creek, in fact, carried his position even further and in answer to a question said he doubted, in education, whether doctorate degrees are very valuable. Two of the district's three top administrators are doctors and they cast side-long glances at each other when he said that.

The question Creek raises, however, is a valid one, and one that increasing numbers of educators have started asking. How much, really, is "book-learning" worth in fields that do not require high levels of specialization.

IN RECENT YEARS, education has been increasingly measured in terms of degrees. First everyone needed a high school education to get a job. Soon, many jobs required a bachelor's degree, then a master's and so on.

But some fields, journalism and education are good examples, seem to need on-the-job experience rather than book-learning. My journalism professors, for example, discouraged students from getting master's degrees until they had at least five years experience working — they said there was nothing more to learn out of a book until then.

Educators are now trying to change — to make their classes have more relationship to the real world. In high schools vocational programs are being added and non-vocational courses are encouraged to use "outside resources" — jargon for using real people to talk about real things in classrooms.

Even so, attitudes are hard to change. Teachers who are doubtless perfectly willing to accept the trend toward getting high school students out into the business world as an educational experience, get upset when a school board member challenges the value of their own degrees.

SURELY A TEACHER who goes back to school after 5 or 10 years to catch up on new methods and theories should be rewarded, but Creek's question is whether beginners with advanced degrees are worth more than beginners with bachelor's degrees.

Maybe they are, but someone would have to prove it to me.

Which, come to think of it, might be worthwhile. It might pay teachers to think hard about the relative value of degrees. Everyone might learn something.

GOP Teens To Clean Windows For Nixon

Teenage Republicans (TARS) in Elk Grove Township will wash car windows Saturday at several shopping centers in the area. The TARS project is part of a nationwide program Saturday to show support for President Richard Nixon.

The teens will be accompanied by the Elk Grove Township Republican Women's Club. Members will distribute literature on drug abuse and President Nixon's plans to curb the drug problem.

Both activities are part of the National Federation of Women's Clubs fall project, "A Day for the President," in which local Republican women conduct community activities to support the President.

State Rep. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, a candidate for the 3rd District senate seat, will also be with the group.

Prospective participants in the project can call Mrs. Donald Sharp at 253-0247.

Report Belt Massager May Be Dangerous

Dear Dr. Lamb—My husband was told by his doctor to go on a low cholesterol diet for four months and then he would check him again. I know the foods to avoid like ice cream, gravy, chocolate, fried foods, etc., but I'm wondering about fruits when he is hungry (apples, oranges, and bananas, etc.) What about canned vegetables as long as they are packed in water. Can he drink beer?

Dear Reader—As far as cholesterol content is concerned, none of the vegetables or fruits or plants contain cholesterol. It's only animal products such as meats, dairy products, and eggs that contain cholesterol. There is no reason why your husband couldn't eat fruits and vegetables and no reason for the cholesterol or fat point of view why he couldn't drink beer.

Your doctor may have wanted your husband to go on a low fat low cholesterol diet since just limiting the cholesterol alone in the diet often won't accomplish so much. Such a diet would have to consist of fruits, vegetables, lean meats (like round steak with all the excess fat removed), fish, chicken and low fat or fortified skim milk, and if your husband needs to lose weight, he should avoid all high calorie foods, including concentrated sweets, and fat of any kind whether it is vegetable or animal.

Without controlling obesity most diet programs are doomed to failure in preventing fatty deposits in the arteries (atherosclerosis). A gradual fat reduction with continued prevention of obesity combined with a low fat, low cholesterol diet seems to work best.

The most commonly eaten food high in cholesterol is the egg yolk. One yolk contains about 250 milligrams. A three and one half ounce (raw) serving of lean beef contains only 70 milligrams.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I am quite concerned

College Entrance Tests Are Slated

The registration and testing dates for college entrance examinations have been set by High School Dist. 214.

For the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) students must register by Oct. 26 for the Dec. 2 test date; by Dec. 7 for the Jan. 13 test date; by Jan. 26 for the March 13 test date and by March 1 for the April 7 test date.

For the American College Testing Program (ACT), students must register by Nov. 13 for the Dec. 9 test; by Jan. 29 for the Feb. 24 test; by April 3 for the April 28 test and by June 25 for the July 21 test.

Juniors who are interested in applying for the Illinois State Scholarships must take the ACT on either April 28 or July 21.

One or both of the tests is required for admission to most colleges and for financial aid. Further information may be obtained from Dist. 214 high schools.

with a skin condition I contracted after taking birth control pills for two years. My face became quite blotched and although I have been off the pill now for two years the pregnancy mask which the doctor said would lighten up and disappear has failed to do so and my face is still vividly marked. What can I do or take to correct this disfiguring condition?

Dear Reader—I am afraid that there isn't anything you can take. This complexion problem is the same that affects some women during pregnancy and is exactly the same as the pregnancy mask that you referred to. It is an increase in the normal pigmentation produced by the skin. In a sense the spots are giant freckles. What you're up against then is the same question as how to remove freckles. Staying out of the sun will probably help. If you're exposed to the sun, and depending on the distribution of the spots, you may be able to cover the individual spots with any form of sun screen while not covering the rest of the skin. This will help to even the tanning of the skin and may be of some benefit. I wish I could be more encouraging, but unfortunately, that's nature. They do tend to diminish or go away in the course of time in most women who have this problem after they quit taking the birth control pill or after pregnancy.

Questions? Address Dr. Lawrence Lamb, Paddock Publication, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

A Sears belt massager may present a dangerous electrical shock hazard, according to John P. Maloney, manager of Sears, Roebuck and Co's Schaumburg store.

In Maloney's warning, he identified the hazardous model as a multi-speed belt massager with a pushbutton lighted switch. It can be further identified by a 449.29110 model number on a plate located on the underside of the unit's motor housing.

Approximately 11,000 units of this model were sold between December of 1969, and Oct. 4, 1972, when the merchandise was taken off the market.

TESTS INDICATE the possibility that some of these massagers can cause serious shock if someone touches the unit while touching a water pipe, radiator, faucet, or other ground connection, Maloney said.

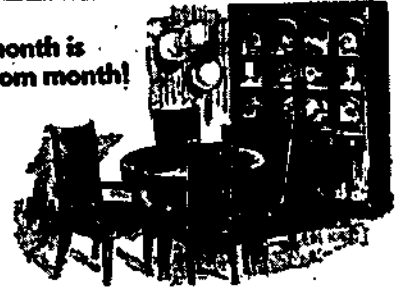

He emphasized the model with a lighted switch is the only one being recalled, and that there is no problem with any other model.

Customers who have purchased a massager since 1969 are urged to unplug the unit and verify its model number. Maloney said the nearest Sears store should be notified if the unit has the number 449.29110.

The unit, sold both in the catalog and in retail stores, should not be reconnected until it has been inspected and modified. Sears will service the unit in a customer's home without charge.

Harper Needs More Classrooms

Harper College is suffering a space squeeze and needs help to get through it.

The college this fall turned away more than 1,000 students who wanted to take vocational classes at the school. The classes that were over-loaded with applicants ranged from nursing to air-conditioning maintenance.

The number turned away clearly shows that there are needs in the community that the college is not meeting and cannot meet because of lack of physical facilities. The school does not have enough specialized classrooms for vocational programs.

Construction is now underway on a new science wing that will relieve some of the crowding. The school has also built, entirely with local funds, a building that will also be used to house vocational programs.

However, officials at the school say they need help from the state to build a special vocational education building, the next on their list of priorities. Ordinarily, the state provides 75 per cent of the funds for building and the local colleges provide 25 per cent.

We believe the state should move quickly on Harper's request for the vocational education building. The need is clear and the Illinois Junior College Board should realize how much help is needed and how quickly.

Even if the state approves the new building today, however, Harper is still going to be in a space squeeze and will have trouble filling the needs of the community while construction is underway.

For this reason, we hope the school's administration will direct all its efforts to finding space for vocational programs in local schools, businesses and office buildings.

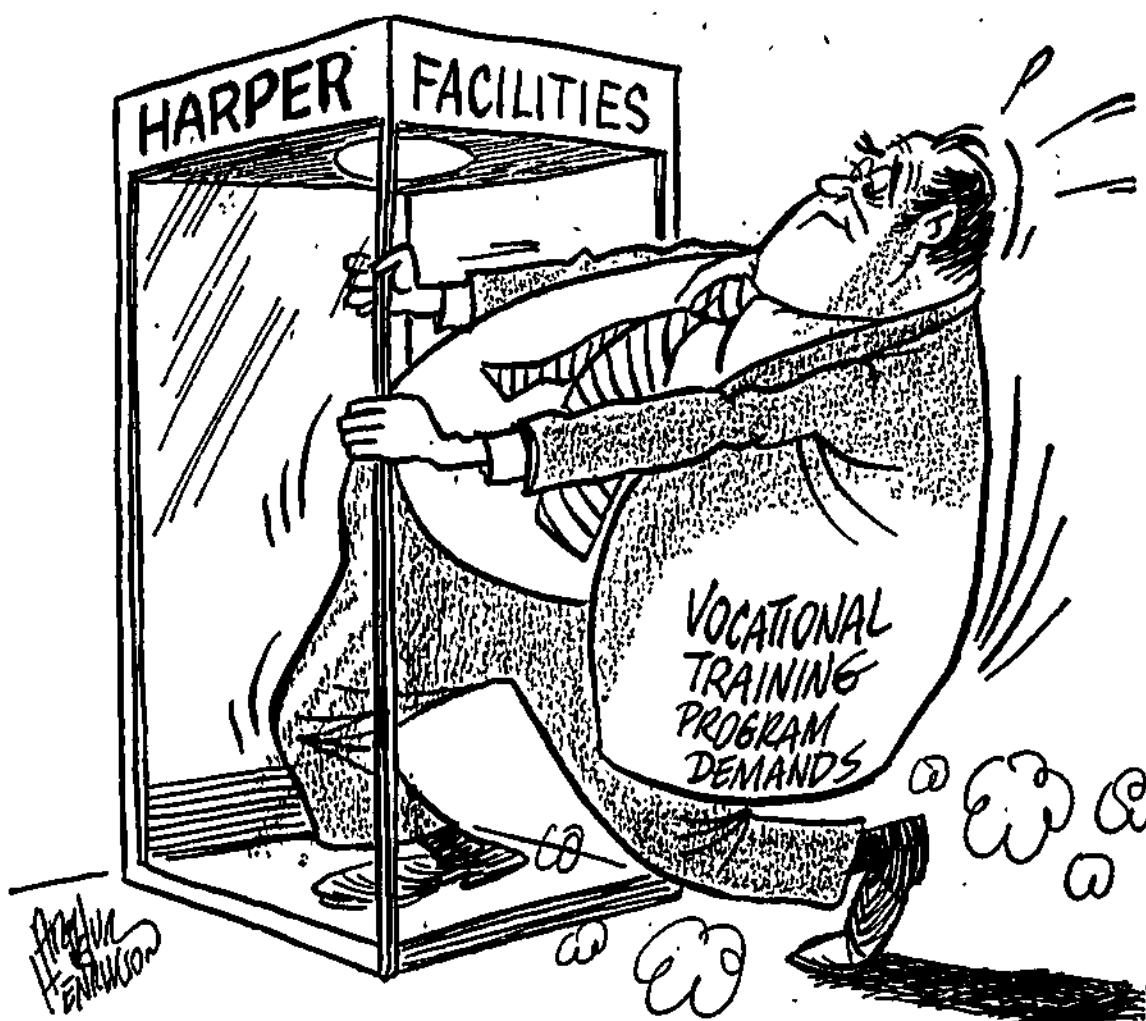

One of the problems Harper officials point to in moving their classes off their own campus is that rents in local buildings are often prohibitively high. For this reason, we also urge local businessmen and officials of other taxing bodies to cooperate to the fullest to provide space for the programs.

Local industry, for example, may be able to make space and equipment available for some training programs. Park districts and schools might also make space available.

In short, Harper officials don't do something. We hope they will be able to continue to work with need to wait for the state before the local community to find innovative ways to provide for the students who should be served by the community college.

Eventually, the answer probably will be to build more buildings with state help. But the students being deprived of vocational education can't wait for "eventually." If all concerned work together, perhaps provision can be made to serve more students now.

Fence Post Letters To The Editor

Pennies - Not Sweets - This Time

With the season of "spooks and spirits" soon upon us, I have a suggestion for a new and different "treat" to be given out to "tricksters."

Give each child a few pennies in place of candy or other sweets.

Perhaps this doesn't sound like much fun for the kiddies, but the reasoning behind my suggestion is beneficial to parents and children both.

Bags of candy cost 2 cents to 3 cents per piece — I'd just as soon see the children buy themselves a toy or a book.

— Elimination of the threat of your child bringing home unwrapped candy or treats that are harmful to them in some way.

— Less risk of causing tooth decay — who needs to have dental bills.

— The children get so much candy on Halloween, fill themselves up on junk, and parents have a difficult time getting them to eat nutritious meals.

— Almost everyone saves up pennies — one good way to get rid of them without the bother of counting and rolling them up.

I realize this suggestion of giving out pennies on Halloween won't go over big with candy companies, but I know my dentist will be very pleased.

Come on, dads and moms, when you go to reach for those bags of Halloween candy, think twice. After all, the kids you save may be your own. Happy Halloween.

Public's Issue SPECIAL

Percy: 'I Stress The Issues'

This week it's Charles Percy's turn to answer the "Public's Issue" question, "What are the issues in the 1972 general election — especially in terms of the suburbs."

Last week Democrat Roman Pucinski, who's struggling to unseat Percy as U. S. Senator, gave us a 1,000 word answer to the question.

First elected to the Senate in 1966, Percy had run unsuccessfully for Illinois governor two years before. Prior to that, Percy, who is 52, had been a top executive at Bell and Howell in Chicago.

His column has been edited somewhat to bring it close to the 1,000-word limit.

TAXES

During my six years in the Senate, we have been able to reduce federal income taxes three times. One of our highest priorities in the next Congress should be the enactment of significant property tax reforms.

Under legislation I introduced this month, the federal government would pay half the cost of state programs designed to provide property tax relief for low-income homeowners and renters.

The most graphic examples of why such reform is needed are found in Cook County. Five race tracks in Cook County are taxed at an average of 3 per cent of their market value. Homes in the same area and suburban counties are taxed at 25 per cent or more. Local governments derive 85 per cent of their revenues from such property taxes, and they ought to be as equitable as possible.

Low-income elderly Americans would benefit most from this legislation. Their incomes never rise at the same pace as the cost of living, and often, they are in danger of losing their homes because they cannot afford escalating property taxes.

DRUGS

A month ago the House Select Committee on Crime commissioned a survey of drug use in two Chicago high schools and one suburban high school. The survey revealed that one out of every four high school students say they have taken barbiturates, three out of every 50 have taken heroin.

I believe that no bill I have introduced and steered through the Senate into law holds more potential value for the nation than the Drug Abuse Office and Treatment Act of 1972.

—It established a Special Action Office

Tomorrow . . .

EDITORIAL: Over-the-counter drug manufacturers should be testing their drugs for safety.

Sen.
Charles H.
Percy

for Drug Abuse Prevention in the White House.

—It authorized $600 million in grants to state and to public and private agencies for treatment and rehabilitation purposes.

—It provided, for the first time, a national strategy for all drug programs involving the federal government.

When we consider that better than 50 per cent of all street crimes and a very high proportion of crimes committed in suburban homes are directly or indirectly related to drug usage, we get some idea as to how this problem touches virtually every community in America.

THE ELDERLY

The elderly are the most cruelly neglected minority in America. One out of every four Americans over 65 now lives on an income under the poverty level. They are the only group of Americans who are actually growing more impoverished each year.

I have devoted more of my time to solving the problems of the elderly than on any other single domestic issue in the past six years. I have introduced a 12-point legislative program to alleviate the problems of older Americans — the most comprehensive such program ever introduced in the Congress. The program would:

—Upgrade nursing home standards.
—Provide better transportation services for the elderly.

—Extend Medicare to cover prescription drugs.

—Create an office of Assistant Secretary for Housing for the elderly.

—Create a mid-career training program for middle-aged and older workers.

—Extend tax relief to persons over 65. With the exception of one, each of these proposals — or a modified version — has either passed the Senate or become law.

Much more needs to be done. We have succeeded in raising the amount of money an elderly American can earn before he begins to lose his social security benefits. That is not enough. We need to eliminate the earnings limitation altogether. We need to vest pensions earlier and guarantee the portability of accrued benefits. We need to end the unwarranted delays and bungling faced by those making Medicare claims. We need to enact significant property tax reform.

CONSUMER PROTECTION

Household goods play a part in 20 million injuries and 30,000 deaths each year in America. For that reason I co-sponsored the Consumer Product Safety Act of 1972. The Act called for the creation of a regulatory commission with the power to issue standards for household goods and to ban hazardous products. It passed the Congress last week.

The consumer's best interest, however, demands more. We need an independent Consumer Protection Agency to advocate the consumer interest before all federal agencies and federal, state and local courts. The Consumer Protection Organization Act of 1972, which I sponsored in the Senate, would have created such an Agency. A filibuster by a minority of Senators, however, killed the bill for this year.

During the battle, a story emerged that demonstrates the continuing need for the agency. Since 1968, the manufacturers of several brands of baby cribs have been told by experts that the spaces between the bars of their cribs are wide enough to allow a baby to squeeze his body through but not his head. Each year about 200 babies strangle themselves trying to get out of their cribs, many of them in this way. But that brand of crib, and others with the same hazard, are still on the market even though the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) holds the power to remove them.

Throughout the Consumer Protection Agency fight I recalled this tale of horror. The week before last I mentioned it in an interview on the NBC-TV Today Show. That morning the very able commissioner of the FDA called my office

'Respected Man'

This week, a very special friend of mine passed away. He's Al Kehe, a lifelong resident of the northwest suburbs.

While Al was a dedicated Republican, he was respected and admired by all.

Al was a perfectionist, a hard worker and intolerant of those who didn't give their last full measure to their work. He took pride in what he did and loved dealing with people. I haven't met the person who had an unkind word about Al and who wasn't inspired or awed by him.

I'll miss Al Kehe — as I know many, many others will. My solace and comfort is the fact that I'm a better person because of him.

Sex Ed Letter Hit

Many people, I would suspect, are likely embarrassed for Mr. Joseph Rosenberger of Buffalo Grove, whose letter in the Fence Post (October 12) suggests that increasing sexual permissiveness is somehow the key to better mental health. Quite apart from the inanity of his thesis (and his patent ignorance of the positive emphasis Catholic education today places upon the sexual aspect of man's nature), Mr. Rosenberger's tirade against the religiously-based moral values of many of his neighbors is a deplorable exercise in bad taste.

It is a mark of the maturity of a community that its residents respect the religious convictions of one another, and in that regard Buffalo Grove is truly a fine place to live. Friendships easily and often cross religious lines, and inter-faith cooperation is frequently evidenced. Few people, fortunately, share Mr. Rosenberger's predilection for attacking the traditional moral teachings of any particular religious faith; and few also, I would hope, are so devoid of charitable sentiment that they would fail to sympathize with Mr. Rosenberger's own peculiar problem — whatever it may be.

Nixon's Dilemma

According to Stephen Hess, one-time White House aide to President Nixon, if his former employer reduces international tensions to the point where foreign policy fades as an election issue, he will increase the possibility of his defeat in November.

That most paradoxical of American presidents could be faced with his final paradox: The more successful he is at international crisis management, the less likely is foreign policy to dominate the campaign; the less foreign policy dominates the campaign, the more likely is he to be defeated.

Writing in the fall issue of Foreign Policy magazine, Hess notes that foreign policy was dominant in four of the last five presidential campaigns. Significantly, the 1960 election, which Richard Nixon lost to John F. Kennedy, was the only one since 1952 in which foreign policy did not play the dominant role.

But though foreign policy issues have been dominant in most recent elections, Hess cautions that they have not necessarily been decisive.

In each election since 1952, he says, "foreign policy as an issue boiled down to who was most apt to get or keep us out of war." American actions on issues of great importance, such as Bangladesh or the world monetary situation, "may affect almost no votes at all."

This is because the public is so poorly informed in this area, says Hess, because so much information is classified and complex and particularly because "the purpose of an election campaign in the American political tradition is not to arrive at the Truth, but to win."

Strange Values

A recent issue of ECO, a Washington-based, anti-atomic energy publication devoted to turning the clock back to before 1945, printed a list of 35 nuclear "power projects" that are "dead, denied, delayed, destroyed, demolished or discharged."

Included in the 35 were the atomic submarines Thresher and Scorpion, both of which went down at sea.

It so happens that 228 lives were lost in these two tragedies, which is about 228 more deaths than have ever been caused by the operation of the nuclear power plants that allegedly pose such a threat to human welfare.

"We hope to be able to report many more," says ECO of its list.

Business Today

by LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Federal Occupational Safety and Health Act hit American industry a year ago with an impact almost like that of a hurricane or a severe epidemic.

The law affects an estimated 72 million workers in thousands of companies. The appropriation for enforcing it this year is $64.4 million, which means at least 110,000 businesses will have been inspected by the year's end.

The OSHA inspector arrives without notice. He sweeps and seeps through the plant like the fast rising waters of a flooded creek, interrupting production and office procedures, taking pictures, sound recordings, air and water samples, measuring space, illumination, temperature and humidity and testing for electrical and chemical perils, and many more safety and health hazards.

And he may keep this up for a whole week:

On departing, he is likely to hand the plant manager a sheaf of citations, each leading to a fine and calling for immediate and frequently expensive remedial steps.

"More than 75 per cent of the plants so far inspected have received citations," says L. P. Sands of Fred S. James & Co., a Chicago national risk management company.

NOTHING QUITE like OSHA has happened before in the whole history of American business. Compared to OSHA, state safety law enforcement is a picnic.

But for one group of companies, OSHA has a silver lining. They are in the safety equipment or safety systems business and OSHA is creating a burgeoning market for them that should grow rapidly although the big bulge in sales has not yet developed because of confusion.

Alan Densen, president of Eastco Industrial Safety Corp. of Whitehouse, N.Y., says OSHA in time will turn an industry composed of hundreds of small firms with a gross volume that can't exceed $50 million a year into one with a potential annual volume of $1 billion.

Sands says "all kinds of products being sold to industry now are being advertised as important to complying with OSHA standards and many businessmen just don't know how to evaluate the claims."

Densen says OSHA already is leading to expansion on the part of safety equipment makers and inevitably will tempt many companies to merge so they can swallow up bigger shares of the growing market.

THE EXPANSION trend is definite. For example, American Safety Equipment Co. of Encino, Calif., hitherto known in the safety business mainly as a maker of automobile safety belts, now has bought Kinsafe, Inc., a maker of eye protection glasses and protective industrial clothing.

Although Congress recently voted to exempt businesses with fewer than 15 workers from the sudden OSHA inspections, these small firms still must comply with the law. If an employee, a union or a safety-conscious, concerned citizen files a complaint against one of these small firms, OSHA will crack down.

As applied so far, the new law means in effect the new safety and health hazard requirements must be met promptly regardless of cost. If they are not met, the fines can be stiff enough to close some businesses. However, the stiffest single OSHA fine so far reported publicly was $10,000, levied against American Shipbuilding Co. of Lorain, Ohio, after a fire that cost the lives of four workers. The company allowed workers aboard the stricken ore carrier Roger Blough without proper testing for flammable vapors, OSHA said.

THE LAW naturally hits different industries and individual companies in various ways.

A Salt Lake City renter of construction machinery told United Press International OSHA had turned his machines into criminals "and I'm a criminal for owning them." A number of his older machines can't meet OSHA standards, particularly the noise level requirements.

Many companies have been ordered to put stronger and more complete wire or steel cages around motor drive chains or dangerous machines. One chemical plant was cited for not having a roof-mounted steel safety catch tank even though the minutes of a board meeting showed $60,000 had been recently appropriated for that.

The law assesses mandatory fines of $1,000 for any serious violations and an employer who fails to correct the condition within the prescribed time can be fined $1,000 a day until it is corrected. Maximum penalties for dangerous and willful violations are $10,000 plus six months in jail for the person responsible.

Finally, the law protects the boss as well as the hired help. A New York servicing company was fined $800 because its president ventured on a job in a client's premises without protective clothing and without carrying a device to measure high voltage electrical discharge.

ICC Hearings To Resume Dec. 7

Utility Ads Coming Under Scrutiny

by LEA TONKIN

Public utilities have a hard time winning friends and influencing people. So they buy advertising space and time to tell their story in the hopes of gaining new friends or revenues. Now, for the first time, this practice is being closely scrutinized in Illinois.

The Illinois Commerce Commission held its first hearing on public utility ads in Chicago last week. This exploratory session brought out a host of lawyers for the utility companies and representatives of organizations willing to act as intervenors in the hearings. The next session is slated for Dec. 7 in Chicago.

Calling for the hearings earlier this fall, ICC chairman David H. Armstrong said, "because of an energy shortage and economic pressures, the subject of public utility advertising practices and expenditures has been before regulatory agencies and courts with increasing frequency." The hearings agency plans to determine if such ads are reasonable or justified.

ILLINOIS BELL Telephone Co., among the utilities criticized at the first hearing, plans to present testimony on the rightness of its ad practices. "Illinois Bell Telephone Co.'s reasons for advertising are not secret," a phone company spokesman said.

"In 1971, Illinois Bell spent only 39 cents out of each $100 of revenue in order to tell its customers how to make the best possible use of the very complicated system we operate for them, and also to convince them that it would be to their own best interest to use more of our service," the spokesman said.

Illinois Bell and Commonwealth Edison were the targets of Independent Voters of Illinois (IVI) witnesses at the recent hearing. The IVI called for elimination of all "image-building" advertising by the utilities as well as public relations expenditures.

Melvin Lewis, an attorney who testified on behalf of the IVI, said, "First, we feel that not all advertising is bad and that a distinction has to be made between one utility and another." He said the classic function of advertising, that of increasing sales or revenues, is justified.

"BUT WHEN you get to things such as one electric company telling about its concern for the total environment or a demonstration by Art Linkletter that one child can dial a telephone number faster than another because of the use of push-button, this has an anesthetizing effect." This type of advertising immunizes utilities from criticism by the media and the public, said Lewis.

"It tends literally to stifle intelligent and fair discussion of the practices of utilities," Lewis continued. Users of gas, electric and telephone service in Cook County pay $11.50 a year for utility advertising costs, he added.

Another critic of Commonwealth ad practices is the Citizens for a Better Environment organization. A spokesman for the group will testify at the December hearing, focusing primarily on the electric company, said director of research Duane Lindstrom. "Our position is that we are opposed to advertising that would lead to the depletion of natural resources," he said. "We are strongly opposed to advertising which contributes to the electric company's image." Promoting the most efficient use of services conservation or most efficient use of services would be a justifiable type of advertising, he said.

Commonwealth Edison advertising expenditures have remained fairly stable at approximately the $3 million mark, for the last several years. During this period, the cost of advertising space has risen significantly, said the company's director of advertising Donald Petkus.

This represents three-tenths of one per cent of Commonwealth Edison's annual revenues, he said, "somewhere in the middle" when compared with the percentage spent by other electric utilities.

"ANOTHER THING is that advertising does have an effect on our rates," he continued. "Advertising tends to keep the cost of service down." The company's peak power demand is experienced for a short interval in the summer months, he said. In off-peak periods, advertising boosts the consumption of electric power for heating and night lighting.

Advertising electric services to the user comprises half of the Commonwealth Edison promotional effort. The other half is made up of "communications" advertisements, said Petkus. Referring to the publicity gained by critics of the utility, he said, "I sincerely feel that the only means of communicating we have in some instances is through advertising space. We don't call it image building," he said. "It's communications."

Included in this program are the Prairie Path ads, to be discontinued shortly. "We used them as a sort of defensive measure," said Petkus. Upcoming communications ads will focus on the importance of electric power in the economy.

"Probably the best insurance bargain of your lifetime" is a strong statement, but that's what it is — the new dividend option that has just become available to holders of converted (permanent) "G.I. life insurance."

Veterans holding these policies can now use their dividends to buy paid-up additional insurance, each year increasing the face amount of the policy. With $1 worth of dividend buying as much as $2.50 of additional insurance — paid up for the rest of your lifetime — it has to be one of the best investments of this or any other year.

The new option applies to both whole life policies and endowment policies — the two choices veterans had when it was possible to convert to permanent policies the term insurance that covered G.I.s during active-service years.

THE AMOUNT of additional paid-up insurance your dividend dollars will purchase depends on your age. It varies from $25.77 (per $10 of dividends) at age 45 to $17.57 at age 60.

As an example of how good an insurance, he adds $242 to the amount of his Kilroy, carrying a $10,000 whole life National Service Life Insurance policy, pays an annual premium of $197.60. This year his dividend was $128.40.

By using it to buy paid-up insurance, he adds $242 to the amount of his death benefit. For comparison, if he put his dividend money into a savings account paying 5 per cent, compounded annually, it would take 13 years for the account to grow to $242.

Joe probably will live that long, and longer — according to the mortality tables — but maybe he'll be one of the 13 in every thousand who'll die this year, at his age. If he wants to make sure that his family gets that $242, he'll invest in the additional insurance.

And to make the bargain even better, this extra insurance will have its own cash value (Joe can borrow against it, if necessary), and will also be eligible for dividends.

THE VETERANS Administration says that any dividends will be small, at the beginning, because of the small amounts of insurance involved. Nevertheless, the N.S.L.I. policies have proved to be generous dividend payers, and the ultimate cost of Joe's insurance will undoubtedly make it the bargain of a lifetime.

Since the new option has just become available, many vets with N.S.L.I. policies will already have received their 1972 dividend. But they needn't wait until next year to start adding to their insurance.

Write the V.A. center that maintains your insurance records and ask what the amount of your 1972 dividend was. When you get the answer, send it back along with a check for the amount of your dividend, and you'll immediately own the proportionate amount of additional paid-up insurance.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI)—E. F. Hutton & Co., Inc. suggests the good third-quarter earnings reports were either expected, or are being temporarily overlooked by a market beset by many publicized fears of what may befall the economic scene in 1973. "But we also have found that those predictions are most numerous and get the most publicity close to turnaround points and they become conspicuously absent when the market reverses direction," the firm says.

The Dow has spent most of the past four weeks fluctuating between 965.05 and 927.15, notes Abraham & Co. Inc. Technical and fundamental factors, however, could lend strength to a recovery capable of carrying the Dow to a daily close well above 965 and foreshadow a relatively unimpeded advance to new 1972 DJI highs above 980. "An eventual further advance toward or into the Dow 1050-1100 range should become a reasonable intermediate-term expectancy," the firm says.

Renewed hopes for peace in Vietnam bolstered a sagging stock market recently, reports TPO Inc. However, the firm cautions investors "to conserve funds for a more opportune climate." Despite the relative strength of the blue chips, most stocks continued to decline.

Could Challenge Governor

Special Session Is Unique

by ROBERT KIECKHEFER
SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The special legislative session called by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie for Nov. 28 will be unique in Illinois history and could imperil any legislation passed by the general session scheduled to begin at the same time, according to some Capitol observers.

Ogilvie called the special session Monday to consider freezing real estate taxes in the state and to earmark most of the state's portion of federal revenue sharing funds for schools.

However, he scheduled the special session for the same day the legislature was due back for its regular session, "this is one way the governor can ensure that they will legislate on the matters which I have just recited."

At the time, Ogilvie's office said, "It has not been uncommon in Illinois to have one or more special sessions in progress during regular sessions." A check of record books, however, disclosed there has never been such a combined special and general session, nor has there been legal precedent or ruling for it. Historians confirmed those records.

"MAYBE WHAT HE was thinking of," one legislator said, "was back in the 1800s when several special sessions were running at the same time. But I don't recall anytime we have had a special session at the same time as a general session."

The unique situation could present problems because of constitutional language Ogilvie himself pointed out.

"This approach will establish the exclusive legislative attention which is constitutionally required by the call of a special session — a concentration which is entirely warranted for this vital, complex and timely issue," the governor said in a statement accompanying the proclamation.

The 1970 state Constitution, as did the 1870 document, specifies that the General Assembly in special session may consider only the matters contained in the call to that session.

The constitution does not, however, say specifically whether the legislature can, in a phrase used by the governor's staff "Switch back and forth" from general to special session.

The closest the governor's office could come to a legal opinion on the point was a 1837 Illinois Supreme Court case which held the governor could legally create as many simultaneous special sessions as he wished.

But that case did not touch on the key issue of whether a special session must be ended before business of a general session can be considered.

"A suit could be filed and the Supreme Court could have a field day with it," one legislator, also an attorney, said.

"There might be a suit," William Hanley, Ogilvie's legislative aide, said. "But I do not think there are grounds here for a successful hearing." He cited the 1837 case as precedent, even though it did not involve a general session.

Perhaps the most likely challenge would be to a law passed by the general session during the time general and special sessions were "switching back and forth." It was just such a set of circumstances which prompted the 1837 case.

COMPOUNDING THE issue is the fact that Ogilvie called the special session for 5:30 p.m., a half hour before the regular session was scheduled to begin. That means the legislators will not have a chance to conduct other business before the special session call pre-empts their attention.

Further, Ogilvie did not have to call a special session to conduct the business he outlined Monday. The general session would have had authority to pass new bills and could have considered his program without the emphasis of the special session proclamation.

Ogilvie said one reason he issued the proclamation was, "I wanted to put the legislature on notice ... so they could make appropriate plans to be there. There'll be many lame-duck legislators that I want to be sure that we're going to have their cooperation and I believe we will."

But he denied Democratic charges the call was politically motivated and designed to generate favorable publicity.

"Of course, anything that I do at this time less than a month before the election, including the time I get up in the morning and what time I go to bed, can be interpreted as political," Ogilvie said.

Some Support, Question Freeze

by TOM LAUE
SPRINGFIELD (UPI)—Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a real estate tax freeze and reform of school financing has brought backing from a political foe and a hint of indifference from a top-ranking GOP lawmaker.

Clyde Choate, House minority leader from downstate Anna, Monday joined other Democrats in chastising Ogilvie for "political opportune timing" but added, "I voted for a real estate tax freeze in the spring and if Ogilvie's tax freeze proposal is essentially the same, I'm going to support it."

Choate said taxpayers are so perturbed by rising taxes they're ready to revolt. "They are not interested in who sponsors a bill."

Meanwhile, House Majority Leader

Henry Hyde of Chicago gave Ogilvie the official backing expected from a party loyalist but hinted his commitment to tax reform in what is supposed to be a short fall session is less than total.

"I THINK THIS is worth the effort because taxes are the number one issue in Illinois," Hyde said. "But if we falter and can't do this job then the new legislature can pick up in January where we left off."

President pro tem Cecil Partee of Chicago, Democratic leader in the Senate, had harsh words for the governor.

"Considering he is up for reelection in a few days, I think Ogilvie's announcement smacks of opportunism and politics," Partee said. "Is the governor's sudden concern for the taxpayers genuine or is it just a genuine concern for his own political hide?"

Partee said only the timing of Ogilvie's announcement is new.

"But because of our consistent record for tax relief, including our stand on school aid, we Democrats will give his belated proposal serious consideration," he said.

Support from Chicago Democrats was all but absent in the House last spring when Rep. C. L. McCormick, R-Vienna, tried to freeze real estate taxes.

EXPECTED RAVES came from House Speaker W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest. Standing foursquare behind the Ogilvie tax record, Blair promised his "full support in attempting to implement this latest program."

Likewise, GOP leaders in the Senate praised Ogilvie and promised to line up Republican votes there.

"The governor's proposal is a solid, workable response to the outrage and frustration of the citizens of this state who have experienced heavy increases in their tax bills," said Assistant Minority Leader Terrell Clarke of Western Springs.

"I feel confident Republican members of the Senate will support this proposal and thus end the rising tax spiral," said Clarke in a statement issued jointly with ailing Minority Leader W. Russell Arrington of Evanston.

Arrington said it's a "historic day for our federal system when a state governor can promise local taxpayers that they will no longer have to face those seemingly endless increases in their taxes."

Self Service

by Ed Landwehr

There's a little red button on the back of your TV set that could save you a service call. It's a circuit-breaker that releases when there's an overload. If the condition is temporary, you can restore normal operation just by pushing it back in.

Before pushing it back in, be sure to turn the set off. Then try your TV again. If the circuit continues to break, you need service. This is where we bring in the commercial — Landwehr's Home Appliances is prompt on home calls. Just phone 255-0700. We'll assure you satisfaction.

Gov. Ogilvie To Review Assessments

CHICAGO (UPI) Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie yesterday spoke of "a systematic pattern of corruption" in threatening drastic action to eliminate inequities in the proceedings of the office of the Cook County assessor.

Ogilvie also told of his plans for an office of assessment practice standards to review assessment practices in each assessment district in Illinois.

The remarks were prepared for another of the series of debates between Ogilvie and his Democratic opponent, Daniel J. Walker.

"The integrity of the assessment determines what share of the local tax burden each taxpayer must pay," the governor said. "If assessments are not uniform — if they are weighted to favor one person or one group — then some taxpayers are paying more than they should — while others are getting a free ride. And that is exactly what has been happening in Cook County," he said.

Ogilvie noted the series of indictments of employees in the assessor's office and said, "Each is further testimony to a systematic pattern of corruption which lines the pockets of the politicians."

Ogilvie's remarks followed the release of a report on assessment procedures by Richard Kissel, special assistant to the director of local government affairs. Kissel was appointed last April by Ogilvie to examine assessment procedures. Kissel is scheduled to hold public hearings on the report in November.

Schaumburg Girl Is Ski Queen

Residents of three area communities walked away with all the honors recently in the annual Chicago Metropolitan Ski Club Ski Queen contest.

Diana Monaco of Schaumburg was crowned Ski Queen for 1973. Miss Monaco is a graduate of the University of Colorado and is currently working as a stewardess for TWA.

First runner up in the contest was Jon Neroy of Mount Prospect. Second runner up was Mary Jeanne Lee of Hoffman Estates.

The three young women will reign over the International Ski Show at Arlington Park Oct. 28-29.

DEPENDENT PEOPLE. Mike Meehan and Chris Brunet, social therapists at Forest Hospital Postgraduate Center, physically demonstrate the extreme dependency that can exist in a marriage. Participants in the Marriage Effectiveness Training (MET) program offered by Forest explore their dependency, needs and relationship and are helped to find new ways of relating.

HUGGING CAN BE meaningful or superficial. Mike and Chris are physically close but, their thoughts and feelings are elsewhere. MET attempts to put meaning back in closeness.

A Course For Marrieds

Quest For Connubial Zest

by DOROTHY OLIVER

What do you do when your marriage has lost its fire? You're not in the market for a divorce or freedom or another spouse — you're just not very enthusiastic with things as they are.

What do you do with that chronic, burdensome fault that keeps your marriage just that far from being perfectly happy. Your husband doesn't beat you; your wife isn't entertaining all the men in the neighborhood. You just wish he'd pay more attention to the kids; you just wish she wouldn't throw things at you when she gets mad.

"About 75 per cent of the everyday old marriages fail," said Bill Garrity, social therapist at Forest Hospital Postgraduate Center, Des Plaines. "Many of those that don't end in divorce fail anyway in that they are dull and boring."

"Mr. and Mrs. Average Married Couple may not be having any overt marital conflicts, but they may be living in a marriage that has lost its zest."

Rather than "learning to live with it" four average suburban couples, ranging in age from their 30s to their 50s, opted to "learn to change it" and signed up for Marriage Effectiveness Training through the Postgraduate Center. They were participants in the pilot program of the course created by Garrity and Dr. Robert Willford, director of the Center.

"Marriage Effectiveness Training (MET) is not designed to solve severe marriage problems. It is not treatment," Garrity said. "It is taking you from where you're at in your marriage and making it better for you."

THE PROGRAM BREAKS down into two portions: communication analysis and role function analysis. Participants take a look at their behaviors in terms of how they are relating to one another. They are then taught new and more functional ways of living.

Simple exercises that mirror the way two people relate to each other in their everyday life give group leaders a chance to evaluate "where they are at" before attempting to broaden their ability to communicate.

"We introduce as many ways of communicating as we can," Garrity said. "We use a lot of ideas we've borrowed from many resources; they are concepts that work. During each session the group leaders will present a concept to the couple. They show them how it works. In order to learn it the couples experience it — act it out."

MR. AND MRS. JONES, a typical couple, holler at each other a lot. They want a marriage where no fighting occurs.

"They would find out in MET that fighting is a productive behavior — almost a prerequisite to intimacy and closeness," said Garrity. "They also find out there are rules to fighting. By learning to fight in a functional way they can have good, productive fights where both feel good afterwards. Both get what they need out of the fight; it brings them closer together, rather than pushing them farther apart. MET might not eliminate their hollering, but it will show them a way to holler without having to destroy the other person."

During role function analysis the couples explore what they do, what they are, what are their needs, how they make decisions, how they perform their functions. They review the old, unwritten, often unspoken contract that has existed during their marriage: What do we expect from each other? What do we want from each other?

AFTER THE OLD is reviewed, a new, spoken contract is formed. This contract is based on openness, non-dependency, trust, independence and flexible rather than fixed roles.

MR. AND MRS. SMITH, a typical couple, have fallen into a rut, a routine. They are finding that their expressions to one another — sexual as well as others — are bland. They have been living in the same roles practically since the day they were married and both are rather bored with it all.

"AFTER TALKING about what they are, the Smiths could learn how to become more flexible in their roles," said Garrity. "They would experiment with new behaviors, learn to do new things together, find new ways of relating."

"WE ALL HAVE alternative ways of doing things," he continued. "For example if a person wants something, he can beg, bargain, argue, cajole, com-

Adult Education Programs Stress Better Living Through Self-Growth

Marriage Effectiveness Training is only one of a number of adult education programs being offered by Forest Hospital Postgraduate Center this fall. This is the first time the Postgraduate Center has formally designed an adult education curriculum, according to Dr. Robert Willford, director.

The Sunday Seminar Series will begin Oct. 29 and continue every Sunday evening through March 25. Dr. Willford, social therapists from the Postgraduate Center and staff psychiatrists from Forest will lead the lecture/discussion sessions.

The Oct. 29 program, "Myths of Mental Health," will explore many of the misunderstandings and myths that keep people from enjoying maximum mental health. Other topics that will be introduced during the series include "The Language of the Body," "Active Listening: A New Language for Parents," "The Uses and Abuses of Discipline," "The Myths of Marriage," "Family Communications," "What's in My Dreams?" and "On Being a Woman."

PERSONAL AWARENESS courses center around the spontaneous discovery and awareness of one's own self through experiential learning. Classes will be limited to 10 members to insure individual participation and will be led by the social therapist staff of the Postgraduate Center.

Courses run for five or eight weeks and include Gestalt: Applied to Dreams and Fantasy I and II; Psychodrama; Experiential I and II; Transactional Analysis Experiential; and Self Growth Through Sensitivity Training Experiential. Courses begin Oct. 31, Nov. 1, and Nov. 2.

Parent Effectiveness Training (PET), designed to help parents relate and act with greater effectiveness towards their children, will begin Nov. 1, Dec. 27 and Feb. 21. During the eight three-hour sessions parents will be taught skills used by professional people such as powers and control in the family, skills in communication and problem solving.

After the eight-week PET course, parents may sign up for the three-part PET Integrative. Parents will have the opportunity to integrate the PET subject matter into daily behavior and learn other communication systems. Their children take part in constructive mental health activities while the parents are in their sessions.

CLASSES ARE UNDER the direct supervision of Michael Meehan, a licensed PET instructor on the Postgraduate Center staff.

Normal, healthy adolescents who wish to learn and experience more about self-awareness, communication and relationships, may sign up for Adolescent Living Courses. The purpose of the classes is to help develop and enhance in each participant a greater willingness to negotiate for what he or she needs, and more honesty, consideration and openness in their relationships with family and friends. Classes will be held Wednesdays, from 6-8 p.m.

PEER (People Exploring and Expanding their Resources) Groups For Women will focus on "what it means to be a woman" and provide a supportive and intimate environment where women can share their thoughts and feelings about such areas as self-image, goal direction and marriage.

LED BY FEMALE MEMBERS of the postgraduate center staff, the courses will include "The History of Growing Up Female," "Being a Woman Here and Now" and "Future for Women." PEER Groups will begin meeting Nov. 16.

A Professional Leadership Series is designed to give and enhance therapeutic skills for experienced group leaders and therapists. Only experienced professionals and paraprofessionals will be considered for admission.

The courses will be taught by some of the leaders in the field of Humanistic Psychology. Course offerings include Group Process; Encounter; Fundamental Transactional Analysis; Fundamental Gestalt: Theory and Practice; Advanced Gestalt Therapy; and Psychodrama I and II. Most courses begin the first week in November.

The Postgraduate Center is a nonprofit corporation that serves as the community education and professional training arm of Forest Hospital. The Center's purpose is to provide the general public with an extensive education in mental health concepts and growth experience.

For more complete information on the Adult Education Programs interested persons may call 827-8811, ext. 175 or write for a catalog. The address is 555 Wilson Lane, Des Plaines, Ill. 60018. All courses will be held at Forest Hospital.

PARENT, ADULT AND CHILD are the three parts of one's personality as explained in transactional analysis. David Breaugh, Mike and Chris. Acting out typical human behavior is an important part of MET.

Next On The Agenda

ARLINGTON NEWCOMERS
Arlington Heights Newcomers will hold their October meeting tonight at 8 at Thomas Junior High School, Arlington Heights Road at Thomas.

The theme for the evening is "Come Fly with Us." Dorothy Ball of United Airlines will speak and show films of Disneyland, Las Vegas and New York.

Anyone who has lived in the Arlington area for less than 18 months is welcome. Further details about the group can be obtained from Mrs. Dale Kilgore, 253-2536. Mrs. James Holdridge, 259-6870, is in charge of transportation.

NORTHWEST SUBURBAN PARENTS OF DIABETIC CHILDREN

Northwest Suburban Parents of Diabetic Children will meet Thursday at the Chippewa Junior High School, one block east of Wolf Road and one block north of Golf Road, Des Plaines, at 7:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Robert Kulikowski of the Ames Company who will present a film, "In Diabetes What You Don't Know Can Hurt You," and a urinary analysis workshop, explaining the urine testing methods and materials.

Northwest Suburban Parents of Diabetic Children is one of eight branches of the Diabetes Association of Greater Chicago. They meet the third Thursdays of October, January, February, March and May. Meetings are open to everyone interested in diabetes.

For more information readers may contact Mrs. Henry Weardahl, 902 Quince Lane, Mount Prospect, or Mrs. Raymond Wilgen, 510 W. Sigwalt St., Arlington Heights.

NORTH SUBURBAN HEIH

The president of the Illinois Home Economics Association, Dr. Mary Ruth Swope, will be guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of North Suburban Economists in Homemaking at noon Saturday in the Glenview Country House, Waukegan Road. She will discuss the scope of IHEA and what it is trying to accomplish.

Reservations are being taken by Doris Steuber, 255-3689.

Card Sales Aid Handicapped

Members of the Suburban Townships Association for the Retarded, formerly Clearbrook Community Association, are again selling Christmas cards and novelty items. Proceeds from this year's project will be used to help the mentally handicapped in the northwest suburbs.

Christmas card albums and novelty samples are available from any of nine area chairmen. In addition, cards and novelties are on display in the development office of Clearbrook Center, 3301 W. Campbell Ave., Rolling Meadows.

AREA CHAIRMEN are: north Arlington Heights, Mrs. John Dodge, 392-7633; south Arlington Heights, Mrs. Herbert Merrick, 392-3338; Palatine and Rolling Meadows, Mrs. John Marshall, 358-4480; Mount Prospect, Mrs. Pat McCloskey, 437-1415; Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, Mrs. Edward Chromy, 537-8629.

Also, Schaumburg, Mrs. Scott Lundal, 529-2394; Elk Grove, Mrs. Walter McFarland, 392-2893; and Des Plaines, Mrs. Frank Dina, 967-7367.

Craig Radditz of Palatine, president of the youth organization affiliated with STAR, is the high school chairman.

TWO OF THE AREA chairmen selling Christmas cards and novelty items for Suburban Townships Association for the Retarded (STAR) are Mrs. Walter McFarland, Arlington Heights, and Mrs. Scott Lundal, Schaumburg. Nine area chairmen have 15 albums of holiday cards and 100 novelties to show those interested.

Visitors From Other Lands Entertained In Area Homes

Many first-time visitors to America are surprised to learn that Americans are warm and friendly, according to members of the International Visitors Center. The visitors also believe that being entertained in homes of Americans is the greatest way to know America.

In the past two years area membership in the Center has increased from two to twenty, and in recent months members have entertained more than 30 visitors, including 18 of the 30 members on the International Marketing Institute Tour.

Recent Arlington Heights hosts have included Mr. and Mrs. B. White who had dinner guests from Moscow and Nigeria; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Strubbe, dinner guests from Pakistan and Tanzania, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cagann, a family from Saudi Arabia as dinner guests; Mr. and Mrs. Horace McNell, dinner guests from Kenya, teachers from the African-American Institute; and Mr. and Mrs. D. Selken, dinner guests from Moscow and Romania.

RECENT PALATINE hosts have been the Robert Elstads with a dinner guest from Swaziland and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Hausler, who entertained guests from Kenya at dinner. The Hauslers' guests were also teachers from the African-American Institute.

Overnight guests from England have stayed in the Arlington Heights homes of Mrs. Penelope Delih, Mrs. Carl Zehner and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jenkins; the Mount Prospect home of Mrs. Harriet Forton; and the Roselle home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Daugherty. Several other IVC members are also expecting overnight guests from England. Anyone interested in helping the Center by entertaining foreign guests may call Mrs. Selken at 392-6339.

Host 3-Day Meeting

The Chicago area chapter of Ninety-Nines, International Association of Women Pilots will be host to women pilots from a nine-state area Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 20-22. The occasion is the fall sectional meeting to be held at the Clayton House Motel, Palwaukee Airport, Wheeling.

The 3-day meeting will include business sessions, a tour of United Air Lines' maintenance hangar at O'Hare, a cocktail party, banquet and a fly-away breakfast.

Interested women may call Pam Stowell, Arlington Heights, 593-5637, for further information.

It's Fashion

by United Press International

Use accessories to vary the looks for the classics running through fall and winter fashion collections. Pearls, neat pumps, streamlined bags, all can be a part of the scene.

Hats for fall shape up with big, floppy berets, rolled-back Sou'wester brims, small floppy brims and shallow fedoras. The tight-looking cloche is another look. Lots of bright colors, plaids and prints go to the head.

The bodysuits are more plentiful than ever on the fall scene. The suits come in all the ready-to-wear blouse and sweater styles, in all kinds of patterns, plaids, checks, geometrics. Some have contrasting dummies, scarves or detachable sleeves. Pantyhose match bodywear is the same striking patterns take to more subtle, casual looks. The two-color effect in pantyhose is new. And what shows up for evening? "Sexy" seams on black stockings.

Belts go straight and narrow for fall. The chain belts hang on, with bicycle chain looks. Suede is the important leather. Watch also for continued interest in buckles, handcrafted and hardware looking.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

These are the days when the youngsters come home from school looking for the cookie jar before they dash off to play. So here's a recipe for delicate, old-fashioned sugar cookies that not only will keep the young ones happy but that you can also serve if you have adult guests.

Mix well 1 cup each of margarine and sugar, 2 eggs and 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Then add 2½ cups of flour, 1 teaspoon cream of tartar and 1 teaspoon of baking soda. Blend both mixtures together well and chill the dough for about an hour. Then form into balls and flatten with a glass dipped in flour (dip the glass in the flour for each cookie). Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 10 to 15 minutes — or until the cookies are a delicate brown. You'll rate this one high in your cookie recipe collection.

Dear Dorothy: I'm a great one on buying meats that are graded. However, I have run across meat that has no inspection stamps on it at all. How come? —Carol Helstein

Meat that has come across interstate lines must have the federal marking on it. I have seen butchers cut off these markings but have never understood why. Certainly the "choice" mark is nothing to be ashamed of.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 220, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Bridget Gallagher

Nancy J. Haaspoja's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Haaspoja of Mount Prospect, are announcing her engagement and approaching marriage to Alan J. Harju, son of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Harju of Wakefield, Mich.

Nancy graduated from Prospect High School and Western Illinois University. She is now employed by the Special Education District of McHenry County. Alan is a graduate of Northern Michigan University and works for Schaffer Spring Co., Elk Grove Village.

A Dec. 2 wedding is planned.

A Dec. 9 wedding in the Lutheran Church of the Good Shepherd, Prospect Heights, is planned by an area couple.

The bride-to-be is Joan Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. K. Allen of Arlington Heights. Her fiancé is Tony J. Stavros, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Stavros of Wheeling.

Joan is a '71 graduate of Hersey High School and works for Jewel Food Stores. Tony, a '69 graduate of Wheeling High, is a water operator for the village of Wheeling.

A couple who met at Western Illinois University, Bridget Gallagher of Mount Prospect and Charles W. Klocke of Rock Falls, Ill., are engaged and planning to be married next June 16.

The announcement comes from Bridget's parents, the James C. Gallaghers of 16 S. WaPella. She is a '70 graduate of Sacred Heart of Mary High School and now works as a dental assistant for an orthodontist in Mount Prospect. Her fiancé, son of the Francis Klockes, is with Northwestern Steel & Wire Co. in Sterling, Ill.

Cupid Rides A School Bus

It was while riding the school bus two years ago that Debbie Shock met Leone Ferrin, and last month the pair were married in St. Vincent Ferrer Church, River Forest. Both Debbie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald A. Larson, 918 Bradford Lane, Schaumburg, and Leone, son of former Hoffman Estates residents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Ferrin, Mosinee, Wis., are graduates of Conant High School, Debbie in 1970 and Leone in 1971.

Debbie also studied two years at Harper College and is now with United Air Lines, Elk Grove Village. Leone is employed locally as a carpenter, and the couple makes their home in a Hoffman Estates apartment.

The pair's 1:30 p.m., double ring wedding service Sept. 24 was followed by a reception for 140 guests in the William Tell Restaurant, North Avenue, after which the newlyweds left on a week's honeymoon in Honolulu.

For her wedding Debbie chose a white chiffon gown over satin with 12-inch ruffle at the hem. The gown featured short train, sheer sleeves with lace and chiffon trim at the neckline, the Empire waist, the wrists and above the ruffle. She carried pink roses, and white stephanotis and baby's breath.

LUCY CHIDESTER, Wendell, Idaho, was Debbie's maid of honor, and Donna Baumann and Linda Long, Hoffman Estates, and Mariann Ferrin, Mosinee, sister-in-law, were bridesmaids.

Mr. and Mrs. Leone Ferrin

The girls were in rose pink gowns with ruffles and ivory lace at the hemline. Straw hats and nosegays of pink roses and pink poms with streamers completed the old fashioned look of their ensembles.

Marc Ferrin, brother of the groom, Mosinee, was best man, and ushers were Joe Hanley, Cincinnati, Gilendo Ferrin, also a brother of the groom, Mosinee, David Shock, brother of the bride from Schaumburg, and Richard Morris Jr.

A Woman On The Board

by KAY MARSH

According to a recent survey, members of the boards of directors of 48 "most successful U.S. industrial companies" spend an average of 11.3 hours a month at the job, and are most apt to be residents of New York.

The survey doesn't say so, but directors are also overwhelmingly apt to be male. Which brings us to my friend Gladys, the last person you'd pick to join a revolution. An attractive widow in her early sixties, Gladys knows her Guccis and her Puccis (if that's how you spell them) and drives a bright red car she calls her "gaudy Audi." The coupons she clips come, not from grocery ads, but from bearer bonds. And if she ever carries a sign in a protest march, you can bet she'll wear spotless white gloves. Yet Gladys, too, is a dues-paying, card-carrying member of what has been called our "adversary culture."

GLADYS, YOU SEE, has a cause. She believes that women should have more say-so in how American businesses are run. Specifically, she thinks there should be more women on corporate boards of directors. There are, she read somewhere, some 32.5 million shareholders in these United States, and more than half of the individual shareholders are women.

She also thinks that women deserve a voice because of their buying power and because they have special contributions to make in determining the standards under which business must operate to improve the quality of life. That's why Gladys pays close attention to what she calls a company's W/B ratio (for Women on the Board). And that's why Gladys, every time she has to send in a proxy or mail anything to the companies in which she owns stock, makes it a point to add a little note. "Why," she always asks, "don't we have a woman on our board of directors?"

SHE GETS ANSWERS: very polite letters, beautifully typed. All but one that she's received have been addressed to "Ms." And all but one have been signed with what Gladys judges to be a masculine name. (That one was from Mobil Oil, which says it "has no bias for or against the appointment of a woman to the board.")

Nobody says "no" to the idea. Standard Oil of New Jersey assures her that women "will be considered along with other qualified candidates." Northern Illinois Gas says "It is very possible that we will have one in the future." And CPC promises to "consider the qualifications of women who are available . . . as we have in the past."

Women have, of course, been directors in the past. (One of the earliest, born in 1830, was Sarah Gibson Humphreys, the first woman in the U.S. voted to the board of directors of a public road.) Today, an ever-growing number of corporations have women directors: IBM, CBS, Chase Manhattan, Consolidated Edison and the Washington Post, to name just a few. Oveta Culp Hobby has been a director of General Foods since 1968. But Gerber, the baby food company, elected its first woman member of the board this July. (She is Dr. Dena C. Cederquist, professor of nutrition, Michigan State University.) Just this year, too, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. named its first woman director (Dr. Roberta F. Fenlon, president of the California Medical Association).

GLADYS DOES NOT credit her letters for such progress. But she thinks they help. And she's encouraged that the subject now comes up at most annual meetings. In his June letter to shareholders, for instance, the president of Norfolk and Western Railway said that he was asked why a woman was not on the NW Board. "That's a good question," he replied, adding that "some day a woman may well be elected to directorship."

Helping "some" day come sooner is the Federation of Women Shareholders in American Business, Inc., headed by Mrs. Wilma Soss. Among other activities, the Federation attempts to nominate (and elect) women for directors. Such a proposal was presented at this year's General Motors stockholders meeting but overwhelmingly defeated.

Yet on Oct. 1, General Motors did elect its first woman director: Catherine B. Cleary, president of the First Wisconsin Trust Company of Milwaukee.

Now that the country's biggest manufacturer has a woman director, Gladys feels that more and more corporations are sure to follow suit. She, however, is taking no chances. And her advice to you is: if you own a single share of stock, keep those cards and letters coming, folks, and tell your company how you feel. Electing women to corporate boards may represent just one small step for womankind, but it's one that could well benefit us all.

A HEART-SHAPED wreath will mark the door of Mrs. Robert Corbett's home for tonight's candle party sponsored by Alpha Omicron Pi. Mrs. Corbett, right, appreciates the help of Mrs. Thomas Munson and Mrs. Michael Zawacke. Mrs. Munson will be hostess at a candle party Thursday evening. Parties will also be held in Palatine, Des Plaines and Park Ridge with proceeds going to local charities and the sorority's national philanthropy, the National Arthritis Foundation.

AOPi Sorority Begins Candle Parties Tonight

Lighting the way to a bright holiday season, members of Alpha Omicron Pi Northwest Suburban Alumnae chapter will hostess candle parties beginning at 8 p.m. tonight at the home of Mrs. Robert Corbett, 806 Lynden, Arlington Heights. Mrs. Jack Clark will serve as co-hostess.

The candles, from the Paragon Division of the Lenox Co., will include fall and Christmas centerpieces, as well as a variety of single tapers. Prices will be below retail cost and range from $1 to $5, according to Mrs. Michael Zawacke, AOPi's ways and means chairman.

Proceeds from the parties will be used to benefit AOPi's local charities and the national sorority's philanthropy — The National Arthritis Foundation. Special ball point pens, designed for arthritis, will also be on sale at each of the parties.

Candle rings and other types of candle holders will also be displayed. Each guest will receive a small decorative favor made by an alumnae.

ANOTHER PARTY will be held Thursday in Arlington Heights at 8 p.m. at Mrs. Thomas Munson's home, 1311 W. Park, and Mrs. Ted Dickson will be co-hostess.

Crocker Coupons Buy Yule Gifts

St. Gerard's Guild of St. Thomas of Villanova Church, Palatine, collects Betty Crocker coupons which members redeem for Christmas gifts for the mentally retarded at Dixon State School. The coupons are worth 1/2 cent each and in the last five years the guild has collected 102,451 coupons worth $513.

"The children who are able to go home for the holidays if they have family or friends. This leaves the 'loneliest of the lonely' at the school. Most of them are forgotten, abandoned or orphaned and they look forward to a small gift from us at Christmas," said Mrs. Robert J. Maruska, who collects the coupons.

The guild urges all homemakers to save and mail the Betty Crocker coupons to Mrs. Maruska, 1128 E. Patten Drive, Palatine before Dec. 5.

'Wait Until Dark' Fails To Live Up To Billing

by PAT ADAM

I've now seen two area community theater productions of "Wait Until Dark," and neither has lived up to its advance billing as suspenseful melodrama.

In the Village Theatre production of the Frederick Knott play, which opened last Friday night at Prospect High School, Sue Ruotnik does a fairly creditable job of playing the blond heroine, Susy Hendrix, but the three villains in the cast fail to put enough believability into their roles. Daryl Schultz, George Corral and Ed Westfall simply aren't menacing enough.

Perhaps part of the difficulty is that they really are nice suburban fellows and because "Wait Until Dark" de- upon character development than plot to depict the danger in which Susy finds herself, the audience never really feels the threat until the final moments of the play.

From the beginning the audience knows the three thugs who enter the blind girl's Greenwich Village apartment under false pretenses mean to intimidate Susy to learn the whereabouts of a doll containing a cache of heroine. But it's still necessary to develop them as evil men to make the situation believable . . . and to raise the question whether Susy will realize her danger. Suspense has to build till the final frightening climax. That last scene does manage to stir the audience.

GEORGE CORRAL, who masquerades as Sgt. Carlino, a police officer supposedly investigating a murder in which Susy's husband may be involved, gives the most convincing performance of the three. Daryl Schultz as Mike Talman, posing as a friend of the blind girl's husband, is simply too nice. Granted neither he nor Sgt. Carlino have records of violence, they are ex-convicts desperate for money. They are a threat to Susy and need to be seen as such.

While Ed Westfall, as the malevolent Harry Root Jr., must enact two other characters besides himself, he concentrates too much on dialects and not enough on other devices to develop Root's evil nature. This is a murderer, ready to kill again if need be.

Unfortunately missed cues, particularly lighting, in the second act further marred the performance opening night. These hopefully were corrected by Saturday evening.

Ruth Kjerland, a student at Thomas Junior High in Arlington Heights, plays the brattish 8-year-old from upstairs who relishes the dangerous situation in which Susy finds herself but in the end proves her ally. She does a fairly good job.

THE ROLE OF SAM, Susy's husband, is necessary to the plot but only minor and gives little opportunity for development by Bill Bailey. Gene Kaczor and Harding Stephens have walk-on roles as policemen.

The set for "Wait Until Dark" is an excellent one for which Bob Esvang gets design credit and Nels Christensen, Hank deGroh, Don Jessen, Gene Kaczor, Mike Krammer, Harding Stephens and Art Stevens building credit.

"Wait Until Dark" will play again this weekend with curtain at 8:30 p.m. Tickets, 250-3200.

DuBrow On TV

by Rick DuBrow

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—A spokesman for the business firm that underwrote last week's national television special, "VD Blues," about venereal disease, says reaction to the program has been strong.

The special, broadcast on the non-commercial network last week, used entertainment forms to get across information about venereal disease and had Dick Cavett as its host. The language was frank and tough. Nearly 90 stations ran local followup programs, many using "hot-line" phones. And the company that underwrote the special, and also offered financial aid to stations for their followup broadcasts, was the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co.

The 3M spokesman said that public health clinics in such cities as New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, as well as others, reported that walk-in traffic was considerable.

He added that stations "report they are being besieged with inquiries from high schools, and universities about long-term availability of the show for classroom use."

INQUIRIES ABOUT overseas broadcast rights have also been received, the spokesman said.

It has been reported that almost 15,000 phone calls were received by the New York City station in the first immediate response, and that many more calls have poured in to the outlet in the days since.

A story in the New York City press reported an executive of the program as saying many of the callers were married adults. The broadcast project was angled primarily at the young audience.

Stations in some other cities were also reported to have received numerous calls.

A person who worked on the video project says he walked into a "swinging singles" night spot in Manhattan the evening of the program and found the patrons absorbed in the telecast.

"VD Blues" was set before its air date as a tie-in to antivenereal disease campaigns by a number of organizations, among them the American Public Health Association and the National Education Association.

BIG BUSINESS corporations often get kudos for underwriting such public television programs as entertainment shows already proven and sometimes imported. The 3M company, it is said, had no control over the material or attitude of "VD Blues."

The spokesman said the broadcast "was funded while it was only on paper. A lot of big companies have been watching closely to see if we'd get burned."

With the outcome of the project, the spokesman added, "some of them may yank out their checkbooks and more and better programming of this nature will result."

An article in the Minneapolis press reports a 3M executive as saying the company felt it should become vitally involved in helping alleviate a social problem rather than purchasing an entertainment already made.

Dr. Reuben Raps Allen's Movie

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Dr. David Reuben, author of "Everything You've Always Wanted to Know about Sex But Were Afraid to Ask," said loudly and clearly he didn't like Woody Allen's version of his book.

"I didn't enjoy the movie," said the psychiatrist, "because it impressed me as a sexual tragedy."

"Every episode in the picture was a chronicle of sexual failure which was the converse of everything in my book. Everybody in the movie was a sexual flop."

It's not as if Woody Allen had corrupted Dr. Reuben's plot.

The book, which sold some 11 million copies, had, as much story line as the Pismo Beach telephone directory. The cast, however, was infinitely more sex oriented — otherwise Pismo Beach would boast a larger population.

"There is no way to profit from sneering at sex problems," the good doctor continued. "My book was written to help people."

"I had nothing to do with the script or the picture. All I did was sell them 13 words — the title."

Dr. Reuben is a youngish looking man, with large liquid eyes behind sedate spectacles. He tries not to behave as a doctor-author that is, sedately and is about half successful at it.

"The book was originally sold to Paramount and Elliott Gould," he said. "They sold the rights to United Artists and Woody Allen without my approval. Not that it would have made much difference."

Unlike Masters and Johnson, whose sex research is more clinical and vividly physical, Dr. Reuben appears to be more concerned with the psychological aspects of sex and its social manifestations.

HE HAS WRITTEN a new book, "Any Woman Can." This time is dedicated to the proposition that almost all women can find sexual happiness and love with or without the confines of marriage.

Probably most women knew this for openers. "Any Woman Can!" hasn't sold as well as "Everything You've Always Wanted, etc."

But the new book comes out in paperback this month and in all likelihood will be sold to the movies.

Inasmuch as the title is 10 words shorter than Reuben's first book, one wonders if he will receive as much money for the sale.

"The farthest thing from my mind was the sale of my first book to movies," Dr. Reuben said. "Nor did I write this book with a film in mind."

"It was inconceivable for me to see it as a picture except as a documentary. But I don't think we're ready for that. However, I think my new book has more potential for a film than the first one."

As a specialist in sexual problems, Dr. Reuben was asked if the current mania about sex in this country had about run its course.

"No," he said. "I think America's pre-occupation with sex is a compulsion for adult sex education. It's more than titillation because the power of stimulation is limited."

And that, said Dr. Reuben, is a fact.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Here is a Jeff Rubens match point problem. You are playing in the finals of the blue ribbon pairs and have reached six no-trump.

Never mind how you got there. There were as many ways to bid the hand as there were players in the event and the one thing you can be sure of is that everyone is in six or seven spades or no-trump.

You win the queen of diamonds lead and run off your spades and clubs to leave dummy with the ace-queen of hearts.

You have watched your opponents' discards and are still missing the king of diamonds and king-10-eight of hearts.

You lead a heart and West plays the 10. If his other card is the king of diamonds, (he might well have led the queen from King-queen-jack) it doesn't matter what you play. You are going to make exactly six. If his other card is the king of hearts a finesse gives you an overtrick; if it is the eight of hearts East will have blanked the king early in the defense and if you finesse you will go down one at your slam contract. What do you do?

The answer is that you rise with dummy's ace and insure your contract.

If West holds the heart king you have chucked a trick but the loss won't translate into many match points. All spade declarers will have played a backward spade finesse against the king in the was something contemporary, something I enjoyed and something of quality. Now I think I've found it with this show. I play an ex-astronaut working for an international security agency.

"Some people may think we're too far-fetched with our communications systems of television cameras and such. But that's used as an equalizer against guns so I don't have to carry any deadly weapons myself."

In the old days Wyatt and Hugh wouldn't be caught in the bathtub without a loaded revolver.

"I GOT OUT OF the saddle 10 years ago," O'Brian said, relieved. "Now I'm working with JoAnn Pflug in this week's episode. She's a big improvement over working with a horse."

O'Brian is one of three stars of "Search." NBC signed up Tony Franciosa and Doug McClure to play the other heroes in the series.

But it is O'Brian who owns a percentage of the profits and who will appear in half the segments.

"Sharing a series with other actors is fine with me," he said. "It gives me time to do my own thing — theater, movies, guest shots on other programs."

"Anyway, I think it was time for me to get back into television on a regular basis. Not financially, I was doing fine with five or six guest shots a year, plus the game shows."

"But there's a whole new audience out there and I don't want to lose them."

THE NEW AUDIENCE would be those lost souls who came along too late in life for Wyatt Earp. To them Hugh O'Brian is not a household name. The young crowd doubtless confuses Wyatt Earp with a new rock group.

O'Brian wants on: "Our show is pure escapism and no message. We come on the air at 10 o'clock Wednesdays. By that time people want to relax and forget their troubles."

"There's glamour and excitement and the show takes the viewer to various parts of the world."

"I don't think we're any more futuristic than the James Bond movies were. And I think we're proving that a good action show can be done without violence." Poor Wyatt. He must be turning in his grave.

Scott Rules Ethics Statements Are A 'Must'

by IRA TEINOWITZ

Chamberlain-Lettas News
SPRINGFIELD — Atty. Gen. William J. Scott yesterday ruled that local officials including school board members and mayors as well as county and state officials are subject to forfeiture of office if they fail to file ethics statements.

At the same time ruling on a request brought on by a Herald story last July, Scott said the presidents of Northern Illinois and Southern Illinois universities and the executive director of the board of higher education, were not officials in the sense of the state constitution and therefore would not be subject to forfeiture though they would be subject to other penalties.

Earlier, the Herald had disclosed the three had failed to file their statements one month after they were due. (After the story appeared all three filed their statements.) The opinions of Scott for the first time set penalties for failure to file statements, penalties the legislature had failed to include in the new ethics law. At the same time Scott cleared up confusion on the responsibility of local government officials.

IN AN INTERVIEW, Scott said he would grant the officials a 30-day grace period to file their statements because of the confusion. Present law required filing by July 1.

"If those statements are not filed by that time," Scott said, "then the state attorney general's office could move against state officers and the county state's attorney could move against any local officers who have failed to file their ethics statements."

In the opinion, Scott listed as officers who, if they failed to file could forfeit their offices as: state officers appointed or elected, including the members of all state boards, commissions, authorities or similar agencies, and officers of local governments and school districts including members of the boards of governing bodies.

Scott said, "The import of the forfeiture decision is clear on the face of Section II (in the new constitution). It applies to every official who must file a statement on both the state level and on the level of local governments and school districts."

When asked about the college presidents by state auditor Michael Howlett, Scott differentiated, saying though the members of the boards controlling state universities were state officials and could be subject of forfeiture, the presidents were employees and not subject to it. They were subject of possible misconduct charges and disciplinary action, he said.

SCOTT'S OPINION dealt with a special section of the Illinois Constitution which requires all state officials and candidates for state office to file statements of economic disclosure.

"Failure to file a statement within the time prescribed," the constitution says, "shall result in ineligibility or forfeiture of office."

When the legislature implemented this section of the constitution it set a date to file (July 1), extended the provision to include local officials, and listed penalties for filing false returns but never listed penalties for failure to file returns.

William J. Scott

McDonough County State's Atty. Henry D. Sintzsch of McComb wrote to Scott requesting the opinion on local officials.

$10,670 Pledged In Bike-A-Thon

by CINDY TEW

Over $10,000 was pledged to riders in the Sunday Heart Fund Bike-A-Thon. But there's a good possibility it won't all be collected.

"I rode 66 miles, and at 10 cents a mile you owe $6.60 on your pledge," a young girl told a sponsor.

"I can't believe you rode that far here's $3," said the lady and closed her door.

The sponsors of Bill Meyet of Forest Park and Mike Glugla of Mount Prospect will probably be even more surprised. The two men took top honors in the mileage contest, chalking up 171 miles each.

"I DON'T suppose we'll get all $10,670 that was pledged, but we should come close," said Virginia Hunter of the Heart Association of North Cook County. "We think the ride was very successful and we hope to make it an annual event."

Besides the 316 riders, over 30 members of the Wheeling Wheelmen Bicycle Club helped make the event successful by working at check points, directing traffic and riding. David Tibbetts of the Pony Bike Shop in Deerfield, worked all day repairing bikes free of charge. Other helpers included the Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove and Wheeling Civil Defense who patrolled streets.

"We got terrific cooperation from everyone," said Mrs. Hunter.

The Heart Fund offered trophies for most money pledged, most sponsors, top mileage and most mileage in various age categories.

"The idea was to make the bike-a-thon a sporting event," said Mrs. Hunter. "It's very appropriate for use since we recommend exercise."

The first place trophy for the most money pledged was won by Carlos Yi of Hanover Park who had sponsors pledge $1,079. Second place went to Dennis Behrens of Rolling Meadows who had pledged amounting to $833. The bronze medal went to Fred Glugla of Elk Grove Village with pledges of $343.

IN THE "most sponsors" category, Dennis Behrens took top honors with 81. Pat Kloster of Mount Prospect was the third place winner in that category with 57 sponsors.

While Meyet and Glugla won gold medals for top mileage, Ray Rich of Wheeling won a bronze medal for pedaling 154.5 miles.

In other categories, area winners were: Youngest Boy Going Over 100 Miles — first place, Kevin Langan, 13, of Arlington Heights, 133 miles; second place, Jim Swanberg, 13, of Elk Grove Village, 104.5 miles; and third place, Bill Fletcher, 14, of Mount Prospect, 104.5 miles.

Oldest Man to Go 75-95 Miles: first place, Joseph Greiger, 48, of Elk Grove

Village, 95 miles; and second place, Arnold Lewis, 57, of Palatine, 95 miles.

Youngest Boy to go 75-95 Miles: First place, Fred Kruse, 12, of Buffalo Grove, 95 miles; second place, Tom Kluczynski, 12, of Prospect Heights, 85.5 miles; third place, Steve Geiger, 13, of Elk Grove Village, 95 miles.

Oldest Man to Go 50-70 Miles: first place, Ken Scramton, 57, of Mount Prospect, 66.5 miles. Youngest Boy to Go 50-70 Miles: first place, Harold Origel, 11, of Wheeling, 56.5 miles; third place Kevin Schlodder, 13, of Buffalo Grove, 57 miles.

Oldest Woman to Go 50-70 miles: second place, Kathy Strong, 15, of Mount Prospect, 57 miles.

OLDEST MAN to Go 25-49 Miles: second place, Willard Harmon, 63, of Wheeling, 47.5 miles; third place, Fred Jilek, 63, of Mount Prospect, 28.5 miles. Youngest Boy to Go 25-49 miles: first place, Daryl Janney, 9, of Wheeling, 47.5 miles.

Oldest Woman to go 25-49 Miles: second place, Phyllis Harmon, 66, of Wheeling, 38 miles; third place, Lucille Hay, 64, of Des Plaines, 38.5 miles.

The youngest rider award was won by Todd Janney, 4, of Palatine, who rode 9.5 miles.

Have a nice weekend.

Drug Overdose Deaths Decline

For the second consecutive month, drug overdose deaths in Cook County dropped drastically, according to Coroner Andrew J. Toman.

Dr. Toman said overdose deaths for September totaled 14, compared to a record 48 deaths for September, 1971.

The previous month drug overdose deaths numbered 14, compared to 32 deaths for August, 1971.

Dr. Toman reported that for the first nine months of this year drug deaths totaled 199, compared to 214 deaths for the same period in 1971.

Dr. Toman said he knew of no reason for the sudden decrease in drug deaths.

"Hopefully, the public is becoming more aware of the danger of drugs," Dr. Toman said. "If this trend continues, for the first time since we began keeping drug overdose records we will not have a record number of fatalities at the end of this year."

Of the 14 deaths last month, nine were male and five were female. Eleven deaths occurred in Chicago and three in suburban Cook County.

Dr. Toman said six of the deaths were caused by overdoses of heroin and morphine, which in the body are chemically identical, and seven were caused by overdoses of barbiturates. One drug was unknown.

Ordinance No. 2361

AN ORDINANCE GRANTING A VARIATION FOR PROPERTY LOCATED AT 14 E. BUREAU AVENUE IN MOUNT PROSPECT, ILLINOIS

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did meet on the 12th day of July, 1972, at the hour of 8:00 p.m. in the Village Hall of Mount Prospect and did hear Case No. 72-18A, pursuant to legal notice published in the Mount Prospect Herald on June 26, 1972; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did hear a petition requesting a variation pursuant to the requirements of the Mount Prospect Building Code and Zoning Ordinance in order to construct a temporary building and to erect a five (5) foot high louvered fence; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect has recommended to the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect the granting of the building variation requested under Case No. 72-18A for reasons that:

1. There is a practical difficulty and particular hardship on the petitioner;

2. The purpose of the variation is not based on any desire to make money; the Mount Prospect Public Library being a not-for-profit Municipal Corporation;

3. The plight of the petitioner is due to unique circumstances in that there is an immediate need for additional space for the storage of books and employees may work without sufficient time to plan and erect same;

4. The alleged difficulty or hardship has not been created by any person presently having an interest in the property, but rather said hardship has been brought about through the annexation of some 10,200 additional residents;

5. The proposed variation will not impair an adequate supply of light and air to adjacent property, or substantially increase the congestion in the public streets, or increase the danger of fire, or endanger the public safety, or substantially diminish or impair property values within the neighborhood; and

6. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public health, safety or general welfare in that it will not alter the essential character of the locality and will aid in providing library services to the public; and

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have determined that the matters herein are for the best interests of the Village of Mount Prospect;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF MOUNT PROSPECT, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS:

SECTION ONE: That the property being a variation of the Mount Prospect Building Code, No. 72-18A, being legally described as follows:

Lot Eleven (11) in Block four (4) in the Village of Mount Prospect, Cook County, Illinois, being a portion of the West 1/2 of Section 12, Township 41 North, Range 11 East, of the Third Principal Meridian, Lot Ten (10) in Block four (4) in the Village of Mount Prospect, Cook County, Illinois, being a portion of the West 1/2 of Section 12, Township 41 North, Range 11 East, of the Third Principal Meridian;

is currently zoned under the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect as R-1 (Single Family Residence District), which zoning classification shall remain subject to the following variation hereby granted:

That the petitioner be allowed to erect, construct, operate, and maintain a temporary office building upon the above described parcel, which temporary structure shall be eliminated within one (1) year from the date this Ordinance is passed and approved;

b. That the petitioner be allowed to erect a maximum five (5) foot high louvered fence for the purpose of screening the temporary building from the street and surrounding properties;

SECTION TWO: That all other requirements of the Mount Prospect Building and Zoning Code shall be applicable except the variations noted in SECTION ONE hereof;

SECTION THREE: That the Director of Building and Zoning of the Village of Mount Prospect is hereby directed to issue a building permit in accordance with the variations hereinbefore mentioned;

SECTION FOUR: That the variations shall be null and void and of no force and effect unless and until an application for a building permit pursuant to such variation is made and construction commenced within one (1) year of the date said Ordinance becomes effective;

SECTION FIVE: That this Ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage, approval, and publication in the manner provided by law.

Ordinance No. 2369

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING MAP 38-N OF THE MOUNT PROSPECT ZONING ORDINANCE

WHEREAS, the Plan Commission of the Village of Mount Prospect, Cook County, Illinois, did meet on the 12th day of July, 1972, at the hour of 8:00 p.m. in the Village Hall of Mount Prospect and did hear Case No. 72-13P, pursuant to legal notice published in the Mount Prospect Herald on June 26, 1972; and

WHEREAS, the Plan Commission of the Village of Mount Prospect did hear a petition requesting a variation pursuant to the requirements of the Mount Prospect Building Code and Zoning Ordinance in order to construct a temporary building and to erect a five (5) foot high louvered fence; and

WHEREAS, the Plan Commission of the Village of Mount Prospect has recommended to the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect the granting of the building variation requested under Case No. 72-13P for reasons that:

1. There is a practical difficulty and particular hardship on the petitioner;

2. The purpose of the variation is not based on any desire to make money; the Mount Prospect Public Library being a not-for-profit Municipal Corporation;

3. The plight of the petitioner is due to unique circumstances in that there is an immediate need for additional space for the storage of books and employees may work without sufficient time to plan and erect same;

4. The alleged difficulty or hardship has not been created by any person presently having an interest in the property, but rather said hardship has been brought about through the annexation of some 10,200 additional residents;

5. The proposed variation will not impair an adequate supply of light and air to adjacent property, or substantially increase the congestion in the public streets, or increase the danger of fire, or endanger the public safety, or substantially diminish or impair property values within the neighborhood; and

6. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public health, safety or general welfare in that it will not alter the essential character of the locality and will aid in providing library services to the public; and

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect have determined that the matters herein are for the best interests of the Village of Mount Prospect;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF MOUNT PROSPECT, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS:

SECTION ONE: That the property being a variation of the Mount Prospect Building Code, No. 72-13P, being legally described as follows:

Lot Eleven (11) in Block four (4) in the Village of Mount Prospect, Cook County, Illinois, being a portion of the West 1/2 of Section 12, Township 41 North, Range 11 East, of the Third Principal Meridian, Lot Ten (10) in Block four (4) in the Village of Mount Prospect, Cook County, Illinois, being a portion of the West 1/2 of Section 12, Township 41 North, Range 11 East, of the Third Principal Meridian;

is currently zoned under the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect as R-1 (Single Family Residence District), which zoning classification shall remain subject to the following variation hereby granted:

That the petitioner be allowed to erect, construct, operate, and maintain a temporary office building upon the above described parcel, which temporary structure shall be eliminated within one (1) year from the date this Ordinance is passed and approved;

b. That the petitioner be allowed to erect a maximum five (5) foot high louvered fence for the purpose of screening the temporary building from the street and surrounding properties;

SECTION TWO: That all other requirements of the Mount Prospect Building and Zoning Code shall be applicable except the variations noted in SECTION ONE hereof;

SECTION THREE: That the Director of Building and Zoning of the Village of Mount Prospect is hereby directed to issue a building permit in accordance with the variations hereinbefore mentioned;

SECTION FOUR: That the variations shall be null and void and of no force and effect unless and until an application for a building permit pursuant to such variation is made and construction commenced within one (1) year of the date said Ordinance becomes effective;

SECTION FIVE: That this Ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage, approval, and publication in the manner provided by law.

Our Hero!

He's a Herald Carrier boy.
He's our hero!

He's our "anchor man" performing the last task in a team relay of effort to keep the Herald readers and the Northwest suburbs the best informed possible.

Without him, all the labors of reporters, editors, photographers, salesmen, production people, pressmen and many others would be futile.

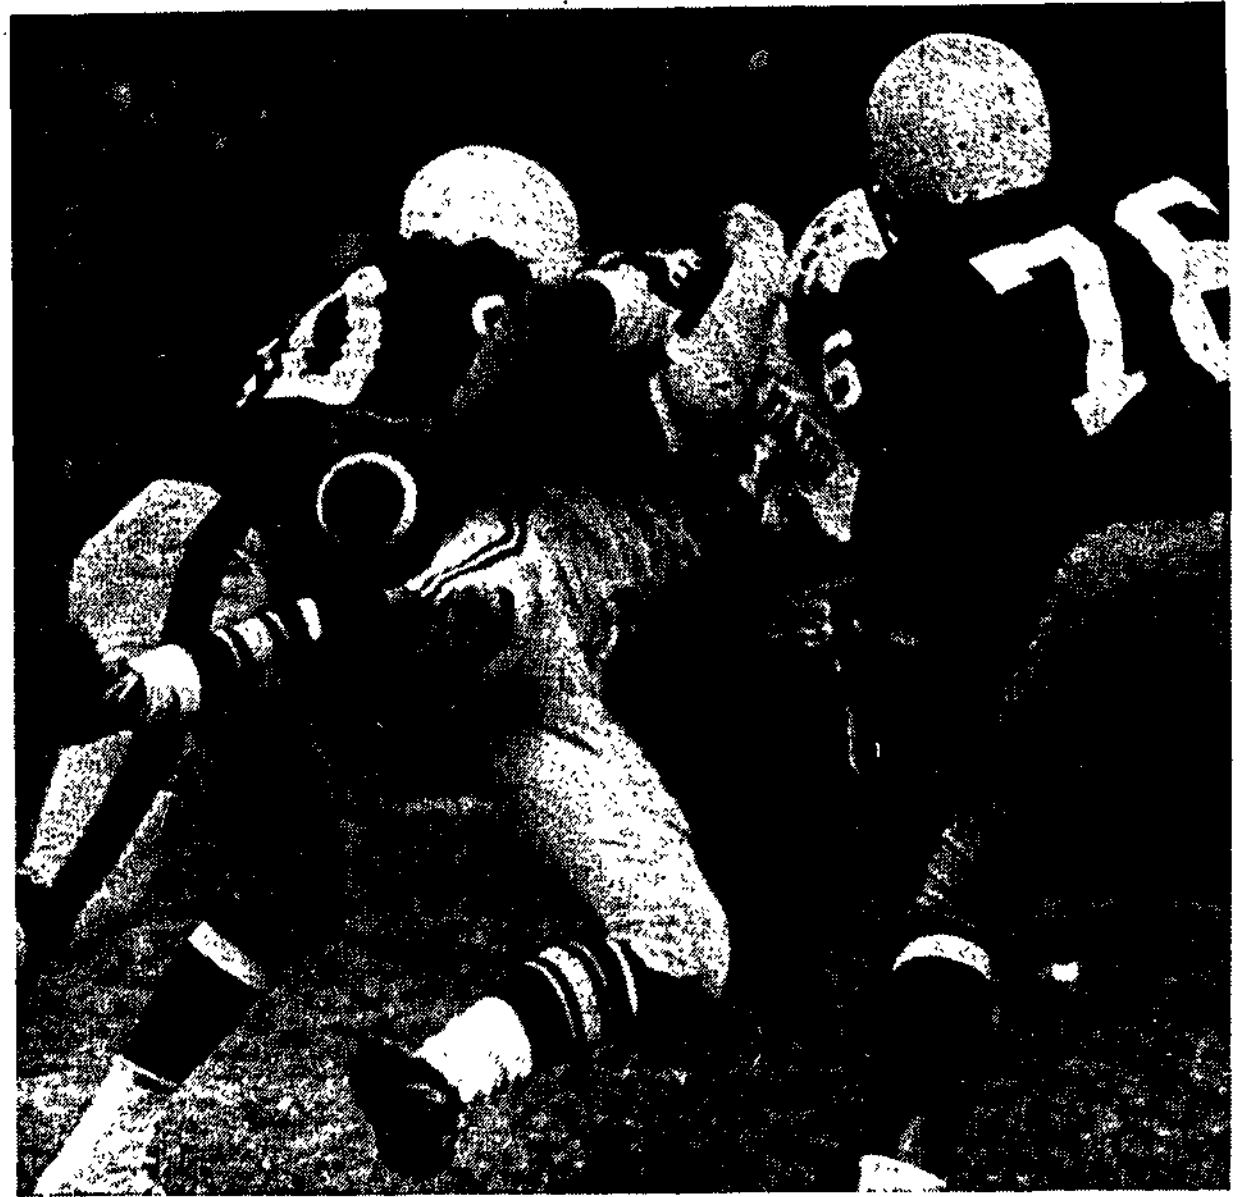

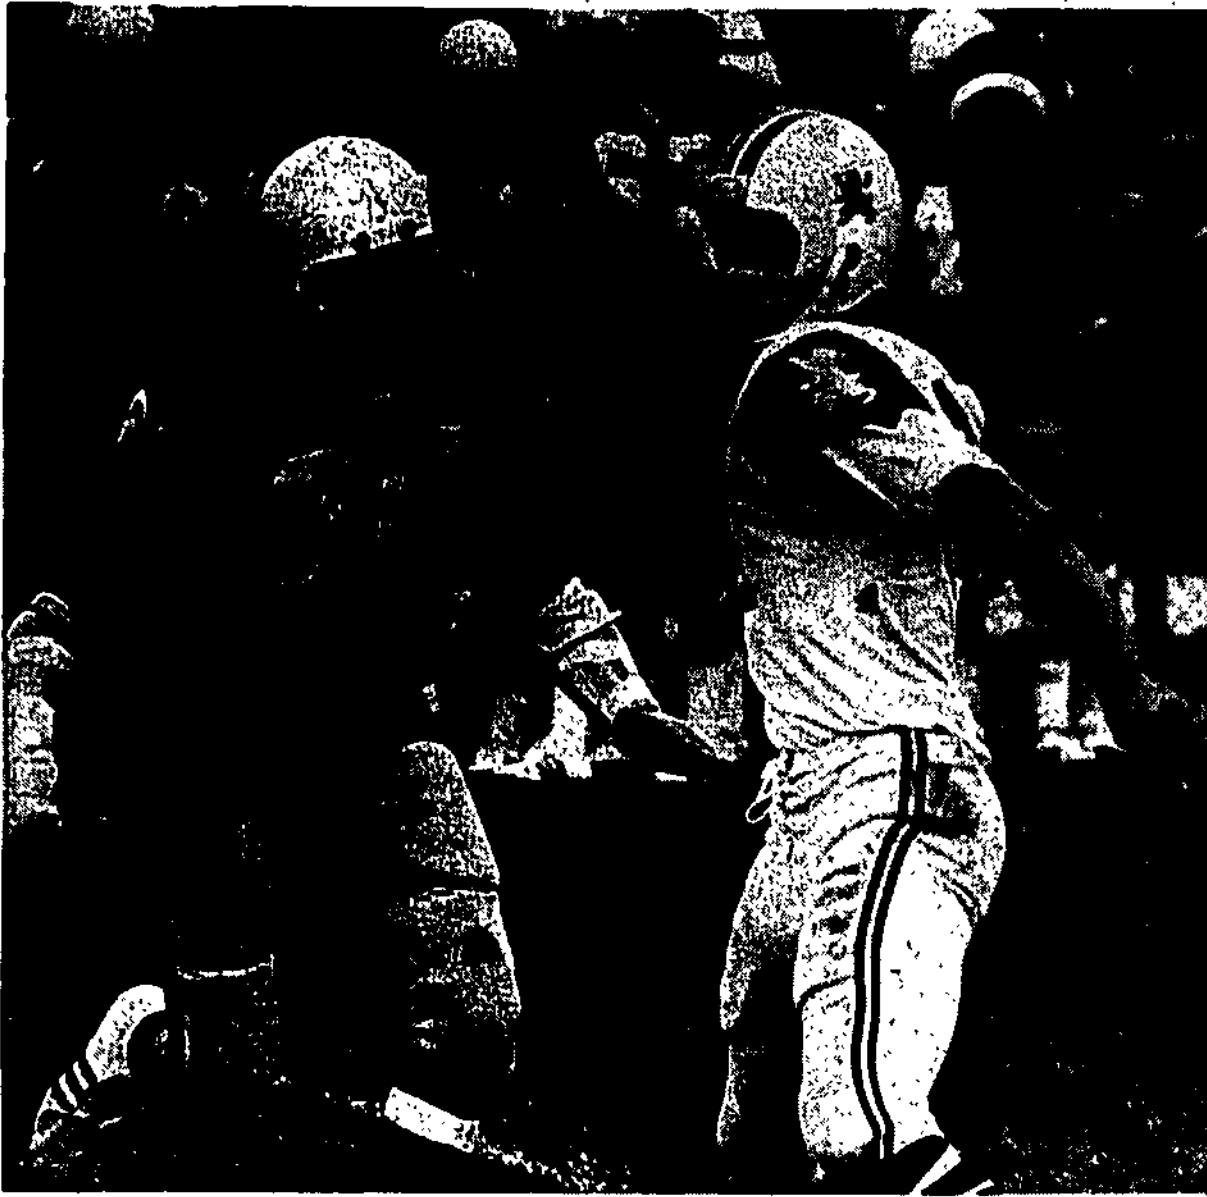

Without him, hundreds of advertisers would wait in vain for customer response.

He shoulders a big responsibility; and he's up to it! A good student, honest, dependable, energetic: these are the attributes of a Herald carrier. Small wonder that we take this time and place to recognize his sizable contribution.

We have over 2000 such carriers and each one of them is OUR HERO!

THIS WEEK my column goes to the dogs.

There were over 2,000 of them on paw for the 33rd All-Breed Show sponsored by the Skolde Valley Kennel Club at Arlington Park Sunday.

What began as a reward for my three-year-old daughter (she promised never to tie her pigtail with my typewriter ribbon) ended in a lasting impression for daddy.

I don't own a pooch at the moment. The landlord swears he's allergic to everything on four feet and somehow he includes goldfish, too.

The show completely reversed the adage "Man's best friend is dog." The rituals of fetching slippers or retrieving the morning paper had me barking up the wrong tree.

These dogs were patted, pampered and almost pestered by their perfectionist owners who were tying ribbons, applying makeup and carrying on conversations with their canine companions.

In many cases, it was difficult to tell which end of the leash was giving orders. This giant beauty pageant was complete with everything but swim suit competition and Bert Parks waiting to the tune of "Here it is."

The Canine Convention included 112 different breeds. The Poodles brought the largest contingent with 105 while 75 St. Bernards and Afghans tied for second.

Lassie was a Collie and Rin Tin Tin a German Shepherd. But unless you attended the show the Akitas and Basenjis and Borzoi and Brards and Keeshondens and Komondors and Kuvaszoks and Papillons and Puli and Schipperkes and Shih Tzus remained anonymous.

The names of some of these car-chasers were just as intriguing. Ambassador Of Janters, Frito Bandito of Aquatrain and El Conquistador Toro.

My tongue would be hanging out too if I had to call one of those three times to get him off the neighbor's bushes. What ever happened to sit, Spot, or roll over, Rover, or heel, Hank?

Pettenuzzo Sparkles

Mike Pettenuzzo, the Herald's 1971 Athlete of the Year while prepping for St. Viator and now a sophomore safety for the University of New Mexico, played a decisive role in his team's 15-12 triumph over Wyoming last week.

Enjoying his first varsity starting assignment after contributing three quarters in a reserve role against Arizona, Mike blocked a field goal and recovered a Wyoming fumble in the final minute of play to preserve New Mexico's upset victory.

Wyoming handled powerful Arizona State one week earlier while Pettenuzzo was bidding for a starting nod with 10 tackles and six assists in a 27-15 loss to Arizona.

Delores Harris Rolls 633 Series

Hoffman Sweeps In Classic Action

by GENE KIRKHAM

Delores Harris of Doyle's — Des Plaines fired a fine season's high series of 633 with games of 200, 213, and 220 to top all individuals as the Paddock Women's Classic League bowled at Ten Pin Bowl in Barrington in its sixth week of action.

The match between Doyle's — Des Plaines and Arlington Park Towers was also highlighted by Winnie Lohse's 235 game and 602 series. Doyle's won the first game with a 962. The two teams tied with 907 in the second game and Arlington Park Towers won the third game.

Doyle's 2734 series was the deciding factor as they won four points to three. Top individual for Arlington was Donna Jean Sander who rolled a 236 game and a 580 series. Nan Hoffman added 543 and Donna Lohse had 502. For Doyle's Bonnie Kuhn rolled 513 and Nancy Porcellus had 503.

The only major change in the standings was caused by Hoffman Lanes' seven point sweep over Thunderbird Country Club. Hoffman moved from fourth place to second as they were led by Marilyn Lange who rolled a 599 series on games of 200, 218, and 181. Lois Kamenske and Joan Christensen added 545 and 503 for Hoffman. Mary Yurs led her Thunderbird team with a 544 series.

L - Tran Engineering continues to lead the league as they won five of seven points from Franklin - Weber Pontiac.

Lorrie Koch led her L - Tran team with a consistent 589 total to raise her league leading average to 189. Her teammates contributed four more 500's as Marlis Pleckhardt rolled 588, Vi Douglas 545, Toshi Inahara 537, and Isobel Kosi had 513.

L - Tran's 2772 series was high for the night and the second high team effort of the season. Franklin - Weber Pontiac was led by Lee Winski who fired 571. Joan Plywack helped out with 551 as Gloria Lucchesi and Betty Peterman added 512 and 509.

Striking Lanes defeated Morton Pontiac five points to two with Lu Schoenberger rolling 213, 219 and 193 for a 625 individual series.

Played Basketball

NEW YORK (UPI) — The matchups against today's basketball players might be slightly uneven but in his undergraduate days at Miami U in Ohio, Jets' football coach Weeb Ewbank was a star on the school's basketball team. Weeb also quarterbacked the football squad and was captain of the basketball team.

SEEING IS BELIEVING and what you can't see won't hurt you, but this is ridiculous. There's a dog tied to that string somewhere, but there was no competition for hip-pies or dustmops.

The Striking Lanes team won the first game 837 to 812 and the second game with a 974 game. Morton Pontiac came back to win a one pin victory in the third game as they rolled 846 to Striking's 845.

For Striking Judy Croston had 526, Eunice Whitmore, 515, and Alice Schroder had 506. Ruth Baurhyte led her Morton team with 542 while Betty Parkhurst had 530 and Pam Cwik rolled 507.

The League resumes action at Striking Lanes this week. Morton Pontiac vs Hoffman Lanes, Thunderbird Country Club vs Striking Lanes, L - Tran Engineering vs Doyle's - Des Plaines, and Arlington Park Towers vs Franklin - Weber Pontiac will be the schedule at Striking.

Lions-Dons On WWMM-FM Friday Night

Headliners in the Suburban Catholic and Mid-Suburban leagues have been selected as the next two high school games of the week by WWMM-FM of Arlington Heights.

St. Viator's battle with Notre Dame Friday evening at Elk Grove and the Rolling Meadows at Hersey encounter (Oct. 27) will be featured by the Arlington station at 92.7 on the FM dial.

The broadcasts will begin at 7:55 p.m. with pre-game shows.

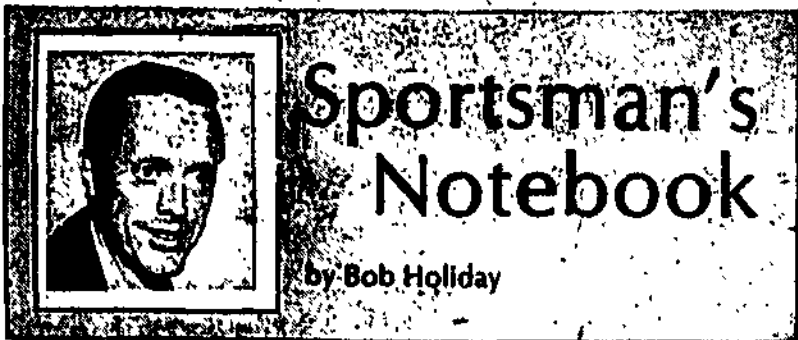

Sports Director Dick Thomas of WWMM-FM will handle the play-by-play with Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk providing the color commentary.

A high school game of the week for Friday, Nov. 3, will be determined later.

WWMM-FM will also feature Harper's game with Illinois Valley this Saturday night at 7:25 p.m. from Rolling Meadows High School.

Principals To Decide

Outline Playoff Proposals

Sportsman's Notebook

by Bob Holiday

THIS APPEARS TO have been Roland Martin's year on the professional bass fishermen's tournament trail. The 33-year-old Tulsa has emerged as the Jack Nicklaus of the play-for-pay fishing set.

Martin became the first two-time winner on this year's $100,000 pro circuit sponsored by the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society (B.A.S.S.) for winning the $15,500 All-American BASS tournament on Oklahoma's sprawling giant Lake Eufaula.

The $3,000 winner's purse lifted his winnings to $9,550 in the seven months of this year's events. It also marked his 17th straight finish in the official money and he now stands within easy reach of Bill Dance of Memphis, Tenn., for all-time money-winnings. Martin has accumulated $21,275 to Dance's $21,490. Martin has won four tournaments. Dance won seven BASS titles.

Since March, in six tournaments, Martin has won twice, finished second twice, third and fourth once each. Those finishes give Martin 203 points in the qualifying finals for the 1972 World's BASS Masters Classic. Only Tom Mann, the Jelly Worm king from Eufaula, Ala., was close with 157 points based on a grading scale of 35 for a first place finish, 34 for a second, etc. Martin's feat was, according to BASS president Ray Scott, on a par with battling .400 in baseball or winning back-to-back Masters tournaments. (People who promote things like tournaments tend to say things like that.)

Only two years ago, Martin found a disappointing 16th was the best he could do in the "pro" fishing company, but since then it has all been downhill for the former construction worker.

Martin approached the All-American on Eufaula much as a general goes to war. He flew aerial reconnaissance missions over the lake. He poured over topo maps and practiced . . . practiced . . . practiced. He says he had good reason to take the lake so seriously. It was this same impoundment that whipped him down to 16th two years ago.

One hundred twenty-nine other bass anglers from 19 states, including 42 Okies, paid the $150 entry fee, but they might as well have been buying tickets to watch Martin in his private duel with the lake. He broke the pack's back in the first round with a ten bass stringer that weighed 30 lbs. 8 oz. and he'd been sorting since noon! Billy Primos of Jackson, Miss., got a limit too, but his weighed a mere 19 lbs. 11 oz. In the second round Martin piled up 11 lbs. 14 oz. despite 35 mph winds and then checked in another limit catch of 20 lbs. 7 ozs. in the final round.

His winning 62 lbs. 13 ozs. on 26 fish represents the biggest creel this season and was accomplished on a lake that many fishermen consider one of the toughest on the tournament trail, which began this year in Florida. Runnerup was Jimmy Houston of Tahlequah, the current Oklahoma state champion, with 48 lbs. 4 ozs. Biggest bass of the tournament was a 5 lbs. 11 oz. dandy landed by Calvin Hill of Bartlesville, Okla. He got the big one on the last day, using a Flip-tail plastic worm.

Spinnerbaits, diving lures and plastic worms accounted for most of the 601 bass taken by the pros at Eufaula and 92% of the fish were released alive after being tallied.

Next on the professional circuit is the big casino . . . the Bass Masters Classic, a winner-take-all $10,000 purse with the top 24 point scorers for the season competing on a "secret" lake. Only tournament officials know which lake will host the Classic. The top qualifiers meet a chartered jet, board it with all their gear and then, once underway, a sealed envelope is dramatically opened and the competitors are told where they are headed. It is reported that at that time the stewardess offers drinks which are ordered or not depending on the contestant's personal opinion of the plane's destination. Last year's Classic was held at Las Vegas, Nevada on Lake Mead, where the anglers found competition bass boats, and all the other necessities waiting for them. Bobby Murray of Hot Springs, Ark. won that one.

Martin and his competitors will get the airborne word next Monday morning.

WHEN MEL HAESSIG of Waukesha, Wis. caught a new state record chinook he also landed a place in the record books for Milwaukee county two weeks in a row. Haessig's 38 pound, 8 oz. chinook came on the heels of a 22 pound 2 oz. coho caught by Donald Warzyn of Milwaukee. Milwaukee anglers are doing very well for their county, but they will have to go some to catch Green Lake county, which has four state records, including a 35 pound lake trout, and Winnebago county with four that includes a 180 lb. sturgeon.

SPEAKING OF "big deals." Last week's pin-up, Jack McGeady of Palatine who brought home a picture of his 235 lb. 8 foot black tip shark from Florida, just got back from Gillette, Wyo. with a 9 point (eastern count) mule deer buck. McGeady reported that the weather, typically, ranged from bad to rotten, but that the hunting was excellent for mule deer and antelope.

WISCONSIN DUCK hunters continue to moan about the bad hunting conditions the wet summer has bequeathed them. Ducks and geese alike are avoiding the usual ponds and lakes where hunters have erected blinds, preferring instead to sit it out safely in the fields and marshes, where the heavy rains have left them deep, comfortable, remote pot holes. The birds, hunters report with distress, are out of range and out of reach. And the hunting season is quickly going by, day-by-passing day.

Illinois hunters can anticipate much the same problem, particularly in the area of the Chain of Lakes, where waters continue to be very high.

As conditions are right now, there will be no reason for the ducks to fly anywhere near any of the regular shooting areas, since there are plenty of sloughs and backwater channels where hunting is either impossible or illegal.

Chalk up one year for the birds.

A proposal for a football playoff system for Illinois high schools, including specifics, was recently presented by the Illinois High School Association to principals around the state at several meetings.

The principals will have until January to decide whether or not they are in favor of the plan, then will vote on it.

Here are some provisions of the proposal:

Participation would be optional as it is in other IHSA activities.

Playoffs would be divided into five different classes, each with a 16-team bracket, for a total of 80 entries. (This year, 603 of the 785 IHSA member high schools have a football program).

Champions of each of the state's 64 conferences would qualify along with 16 at-large teams selected by the IHSA. In the event of co-championships, it would be up to each conference to have its own system of determining a playoff entry. Each bracket would have at least three independent teams.

The basis of the classifications would be average enrollment of all teams in the league. Enrollment of all-boys schools would be doubled in order to place them in a class.

Final playoff games would be completed on or before the final Saturday in November. They would begin after the ninth week of the season. If conducted in 1973 the schedule would be: Preliminary games Wednesday, Nov. 7; quarterfinal games Saturday, Nov. 10; semi-finals Saturday, Nov. 17 and finals Friday and Saturday, Nov. 23 and 24.

The plan would encompass by-law changes permitting the first games to be played on the first Friday after Labor Day and practice to begin the second Monday preceding Labor Day.

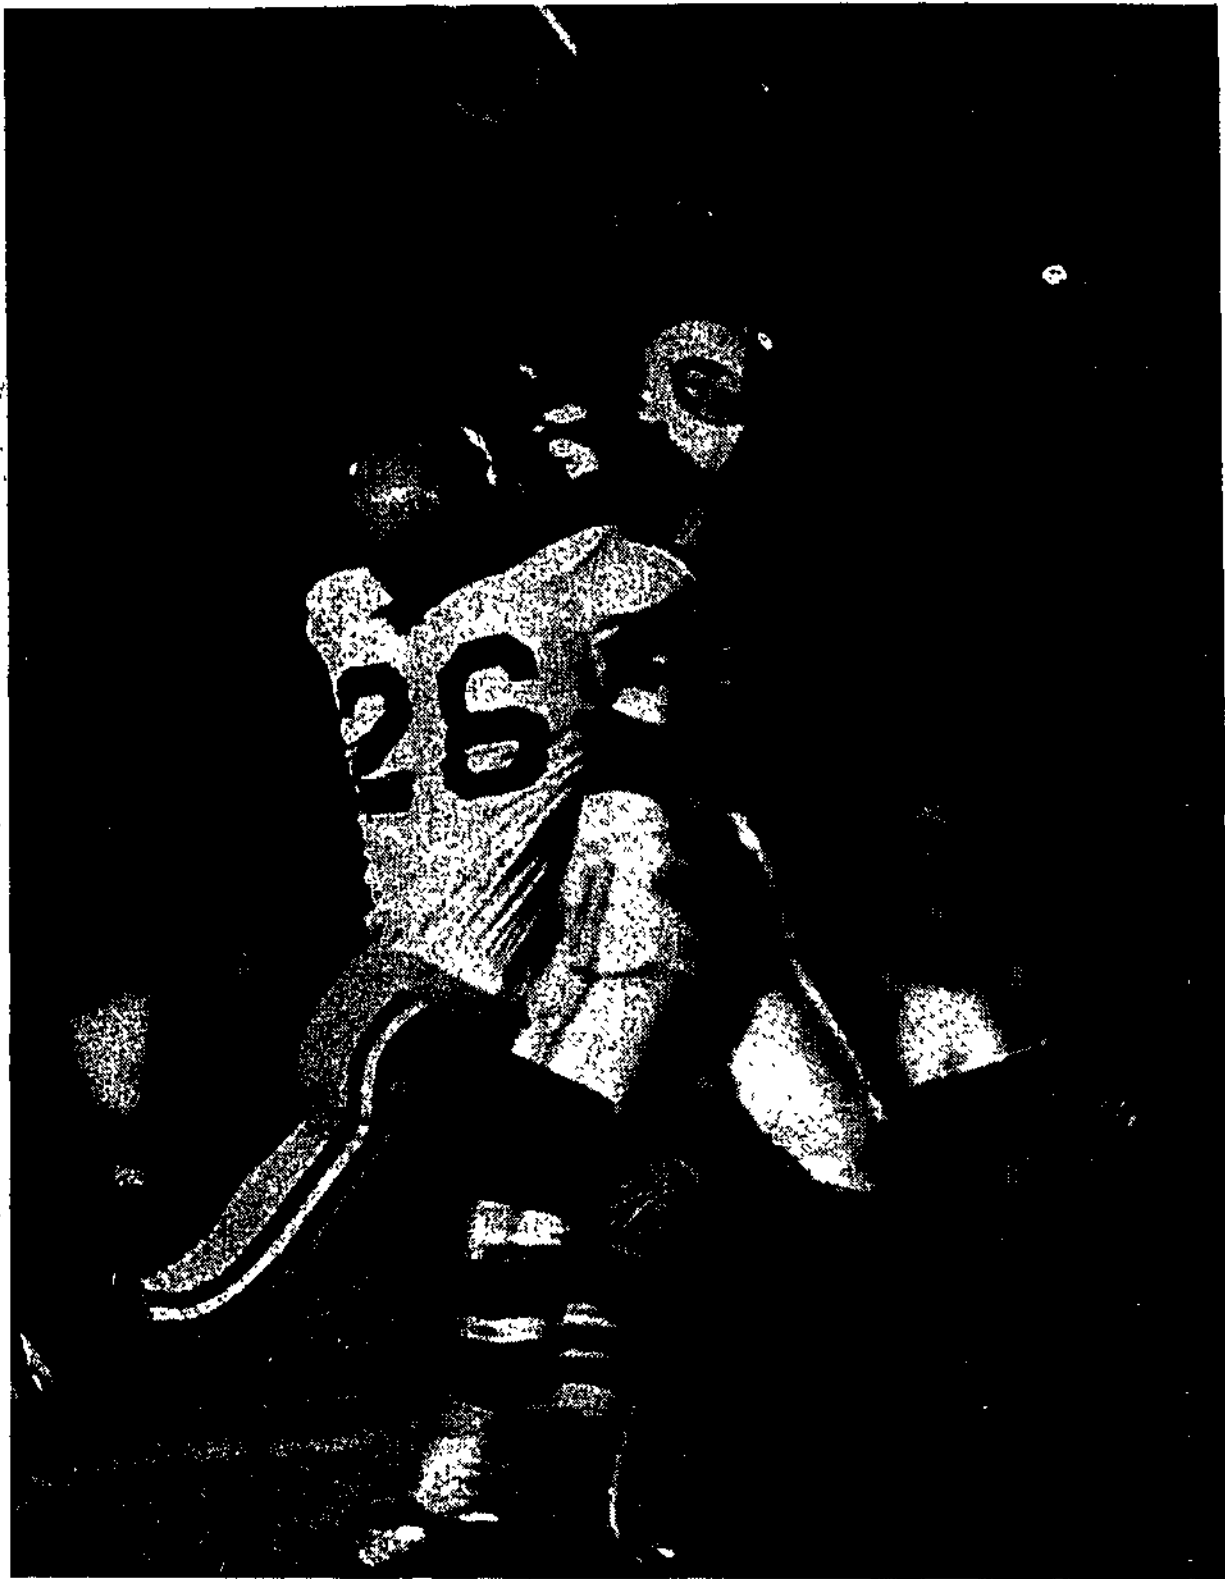

Playoff sites would be selected by the IHSA, which would follow a policy of selecting the stadium of the largest school participating in a game if its facilities are adequate.

Pairings would be on a geographical basis.

Palatine Man Earns Black Belt In Judo

Steve Dupre, 417 S. Elm, Palatine, was promoted to the rank of Shodan (1st Degree Black Belt) at the recent promotional examination conducted by the Chicago Black Belt Association.

Dupre, currently President of the University of Illinois Judo Club in Champaign, and a member of the Northwest Suburban YMCA Judo Club has been studying Judo for six years.

He began his Judo at the YMCA in the boys Judo class and is only the second man in the 10-year history of the "Y" Judo Club to receive the coveted Black Belt. His promotion was based on his knowledge of Judo as demonstrated at the examination and by his successful record of competition.

Other Judo promotions announced by the YMCA Judo Club were: Edward Gates, 1154 N. Hickory, Arlington Heights, was promoted to Nikyu (2nd Degree Brown Belt) and Mark Dupre, of Palatine, was promoted to Sankyu (3rd degree Brown Belt). Lorraine Maleski, 310 Potter Road, Des Plaines, and Irvana Wilks, 1982 Algonquin Road, Mount Prospect, were promoted to Green Belt.

Recent Junior Judo promotions include:

Peter Fermo, 15, 141 W. Yates, Mount Prospect, promoted to Blue Belt (2nd degree Junior Rank)

Dan Terzo, 14, 1052 S. Douglas, Arlington Heights, promoted to Orange Belt (4th degree Junior Rank)

Donny Lindstrom, 9, 311 S. Yale, Arlington Heights, promoted to Yellow Belt (5th degree Junior Rank)

The undefeated Rams won the Arlington Heights Boys Football Senior League crown Sunday, by coming from behind to beat the Lions 14-9.

First place in Varsity League standings was taken by the Browns as they slipped the Eagles 24-0. They will play the second place Vikings Saturday for the championship.

In the Junior League, the Cardinals kept their grip on first place by defeating the Falcons 3-0. They will be challenged Saturday by the Packers, who moved into sole possession of second place by defeating the Bears 24-0.

RAMS IN - LIONS 8
After finding themselves behind for the first time this season, the Rams battled their way back to an 11-8 victory over the Lions to clinch the Senior division championship.

Lion Rick Sutton drew first blood as he skinned into the end zone on a quarterback keeper. The Lions made the conversion.

After that, the Rams were not seriously threatened. Fullback Jamie Braddock scored on a six-yard sweep in the second quarter. Barry Carlsaid tallied in the third on a quarterback keeper. Dan Lewis swept seven yards for a touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Carlsaid, Kurt Wagner, and Dan Lewis excelled on offense for the Rams. Braddock, Carlsaid, and Mark Henderson stood out on defense.

49'ERS 28 - REDSKINS 22
Dart Thompson's 49'ers won their first game 28-22 over the Redskins in a wild scoring affair. Behind 8-4 at halftime, the 49'ers came rushing back to lead 25-4 in the fourth quarter. The "B" team was substituted, giving up two quick touchdowns to the Redskins "A" team.

Gary Kempton threw two touchdown passes, one to Mike Lolocono and the second to Steve Syzard. Tom Murray scored 20 yards through a broken field. John Thompson streaked 33 yards for the fourth 49'er touchdown.

Art Klein, Peter Shaw, John Bithers, John Thompson, Gary Kempton, and Tom Murray were outstanding on defense for the 49'ers.

For the Redskins Mike Galloway gained 313 yards rushing and scored all the points — on a 2-yard plunge up the middle, 66 yard interception, 66 yard run, and a pair of two-point conversions. Also playing well on offense was center John Glueckert. Mark Schanz sparked on defense as a linebacker.

BROWNS 24 - FALCONS 0
Earl Smithers' Browns scored three touchdowns and a safety in the first quarter to ground the Falcons 24-0 and take over sole possession of first place in the Varsity League.

Mike Williams racked up the Browns' first tally on a 37-yard run. After his TD, Williams boomed the kickoff to the Eagles one-yard line and the ball was down on the Eagle five.

Williams scampered 42 yards and Ricky Kneisel ran 27 yards for two more touchdowns.

Bob Volkman, who played an outstanding defensive game, tackled the Eagle quarterback in the end zone to cap first period scoring.

A two quarter defensive battle, led by Volkman, Jim Butts, and Mark Masloff of the Browns and Eagles Mike Duro, Bob Schmidt, and Bill Brelster, ensued.

In the final quarter, a fullback pass-option play resulted in a 35-yard pass and run score when Brown Jeff Smithers threw to end Pat Robinson.

The Browns' offensive line play, led by guard Ken Timmins, was superb.

The Eagle offense was highlighted by a 50-yard pass play from Bill Brelster to Chris Bickert. Fullback Chuck Klein punched into the line for good yardage behind good blocking by center Bob Dallstrom and tackle Mike Bayless.

VIKINGS 6 - STEELERS 6
The Steelers tied the Vikings 6-6, in a game marked by penalties, to drop the Vikings into second place in the Varsity League. The Vikings will replay the Browns Saturday, however, for the Varsity League championship.

As the first quarter ended, the Steelers drove 63 yards to the Viking three. Fullback Paul Solinger dove over the middle on the first play of the second quarter to score.

The Steelers had a drive going late in the second quarter, but were halted on the five-yard line by the clock as the first half ended.

Bob Goldberg slammed into the end zone for the Viking score on a quarterback sneak after Rob Erickson brought the ball within striking distance on a long run.

When the final whistle blew, the Vikings were knocking on the door with the end of the half touching the Steeler goal line.

Hard running by Erickson and Mark Zurawski led the Viking offense.

Fullback Mike McCall and running backs Brian Gallagher and Kent Motzkus led a balanced Steeler attack on the ground while passes from quarterback Brad Russell to Motzkus covered 64 yards.

Gang tackling by the Steeler defense led by Mike Loch, Chris Hobiwski, and Chris Carlson held a hard running Viking attack to one TD.

GIANTS 20 - SAINTS 0

Gary Vevang opened scoring with a 52-yard run in the second quarter to lead the Giants to a 20-0 drubbing of the Saints. Fullback Brian Curran ran six yards for the Giants' second touchdown of the period.

After intermission, the Giants garnered another TD on a 62-yard pass play from Stu Huffer to Gary Vevang. In the fourth quarter, Tim O'Brien scored on a three-yard run. Gary Vevang took in a pass from Stu Huffer for the two-point to close scoring.

Offensive blocking by Steve Cowen, John Smith, and Andy Lindstrom aided Vevang in gaining 102 yards rushing and 58 yards in pass receptions and Stu Huffer to complete four of seven passes for 101 yards via the air lanes.

Stan Huffer, Bob Sayre, and Kevin Widdie led the Giant defense.

A 35-yard pass play from Pat Driscoll to Mike Andiejewski highlighted the Saint offense.

Rick Sanders and Dan Weber both gained good yardage.

Weber, Kurt Larson, and Jim Murphy were the mainstays of the Saint defense.

CARDINALS 8 - FALCONS 0

The Cardinals scored with four minutes left in the game to edge the Falcons 8-0 and stay in first place in the Junior League.

Early in the first quarter the Falcons struck deep into Cardinal territory on a pass from Bruce Pokuta to Scot Anderson. Penalties forced the Falcons to yield the ball. In the second quarter, the Falcons threatened again.

After Stan Jones recovered the fumbled pass completion, they marched 60 yards to the Cardinal 16-yard line. There the Falcons stalled and on fourth and 13, the Cardinals intercepted a Pokuta pass.

On the next play, Pokuta intercepted a Cardinal pass but was unable to advance it and the half ended before the Falcons could get off a play.

After a see-saw third quarter, the Cardinals got off a 30-yard punt that Jeff Braddock couldn't return. A clipping penalty put the Falcons further in the hole and an interception by Cardinal Bill Hajeck gave the Cardinals the ball on the Falcon 40.

With four minutes left, Cardinals fourth and seven on the Falcon 16-yard line. Pat O'Brien threw to Jeff Crouch on the eight yard line for a first down. Cardinal halfback John Sayer dove eight yards off tackle for a touchdown.

John Sayer passed to O'Brien for the extra point.

Bill Hajeck was the leading ground gainer for the Cardinals. Hajeck, Chris Kaiser, and Tim Maves were the defensive stalwarts for the Cards.

PACKERS 36 - BEARS 0
The Packers put it all together Saturday and bombed the Bears 36-0. The victory moved the Packers into second place in the Junior League and slated them for a rematch with the undefeated Cardinals for the championship.

Dan Makeever scored three times to lead a well balanced Packer offense. John Caslaro and Dave Gardner led the blocking.

The Packers fired off at the opening kickoff on a 30-yard return by Greg Dick to the Bear 45. The "B" team then came in and Mike Skiermanski put the Pack in range with two 20-yard runs. Kurt Thielemann swept 20 yards around left end to put Packer points on the board.

Dan Makeever tallied for the Pack again in the first quarter on an 8-yard plunge. Rich Kila scored the two-point.

Makeever scored in the third quarter on a nine-yard dive and again in the fourth on a four-yard sweep.

Packers Rick Kila, Jay Behn, and Dave Gardner distinguished themselves on defense, accounting for 73 yards in minus Bear yardage.

The Bears swept over for one TD, but it was called back on a penalty. The Bears passed 17 times for no completions. One was intercepted by Greg Dick and run back 30 yards.

COLTS 24 - COWBOYS 6
After being held scoreless for three quarters, the Colts blew the game apart in the fourth quarter to join the Cowboys 24-6.

Colt Curt White, who gained 200 yards rushing, scored first on a 15-yard run. Quarterback Chris Juhle then ducked over from one yard out for another touchdown. Halfback Dan Thorp ran three yards for another. Conversions were scored by Colts Thorp and Jeff Howard.

Spectacular blocking was enacted by Thorp, Steve Fantuzzi, and Steve Poesle. Ralph Zeien was also an excellent offensive lineman.

Chris Juhle intercepted two passes while Jeff Lane also excelled on defense.

Stevenson In Easy Triumph On Homecoming

by DAN FINKELMAN

The Stevenson Patriots evened their Homecoming record at four wins and four losses Saturday with a crushing 44-0 win over Elgin Academy.

Although the score does not show it, the first half of the game was plagued by offensive mistakes.

In their first three offensive plays the Patriots fumbled the ball away twice. The Pats did manage to put one sustained drive together in the first half ending with a two-yard touchdown run by Dan Lange. The point after touchdown kick was good by Steve Van Demerit.

The only other score of the half came with five seconds left, on fourth and goal from the seven. Van Demerit kicked his first field goal of the season to give the Patriots a 10-0 halftime lead.

The second half was simply all Patriots, scoring five touchdowns in three different ways by three different people.

Following an Elgin punt to their 49, Lange carried five times for 49 yards and his second touchdown of the day. Again, as is now regular routine, Vandy kicked the extra point.

Three plays later Lange intercepted a Doug Skinner pass at the 41 and ran it in for the score. Vandy made the score 24-0 with the point after touchdown kick.

On the play after the kick-off to the Elgin 18, Dave Fisher made a great tackle on Skinner, bringing him down at the three. On third down Elgin attempted a quick-kick which was blocked by Chad Lewis and caught and run into the end zone by Mike Marcinik for the score. Vandy's kick made the score 31-0.

After a fumble recovery by the Patriots on the Elgin 22, Tom White took the ball around left end for the touchdown. Vandy's final extra point kick was good for a score of 38-0.

Elgin fumbled on the kick-off and the Pats recovered on the 30. Following John Mercier's run to the five, Dan Lange pushed through for his fourth touchdown of the game. The two point conversion failed.

Although the Patriot offense was in the spotlight most of the day, it was the excellent defense that put them there. The Patriots fumbled the ball away five times, yet Elgin only gained 45 TOTAL yards for the day. Elgin had 48 total yards in the first half, their second half was worth MINUS three.

Fantastic performances were put in by Gene D'Ambrosio, Bruce Lowry, Dave Fisher, Chad Lewis, Mike Marcinik and John Winograd.

On offense, Lange had 176 yards, 135 of them rushing. Lange could very well be the best in the county. The Patriots meet Jefferson Saturday.

Hersey Names Hockey Coach

Student hockey players from Hersey High School will play this fall in the recently formed Chicago Metropolitan High School Hockey League. Hersey will be competing in the league's Northwest division which is comprised of teams from five other schools — Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Arlington, St. Viator and Driscoll.

Hersey's No. 1 fan is the principal Roland Goins. He is optimistic about high school hockey soon becoming an interscholastic varsity sport.

Hersey will be coached by Dean Karouzos, who has played and coached in the Chicago area for the past 15 years. Karouzos had this to say of his spirited team:

"Our team's success will be helped by the experienced play of Jim O'Shea, Bob Brush, Kurt Leskiewicz, Dave Anderson and Lex Tishnyk. The team is working well now and with hard work all players will soon be a contributing factor to the team's success."

Hersey will play its games on Sunday afternoons, starting Nov. 12, at the Arlington Ice Spectrum. Karouzos has asked for all fans in the area to come to the Spectrum and watch the boys play. Anyone interested in contributing to the Hersey Hockey Club should contact Karouzos at LA 5-3811.

Hoffman Splits Grid Decisions

The Hoffman Commandos dropped out of first place after losing to Willowbrook-Schaumburg, 13-0. Both teams entered the contest with identical 4-1 records.

Schaumburg controlled the first half as the Commandos were penalized several times on crucial plays. In all, the Commandos were whistled for 83 yards. Hoffman dominated play between the 20-yard lines, but just couldn't score.

The Commandos ran 65 plays from scrimmage, but could muster only 158 yards against a very tough Schaumburg team. Coach Rooney said the Hoffman defense played an outstanding game considering they were short two regulars that were sidelined with broken bones. The flu bug also took its toll on two others.

The Hoffman Raiders, meanwhile, got off to a fast start against the Schaumburg Vikings and held on for a 13-7 triumph. The first score was set up by a 36-yard punt by Doug Olanese. Kevin Weaver hit the post from 19 yards out, but the extra point failed.

After kicking off, the Raiders got control of the ball again and were driving for their second touchdown, but fumbled. The Vikings returned to the Raider 22, but were stopped. Another exchange saw the Vikings score on a long pass as the half ended with the Raiders down, 7-0.

In the third quarter, the Raiders worked for substantial gains on the efforts of Olanese and Weaver. Olanese broke loose for 65 yards and a touchdown late in the stanza. The point was converted and the Raiders captured the 13-7 edge.

Safety Bill Armstrong made a game-saving tackle when Schaumburg's fullback broke loose on a long run to preserve the decision.

Des Plaines Aces Hike Men's Advantage

by GENE KIRKHAM

The Des Plaines Ace Hardware team swept the series from Gaare Oil to increase their lead to seven points in the men's Paddock Classic League.

Bowling on their home Des Plaines Lanes, the Ace Hardware five was led by Tom Kouros' 663 series which included games of 237, 191, and 235. Kouros' series was the top individual effort of the night and was the big factor in dropping the Gaare Oil team to third place with their seven point loss to Ace Hardware. The Des Plaines team had a high game of 962 and a 2776 team series.

Hoffman Lanes was another seven point winner as they defeated Bank of Rolling Meadows in three games and the series. Ray Lofthouse led his Hoffman Lanes team with 163, 214, and 232 for a 609 series.

Morton Pontiac moved back into second place in the league by winning five points from Uncle Andy's Cow Palace. Uncle Andy's won the first game 910 to 895 while Morton won the second 945 to 912. Morton fired a 1008 third game to win the series point with a 2848 team series. Both the 1008 game and the 2848 series were the high totals for the night.

Ernie Kocho led the Morton five with 200, 233, and 171 for a 604 series. Dick Baker was high for Uncle Andy's with a 589 total.

PCTL No. 3 was the five point victor in a close match with PCTL No. 2. The first game was won by PCTL No. 3 by one pin, 898 to 897. They won the second game

Tourneys At Three Levels In Amateur Hockey Action

The Illinois Amateur Hockey Association will conduct its state championship tournaments on three levels in 1973.

The IAHA will again co-sponsor with the Chicago Daily News a single elimination tournament for the all-star teams from established youth hockey programs in the state.

In addition, the Association will now sponsor tournaments for teams from new hockey programs and for the "B" level teams from established programs.

"By offering the Novice and 'B' tournaments we hope to give more young players a chance in 'big time' competition at the end of the season," explained Al Marshall of Park Ridge, IAHA vice president and chairman of the state tournaments committee.

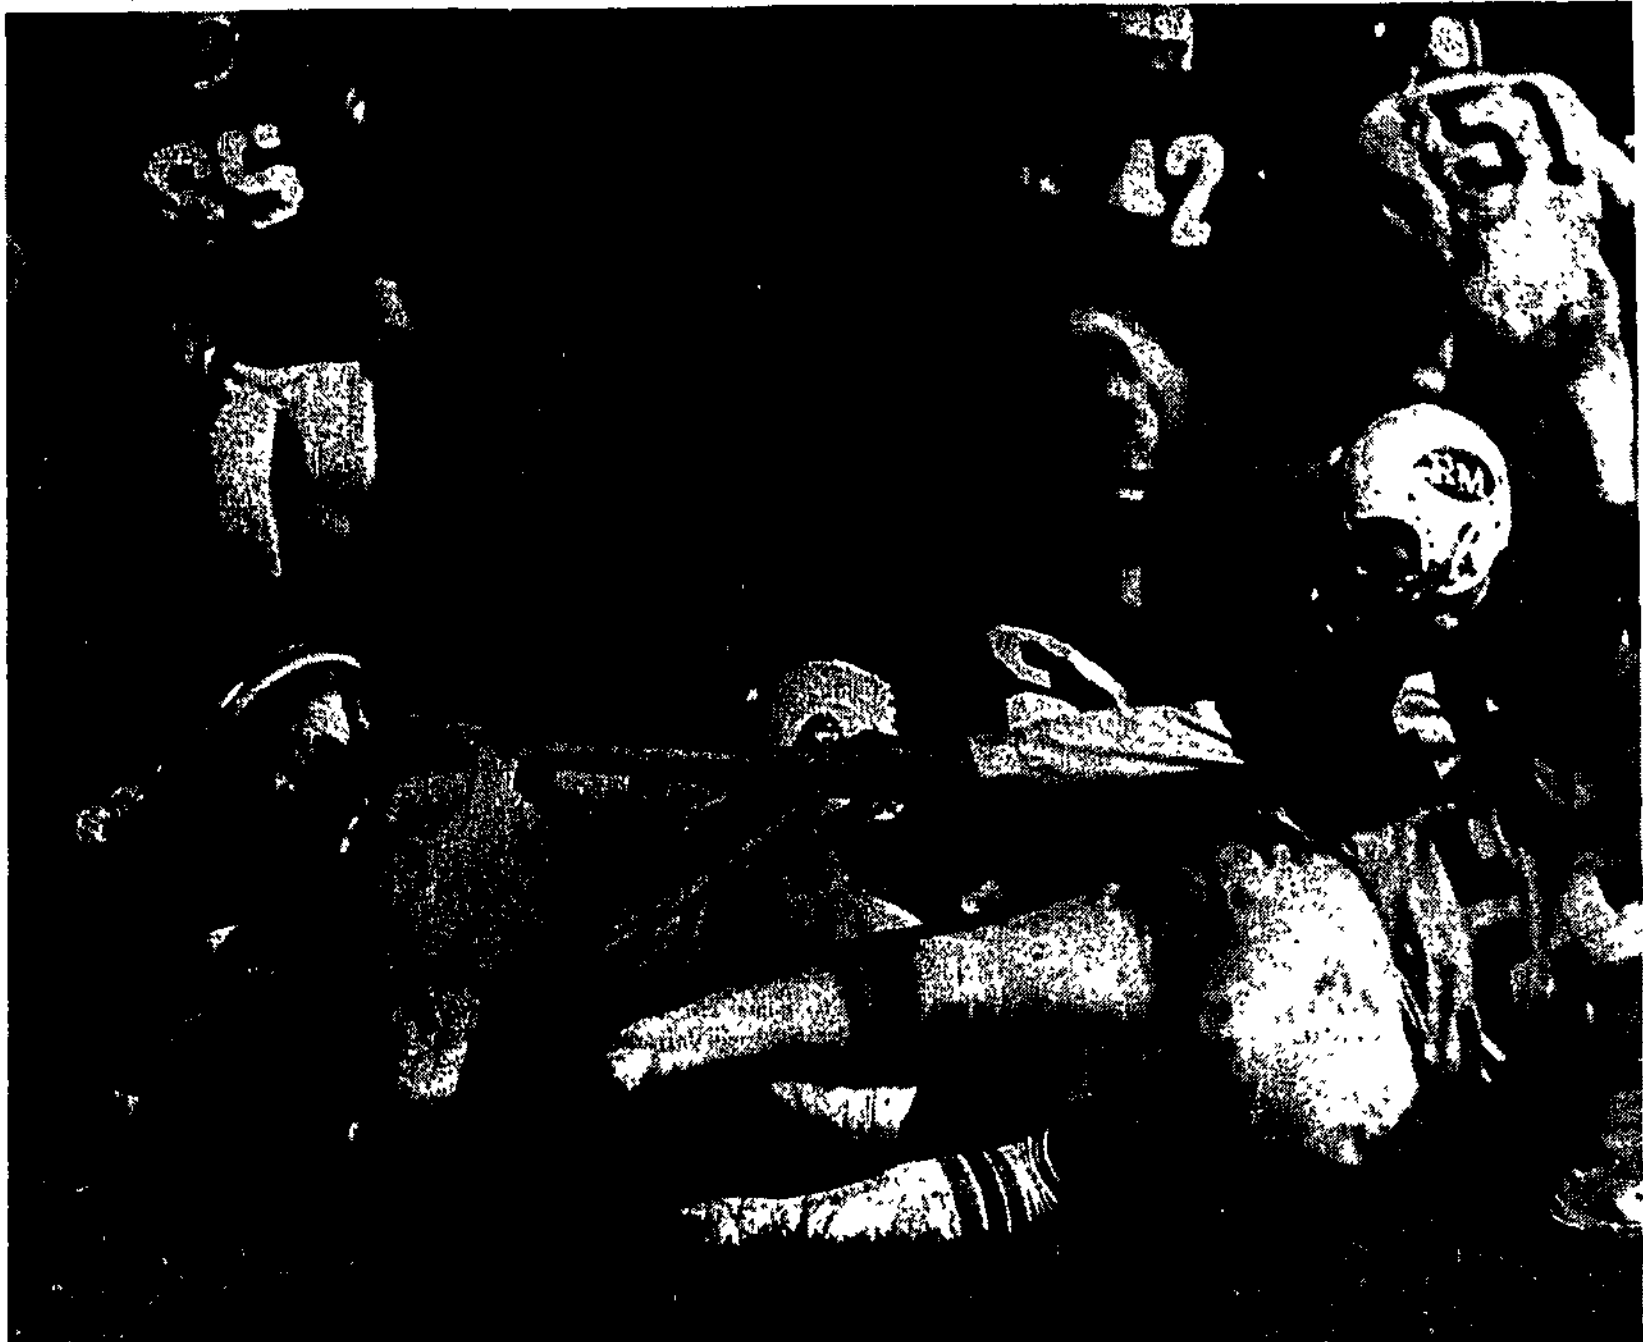

Although all the details have not been firmed up, the Novice and "B" tournaments are scheduled for the latter part of February in Pekin. The regular "A" level tournament will be played in its final rounds in the early part of March, at rinks still not determined.

The IAHA has decided to add a Junior level (18 and 19 year olds) to its "A" tourney. The age division championships will again involve the Miles (6 to 8 years old), the Squirt (9-10), PeeWees (11-12), Bantams (13-14), Midgets (15-16) and Juveniles (17-18).

"On the Novice and 'B' levels we will try to get as many age divisions in the tournaments as possible," said Marshall.

In the 1972 championship tourneys, Park Ridge teams took the Mike, Squirt, PeeWee and Juvenile crowns. Northbrook took the Bantam championship while Wilmette was the Midget winner.

IAHA President Jim Campbell of Elmhurst said that nearly 13,000 boys will play in organized competition this season.

SHIRT STOPPER. Mark Shannon of Rolling Meadows came off the bench and filled in admirably in the Mustang secondary. He stops Wheeling's Steve Miller single-handedly by tugging on his jersey and preventing a Wildcat touchdown. Wheeling scored on the ensuing play, but Meadows triumphed, 10-7. (Photo by Tom Grieger)

COOPERATIVE BLOOD REPLACEMENT PLAN 477-7500

Milk, Once Souring, In Comeback

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — The dairy farmers of California were in a panic. The decade of the '70s dawned upon them darkly. At the very moment the population of their state had exploded into the biggest in the nation, their sales were on a progressive downward spiral.

(The average Californian went from 149 quarts of Class 1 milk products consumed in 1967 to 125 quarts in 1970.)

To appreciate their anxiety, you should know that more than $1 billion dollars worth of milk is sold in California annually. It's big, big business.

We all grew up indoctrinated in the inherent values of milk. Vitamin D, calcium, all the rest. Makes your body grow. Drink your milk. Your bones will become strong.

Suddenly, milk had become a nasty word. Or so it seemed. The word "cholesterol" came into the public ken. The dairy boys were running scared.

SO THEY, the dairy farmers of California, decided little more than a year ago to reeducate you and me on the merits of milk. They did it like General Motors sells cars. The first step is to line up a high-powered advertising agency.

"At my high school, DeSoto High, we had a lot of soft drinks, a lot of candy. And at the time I didn't know that they were really bad for you. All I wanted was the sweet taste that I got from them. But now that I've grown up and I know better, ah, I've turned myself over to milk." — Vida Blue, baseball pitcher on television commercial.

What the heck, the milk industry is already as up-to-date and automated as IBM. When the dairy farms of southern California were squeezed out by residential tracts, instead of bringing the cows historically to pasture, they brought the pasture to the cows by layering them in modern feeding structures, automated the milking process with pushbutton controls, even down to bathing and artificially inseminating them, and if there were paranoid cows as a result, who could read a cow's mind anyhow?

In 1971, the California Milk Advisory Board, a quasi-state agency which represented the dairy men (they had split away from the national American Dairy Association), invited 58 ad agencies to bid for its business. The field was narrowed down to eight, and on a rainy February night in Modesto, the final presentations were heard on The Selling of the Milk, California style.

Chuck Bler, representing the San Francisco office of Cunningham & Walsh, was sitting in the bar around midnight, wondering about a futile trip home, when Gordon Rouhi, the executive director of the advisory board, came up and said the milk men had a question for him. Would the Milk Advisory Board be billed for trips from San Francisco to Modesto to service the account?

WHAT CHUCK felt like saying was that they'd even put in a conveyor belt 75 miles long to the little city in Stanislaus County that's the headquarters of the milk industry. Instead, he smiled sweetly and said, "No problem." His agency had landed the account, with an initial billing of $2.5 million!

That has now, a year and a half later, risen to a billing of $4.5 million, the result of a fantastic regional campaign which has popped eyes throughout the whole advertising world.

"We live in the land of milk and honey and I love milk." — Phyllis Diller, on a TV commercial.

Consumption of dairy products in the last year has gone up by 4.1 per cent, and the dairymen have increased production by $20 million worth of milk since the promotional campaign began. The boys at Cunningham & Walsh were still stumbling along last summer trying to figure out a program when it occurred simultaneously in a brainstorming session to Bler, the account supervisor, and Fred Manley, the creative director: "Drinking milk is a very personal thing."

They already had an established theme, "Every body needs milk," lavishly displayed in print media, with appropriate bodies. But why not get somebody who would be instantly recognizable to talk about his or her personal love affair with milk? It had to be authentic. The guy or gal really had to love milk. An art director at the agency knew Pat Boone's cousin. Pat's career needed a little jacking up. So they put him in front of a camera and let him talk. Whammo, they had a TV commercial.

"With six of us putting it away, it's gotta be 10 quarts of milk every other day. All I know is the milkman comes three times a week and he's getting a bad back from bringing it all in . . . On Laugh-In the other night they announced a new Pat Boone cocktail — warm milk with a jigger of cream." — Pat Boone

Next they got Abigail Van Buren and Vikki Carr, then in quick succession Ray Bolger, Karen Valentine (of "Room 222") and Vida Blue to describe their lactic experiences. They're never rehearsed. They're not even shown drinking milk. They just rap for an hour, and the results are edited down to one-minute television spots.

FOR THE FIRST year, they were shown only on California TV stations, but now Oregon and Washington have made deals to share the commercials. Because the Johnny Carson show originates in California, he has seen the commercials and discussed them with singer Vikki Carr on one of her Tonight Show appearances.

"We drank up a storm so there was never any great problem about our drinking milk . . . Could you be a milk-aholic? Milk-aholic — really love it." — Vikki Carr.

The latest talent signed to extol milk is the glamor boy of the Olympics, Mark Spitz, who just had to endure a couple of hours before the candid cameras to make $30,000. (That's up from $10,000 paid initially.) The fascinating spontaneity of the commercials really attracts attention.

Noting Vida Blue's role as a milk pusher, Flip Wilson commented, "I hear him say he drinks two and a half gallons of milk a day. I don't know what it does for his body, but it sure hasn't done much for his complexion."

Miss Carr, who siphoned part of her fee into her scholarship fund for Chicano students, says the selling of the milk has been the biggest stimulant so far to her singing career.

The dairymen of California are singing right along with her.

In olden times in Ireland and Scotland when the crops were all in and fall was in the air, the country people would gather at the nearest possible gathering point for a party to celebrate the good fortune of the harvest. The nearest gathering point for all obviously would be the crossroads, and party in Gaelic is "Ceili," hence: "Crossroads Ceili."

To celebrate our good fortune of the first six months we have been in operation, we want to have our own "Crossroads Ceili." Gather with us at the crossroads of Bothwell and Railroad St., in Palatine to make our first "Ceili" a complete success.

Child Care Course Benefits All

by WANDALYN RICE

The small children sat at the tiny table, clutching their sponges and watching the older girl demonstrate how to make pictures by dipping the sponges in paint and putting the paint on paper.

In another corner of the room, another girl read stories to two-year-olds. In other rooms other girls helped teachers at the Mount Prospect nursery school.

The older girls are supposed to be learning as much from the small children as the children are from them — at least that is the hope of Judy Kreutzer, child care teacher at Hersey High School.

Miss Kreutzer has been teaching child care at the high school for four years and last year she began making arrangements for her students to work in local nursery schools, day care centers and elementary schools. This semester she has 29 students in 11 schools.

"YOU CAN'T teach about children out of a book," she explains. "All you do is test them out of a book and the class ends up being a straight course in family relations."

Now, however, the girls spend the first three weeks and last three weeks of the semester-long course in their classroom at Hersey. After that they spend Mondays and Fridays in class and the other days work for two hours as volunteers at schools.

Some of the girls have never been around young children, Miss Kreutzer says and "they have a hard time relating to children because it's a whole new world."

At the same time, however, the high school girls are only a few years removed from childhood themselves and sometimes that shows. "Some of my kids have never finger painted before and when they start working with the younger children they just sit down and play with them," the teacher says.

THE BIGGEST problem the girls face is how to discipline the children, she says, but most of the girls enjoy their experiences anyway. "Their first reaction is to fall in love with all the children," Miss Kreutzer says.

Most of the girls in the class are juniors or seniors, she says, although last year one sophomore who was married

The married girl found the class especially valuable, Miss Kreutzer says, because "it really meant something to her."

One other girl in the class last year also apparently found the class especially relevant, Miss Kreutzer recalls. "She came over to me after it was over and said, 'the one thing this made me realize is that I don't want children right away.'"

Pupils Seek New Life In Christianity

Christianity, an old answer to the problems that people face, has found new life among students at local high schools.

Young people are turning to Christianity for the answer to the psychological depression and hopelessness with which they regard society today, said Dave Veerman, executive director of north area Campus Life, a religious awareness group for high school students.

The local chapters at Maine East and West high schools are growing in membership and this year a new chapter was founded at Maine North High School by Mike West, a campus life director. Directors predict an increase in the membership in Campus Life chapters in the north and Northwest suburban area by 2,500 students this year.

BRUCE DART, one of the campus life directors in the Northwest suburbs, said he believes the feeling of depression and despair is widespread among today's youth. Ten years ago high school students were optimistic about society, said Dart. They recognized that there were problems, but their attitude was that "given enough time, money, and education, we can lick anything," he said.

So much has happened in the last few years like the cold war, riots, and the racial problem that our "developed society seems void" and students feel burdened, frustrated and on the "brink of despair," said Dart.

Some turn to alcohol, the occult, encounter groups, sex or drugs to cope with their feelings. Those who turn to Jesus feel the love of a Supreme Being and the love of their fellow students, said Dart, and they "realize the spiritual division of their life is the most important."

Dart said campus life is successful, "because it works. Jesus is a reality," drugs aren't.

"We deal with the whole person," said Veerman, not just his social, spiritual or psychological make-up. "We try to help the high school student get things together in his own life," he said, "a relationship with God brings meaning to all these areas."

EACH CAMPUS life chapter holds meetings each week that are "primarily social," said Veerman. Students are encouraged to express their ideas and honesty and openness are emphasized.

Campus Life tries to make meetings as relevant and conversation provoking as possible, said Mike West, director at Maine West High School. In two recent meetings, one at Maine North and one at Maine West, the head coach of the school's varsity football team attended the meeting and was interviewed. After several questions about the new season posed by Mike West, coaches Louis E. Gartner, Maine North, and James Morel, Maine West, were asked, "What moral value do you see in football?" The conversation then turned to the relation between physical fitness and spiritual fitness.

Most of the students involved in campus life are upperclassmen, and surprisingly, many of them are Jewish, said Veerman.

At the Maine East campus life meetings, about one fifth of the group is Jewish, said Veerman, and about 40 per cent

CAMPUS LIFE MEETINGS always draw a large crowd of high school students. Campus Life, a religious awareness group for high school students has local chapters throughout the country. Dave Veerman, executive director of the north area division, said the campus life chapters at the four Maine High Schools are growing in membership each year. Last Thursday over 60 students attended Maine East chapter meeting at a student's home on Clara Dr., Niles.

of the students at Maine East are Jewish. "They don't object to being told about Christ, they object to being ignored," he said.

CAMPUS LIFE is an inter-denominational Christian youth organization that has chapters nation-wide, said Veerman. It is an independent group, not administered by schools, government or churches. It is a non-profit organization and director salaries and group facilities are funded through donations from churches, individuals, and civic groups.

Since 1964 north area Campus Life has grown from six clubs to 30 in the north and Northwest suburbs and the staff has grown from one full-time director to 13. The most recent addition to the staff is Bruce Dart, who will direct the proposed youth guidance program this year. Dart will work through the local police departments in the Northwest suburbs to counsel young people who are or have been in trouble with the law. The program is being organized this month.

Junior High Construction Behind Schedule

Construction on Friendship Junior High School, 550 Friendship Ln., Des Plaines, is falling behind schedule.

This is the report that William Gross, of Berger-Kelly & Associates, architects for the building, gave to the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 School Board at the regular Monday meeting.

Gross said construction could be done on only half of the working days in August and September, work during the rest of the days was rained out.

"THE CONTRACTOR assures us he will try to pick up the lost time," said Gross. "We are hoping for a break in the weather."

"If we can't make up the lost time, completion will have to be set back 30 days," said Gross.

Construction is scheduled to be completed at the end of February, 1973. The district had planned to open the school for classes in September, 1973.

Sixty per cent of the school is now under roof, Gross said. If the exterior work can be finished before severe winter weather sets in, the school will be completed on time.

Arthur Perry, assistant Dist. 59 superintendent for administration, told the board the district is already furnishing parts of the school.

Gross said there had been some vandalism at the construction site. The contractor's insurance pays for any damage to construction equipment at no cost to the school district.

Vandalism to the building is covered by insurance the district carries. Perry said that one claim for vandalism had been submitted and another was planned.

EAST MEETS WEST IN the Elk Grove High School production of "Teahouse of the August Moon," scheduled to be presented this weekend. The play is set in post-war Okinawa and will star Greg Harris, Doug Leland, Henry Gustafson, Sheila Quan and a goat named Lady Astor. Curtain times are 7:30 p.m. on Thursday and 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Parents Rap Basketball Program

A group of parents of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 junior high school students have protested to the school board about this year's program for basketball competition.

The group presented its protest to the board at the meeting Monday night.

A special meeting of the curriculum committee of the school board will be held tonight to discuss the problem.

The meeting will be at 7:30, in Dempster Junior High School, 420 Dempster St., Mount Prospect.

This year the school administration, following board direction, implemented a new program for junior high school basketball.

The board's order for the new program came in June after several weeks of discussion by the curriculum committee.

The program calls for an intramural program to run during November and December. In January, an inter-school program will begin. The inter-school program will concentrate on district schools playing each other. A few games with out-of-district schools are possible.

For the inter-school teams, each school will have two teams at both the seventh and eighth grade level. The teams at each grade level will be "equal," there will be no "A" teams and "B" teams.

Each boy on an inter-school team must play at least one quarter each game. No boy may play more than three quarters in any game.

Tuesday, Sharrie Hildebrandt, a member of the curriculum committee, said the program was changed to broaden student participation in sports and to improve the instruction aspect of sports activity.

In a statement read to the board Monday, Joseph Woelfel, spokesman for the group, said, "Viewed athletically, this new program is unacceptable with its unreasonable restrictions and controls."

"We find the de-emphasis of the competitive atmosphere and the 'one school team' concept to be a denial of all students, of certain desirable educational experiences: Namely, unified involvement, allegiance to a cause, school spirit, and school pride."

Zettek Tells Effect Of Proposed Tax Freeze

Elk Grove Village Pres. Charles Zettek said yesterday he was unsure exactly what Gov. Richard Ogilvie's proposed freeze on property tax levies would mean for the village, but he said if it meant belt-tightening, the village could do it.

"The village has been tightening its belt for the past two years, and can continue to do it for a while," he said.

Monday Ogilvie called for a special session of the General Assembly for Nov. 26 to consider a real estate tax freeze and possibly a 10 per cent reduction in property taxes.

Ogilvie said the plan was aimed at reducing local property taxes in the long run although some property owners could get higher tax bills next year before the full effect of the freeze was felt. He did not indicate how long the freeze would last.

THE PROPOSAL would require the support of three-fifths of each house in the legislature before going into effect.

Zettek said village property owners did enjoy a decrease in real estate taxes last year with no particular reduction in services, and this year's village real estate taxes are expected to drop an average 4 per cent.

"As far as a 10 per cent reduction in property taxes, I would have to know the assessed valuation of 1973 to determine that," he said.

However Zettek admitted that belt tightening could not go on indefinitely. "It doesn't take much brains to realize that as the village grows from 25,000 to 35,000 people and more, more money will be needed to provide the services. You can't put a freeze on the 1973 income and expect it to meet the needs of 1975 and 1976."

HE SAID THE federal revenue sharing, which recently was approved by both houses of Congress, could help the village meet its expenses. "The money we'll get from revenue sharing ($137,000) hasn't been allocated . . . but when it comes, it will go for services, not capital expenditures."

Jack Claes, Elk Grove Park District director, also said yesterday he didn't know what the governor plans to do about a freeze on local property tax levies, but the property tax is the only source of income for the park district.

"If our income is frozen, we cannot count on revenue sharing to pay our bills . . . because there is no clear cut indication that we (park districts) will participate in the revenue sharing program," Claes said.

'Sloppy' Canvass Irks Local Voters

Confusion continued yesterday throughout the Northwest suburbs about what was alternately called "overly aggressive" and "sloppy" techniques by election canvassers attempting to wipe the names of no-longer-eligible voters from the registration rolls.

The canvassers, it seems, challenged at least 4,000 eligible voters at the same time. Those voters have been barraging local village and township offices with their complaints.

Some 150,000 notices informing persons that their names will be stricken from registration lists unless they appear in the Chicago office of the Cook County Clerk's office were distributed late last week and early this week throughout suburban Cook County. The distribution appeared not to be politically motivated, but was widespread in Democratic as well as Republican areas. Each notice was signed by a Democratic and a Republican Canvasser.

CONFUSION AROSE as some suburban officials told irate callers that they must appear at the Cook County Clerk's office as of 9 p.m. yesterday in order to revalidate their voter registration, as indicated in the notices.

The election division of the clerk's office, however, has indicated a willingness to waive that requirement in most cases. Federal laws that protect the right of persons to vote can be interpreted in such a way as to allow challenged voters who have not moved or changed names to sign the backs of the notices they received as an affidavit of their eligibility to vote, according to election supervisor Thomas King.

"Some people work or just can't make it to Chicago," he said. "We try to work something out. We're not here to take people arbitrarily off the rolls."

Signed notices mailed to the clerk's office should have been postmarked by 9 p.m. Tuesday, King said, but may be accepted later if the voter calls the clerk's office and explains the circumstances.

King estimated that some 4,000 of the 150,000 persons who received notices challenging their eligibility are duly registered and will be allowed to vote.

KING SAID THAT the election canvassers in each precinct, one Democrat and one Republican, are supposed to be reasonable certain that an individual no longer lives at the address at which he is registered before leaving a warning form indicating his voter registration may be canceled.

The warning is to be followed by a post card. However, many residents said they never received a warning notice.

Des Plaines City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach attributed the widespread distribution of notices to "sloppy canvassing."

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nixon's chief Vietnam adviser, Henry Kissinger, met with North Vietnamese negotiators, in Paris then headed for Saigon to consult with South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu. The stepped up activity fueled speculation that progress was being made in the peace talks.

South Korean President Park Chung Hee proclaimed martial law in a surprise move he said was to protect the nation from unfavorable changes in the country.

At least four persons including two foreigners have been arrested by military authorities for involvement in an alleged Communist assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

The Nation

A squadron of 40 search planes flew through fog, wind, and rain along the southern Alaska coast seeking a missing plane carrying House Democratic leader Hale Boggs, Alaska's lone congressman and two other men.

Law enforcement sources in New York disclosed 100 policemen were among 677 persons with alleged mob involvement subpoenaed in what officials called the biggest crackdown on the Mafia in history.

Hoping that he has found an issue that Democrats will rally around, George McGovern stepped up his attacks against what he called Republican sabotage and subversion.

The State

A 28-year-old Chicago man was arrested after a robber took a secretary hostage and was given $10,523 in a brown paper sack at the First Bank of Oak Park.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears charged that State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan has closed his eyes after the 1969 Black Panther police raid to everything but the police version of the case.

Gov. Richard Ogilvie said he will order a complete reassessment of property in Cook County if the county assessor does not make drastic changes in his operation next year.

The War

Communist troops believed working under a "plant the flag" directive called the "X-10" resolution seized five Central Highlands hamlets and an artillery base, but South Vietnamese forces quickly recaptured one hamlet and retook the artillery position.

SMILING NEW Schaumburg residents Mimi and Mark. The Kims, who live at 436 Cedarcrest Dr. citizens as soon as they are eligible. Mark, born Charles Kim hold their children, Edward, left, and emigrated from Korea and plan to become U. S. here, is the "only American in the family."

Korean Family Finds

Cultural Gap Wide One, Too

by MARILYN HEISER

It's a long way from South Korea to Chicago.

Not just in miles. The cultural gap between an Eastern and Western society is a wide one.

But Mimi and Charles Kim, who made the trek 4½ years ago, are happy with their new country and its lifestyle.

They and their two sons, Edward, 4½, and Mark, 3, just moved to Schaumburg, trading in their Chicago apartment for a home in the Timbercrest subdivision.

Commenting before yesterday's imposition of martial law in his homeland, Kim made some comparisons of political systems.

A model of the United States democratic system was imposed on Korea after World War II, Kim said, but it hasn't worked there. "I doubt if it ever will," he said.

THE DEMOCRATIC social system grew up in America and doesn't transplant successfully, Kim said. "This is a unique country. The civilization and values are so different in Korea. There's a fundamental philosophic conflict between the two countries," Kim said.

"The West is based on now. The Eastern philosophy is based on the future. You are trained to think things happening now are only a temporary situation and an insignificant segment in your life."

The Kims have opted for now, with a little bit of the Korean values mixed in.

"Mark's the only American in the family," Kim said laughing. The other members of the family will apply for their citizenship as soon as they are eligible.

Naturalization rules require a five-year permanent residency, which the Kims established in 1970, and the passing of an exam.

"We thought seriously about giving up our Korean citizenship when we applied for permanent residency," Kim said. "We like America. In fact, I think of myself as American."

WHAT DO THE KIMS like most about the United States?

"The people," Mrs. Kim said. "And the customs, especially the freedoms for women."

Korea, they said, is a very traditional society, with conservative values, and rigid social restraints on individual thinking and behavior.

"Each lifestyle is individual here. In Korea, life is centered on the family, including many relatives," Kim said.

But the Kims also want to preserve their Korean background and values.

They belong to the Korean Cultural Center in Chicago, formed in 1950 by the original members of the Korean community here. There are perhaps 10,000 Koreans in Chicago now, most of whom came in the late 1960's when the immigration regulations relaxed, Kim said.

MRS. KIM RECENTLY received a letter of commendation from the prime minister of South Korea for her work in teaching her native language to second generation Korean children.

"It's one of Mimi's principles that our children should learn the traditional Korean values, respect for parents, friends, elders and teachers," Kim said.

They also speak Korean at home, so the children will know both English and Korean. "When they have finished high school we plan to send them to Korea for a year or two of education," Kim said.

Being bilingual was a problem for a while with the youngest child, Mark. "When he was very little, he used to get confused, and spoke in a mixture of Korean and English. He hears English from his friends and on television, and used to get pretty mixed up," Kim said.

Now both children know to speak Korean at home and English to everyone else, he said.

Board Adopts Boundary Changes For Most Schools

Boundary changes affecting most of the schools in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 were officially adopted by the school board Monday night.

The changes, effective in September, 1973, affect Byrd, Clearmont, Grant Wood, Frost, High Ridge Knolls and Brentwood schools, and Dempster, Holmes, Lively and Friendship Junior high schools.

Students affected by the changes who would be entering the eighth grade in September, 1973, will have the option of staying at the school they have been attending or transferring to the new junior high school for their district.

The changes were adopted by a 5-3 vote of the board.

Gerald Smiley, one of the dissenting voters, said he opposed the changes because it meant the board "dropped the neighborhood school concept." He said that busing children to schools to utilize empty classroom space was "like moving bags of potatoes to the marketplace, with the empty schools being the market place."

THE CHANGES adopted by the board followed the recommendations of the special citizens' committee on attendance boundaries. The committee was ordered by the board in April to review present and expected student population throughout the district and make any necessary recommendations to relieve overcrowding.

Members of the committee responded to Smiley's statement by saying the committee found there would be 1,000 empty seats throughout the district. The committee could not recommend additions to existing school buildings with that much space available.

The board did not adopt the committee's recommendation for a boundary change at Cook School in Elk Grove Village. The board did accept the committee's recommendation that the area warranted close attention because overcrowding might develop at the school.

A boundary change will be made at Cook if and when a review by the administration shows an overcrowding situation is possible.

Children in the Diamond Point housing development in Mount Prospect have the option this year of remaining at Brentwood School, Des Plaines or returning to Frost School, Mount Prospect.

The area was placed in the Brentwood boundary by an action taken in August by the school board. The boundary committee recommended that Diamond Point be returned to Frost.

IN OTHER ACTION at the meeting: —The board authorized disbursements with educational funds expenditures totaling $82,631.63.

—A financial statement for the three months ending Sept. 30, 1972 was presented to the board by Arthur Perry, assistant superintendent for administration.

—Board member Erwin Poklaski gave a report on the Northwest Educational Cooperative.

—Judith Zanca was appointed delegate to the Illinois School Board Association meeting. Poklaski was appointed alternate delegate.

—The board appointed Robert Brower as principal of Friendship Junior High School, which is scheduled to open for classes in September, 1973.

—The board raised the salaries for 29 teachers who have gone up in pay scale by furthering their education.

—Resignations were accepted from three teachers — LeArdaye Lowrie, Elise Perlen and Orval Rohrs.

Teen Board Member Pleased By His Appointment

Lester Hanneman III, an 18-year-old Harper College freshman from Hoffman Estates, is probably the youngest zoning board of appeals member in the state. He is positively the youngest person ever appointed to the Hoffman Estates Zoning Board of Appeals.

Hanneman a 1972 graduate of James B. Conant High School, said he first learned about the board's function as a senior at Conant High.

"The chairman of the plan commission and zoning board talked to us about their roles in village government, and invited anyone that was interested to take part," he said.

"Well, I'm interested as a resident of this village. I think it's time to take part in its affairs," said Hanneman.

"I'm pleased at the appointment. I never expected to be selected because I thought there would be so many applicants," Hanneman said. "I have a lot to learn about village government and decided to apply for the position, figuring it was the best way to learn about how a village works from the inside out."

Hanneman will sit in on his first meeting tonight in the council chambers.

"I had to squeeze in hours of reading past zoning board of appeals' minutes between my homework assignments to prepare for the session," he said.

His courses at Harper are preparing him for a career in medicine, said Hanneman.

"A part-time job at Sears in Woodfield Mall will help me pay my way through medical school," he added.

Mayor Frederick Downey appointed Hanneman to a 3-year term Monday to replace member Walter Ramsey, who resigned to move out of state.

Hanneman lives at 564 Chippendale Ct. with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hanneman Jr.

Draft Of Health Care Needs Study To Be Reviewed Soon

Review of the preliminary draft of a long-awaited feasibility study outlining the health care needs for Schaumburg Township is being planned for the last week of October.

The study, commissioned by the Northwest Cook County Health Needs study committee several months ago, is being conducted by the consulting firm of Ernst and Ernst.

The feasibility study and the work of the committee is being coordinated by the North Suburban Association for Health Resources (NSAHR).

A spokesman for Dr. Sheldon Waldstein, executive director of NSAHR, said the meeting is tentatively scheduled for Oct. 30, but that date is yet to be confirmed by other committee members.

Representatives from Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Northwest Community Hospital, Roselle and Hanover Park make up the committee.

The feasibility study was to have been completed last month, but delays in collecting data forced an extension of the completion date.

Local officials began the study to determine the need for hospital and related health care facilities in Schaumburg Township. A portion of the study is being financed by a state grant.

Downey To Write Rep. Crane About Revenue Sharing Plan

"I'm going to write to my congressman," said Hoffman Estates Mayor Frederick Downey as he complained that Hoffman Estates and other Northwest suburbs are going to be gypped of thousands of dollars in federal revenue sharing receipts.

When congress passed the federal revenue sharing bill this month it called for distribution of approximately $30 billion over a five to six-year period, Downey said.

Hoffman Estates first year's share is $73,000.

"Each city, town or municipality's share is determined on a three point formula using population, local tax effort and economic level as factors," said Downey.

"Yet neighboring Elk Grove Village, with almost equal population and economic levels, is getting $137,000," said Downey. He explained that according to the federal government's figures, Elk Grove Village residents make a greater tax effort than Hoffman Estates does.

"That's ridiculous," said Downey. "We are being penalized because, like most of the Illinois suburbs, we are taxed by a lot of separate taxing bodies. In Hoffman Estates we pay to separate fire and library districts. However, the federal government only uses the municipal tax as its guideline. Elk Grove pays higher municipal tax as its guideline. Elk Grove pays higher municipal taxes because the fire department and library are village operated, and not separate taxing districts.

"So they are considered as making a greater local tax effort and get $137,000 as their first year's share," said Downey.

"Yet, when it comes down to basics we both are paying the same amount of taxes but ours are spread out," he said.

Downey also pointed out that Schaumburg, like Hoffman Estates, is rated to get $3 a person. "It's true they are at similar economic and population levels as Hoffman Estates. But considering they levy no municipal tax I wonder at how congress arrived at the same rate for our towns," said Downey.

Downey said his letter to U.S. Rep. Philip Crane (R) will ask for clarification of the formula and also if the congress made provisions to consider special census results.

"As I understand, revenue sharing is based on the 1970 census. We grew by at least 8,000 people since then, and paid for a special census in 1972. If they don't count those 8,000 people we lose $24,000 each year, even if we don't grow any bigger," said Downey.

'Walk For Jim' Slated Oct. 28

A Mount Prospect neighborhood is going to work to raise money for the medical expenses of a 14-year-old boy hospitalized for the last six weeks with blood poisoning.

James O'Brien, who would have been a freshman this fall at Forest View High School, was hospitalized early in September with the infection. He has had several blood transfusions and is scheduled for an operation at the end of this week. Medical bills have exceeded the family's hospitalization policies. James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Brien, 923 See-Gwan Ave., Mount Prospect.

About 20 neighbors of the O'Briens have planned a "Walk for Jim" on Oct. 28. Volunteers will hike 15 miles to raise funds for the medical expenses. The neighbors have also set up a trust fund for James O'Brien at the Mount Prospect State Bank.

THOSE WORKING on the project are seeking prospective volunteers and donors for the hike. Donors will pledge a sum to volunteers for each mile walked.

The route will be 15 miles long and will run through Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights. It will begin at St. Raymond Catholic Church in Mount Prospect and end at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights. Volunteers to man checkpoints along the hike route are also needed.

Persons who want to donate to the trust fund are asked to make checks payable to the "James O'Brien Trust Fund" and mail them to the bank in Mount Prospect.

Volunteers are also asking that blood donations be made in James O'Brien's name. Donors can give blood at any local hospital.

Anyone who wants to be a volunteer or a donor for the hike can call Chris Hunsinger at 394-0425 or Betty Allen at 253-4844.

Year's Supervision In Robbery Case

John Wilson, 40, of 250 Colfax, Paintine was placed on one-year's supervision in Elk Grove Village circuit court last week in connection with charges of attempted robbery.

The supervision is neither a guilty nor an innocent finding, but charges are dropped after the year's time if the individual is not charged in a similar incident.

Wilson was charged after he allegedly forced his way into the home of an Elk Grove Village woman on July 18.

A continuance was granted yesterday by Judge Frank B. Machala in the case of Lee Clark Jennings, who is charged with the murders last month of Mrs. Barbara Flanagan, 27, and her 18-month-old daughter, Renee.

Jennings, who earlier had stated he would defend himself, was represented in court yesterday by a public defender who asked for the continuance to Nov. 14. The assistant state's attorney handling the case, Patrick Driscoll, raised no objections to the continuance request.

Jennings was charged with the murders Oct. 1. The Flanagan's nude and beaten bodies were found Sept. 11 in the Community Presbyterian Church parking lot, 407 N. Main St., Mount Prospect.

Burglar Alarm Acts As Fire Detector

A burglar alarm device acted as a smoke detector Monday night and prevented extensive fire damage to the Bley Engineering Co. plant, 690 Greenleaf Ave., Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulet said.

Hulet said smoke from a fire, in an overheated electric motor crossed the path of a photo-electric cell used as a burglar alarm and set off a signal in the village police station. He said policemen who arrived at the scene discovered the smoke and called the fire department.

Damage was estimated at $150 and was limited to the electric motor.

Miller Moving Dirt From School Site — Finally

by RICH HONACK

The dirt on the Washington Irving School site in the Mill Creek subdivision of Buffalo Grove is finally being moved — and not at the expense of the taxpayers.

It was feared that Dist. 21 would have to take almost $12,000 from its tax funds to have the dirt removed because Miller Builders was almost two months behind in getting the job done.

Miller, in an agreement with the school district and the Village of Buffalo Grove, had promised to remove the dirt at no cost to either.

School authorities had said the dirt was to be removed before Aug. 30, but because it wasn't, construction on the new school is more than two months behind.

THE SCHOOL BOARD late Thursday night called on the village to help in the cause, and Supt. Kenneth Gill said, "we are at the village's mercy." He said that if the village didn't get Miller to move the dirt, Dist. 21 would have to move it.

A private contractor was to begin the work for the school district yesterday morning. However, the contractor was called off after Buffalo Grove Village Manager Daniel Larson called Assistant Superintendent John Barger last Monday night and assured him Miller would start moving the excess earth Tuesday morning.

Miller had crews working all day yesterday in an effort to get the dirt moved and workmen are expected to clear the land as soon as possible.

THE BUFFALO GROVE Village Board became involved in the case Monday night and ordered Larson to do whatever was necessary to get the dirt moved, starting at 7 a.m. yesterday.

The board looked for some type of legal action that could possibly be taken to get the dirt moved. One suggestion was to issue a stop-work order against Miller Builders until the work was completed.

"In my opinion, they have delayed something that they promised to do four to six weeks ago," said Trustee James Shirley. Village Pres. Gary Armstrong agreed, saying, "We were given absolute assurance that the dirt would be moved."

He further explained yesterday that

excess earth from the site. Dist. 21 officials planned to have their own contractor remove the dirt at a cost of more than $12,000 yesterday, before the Village of Buffalo Grove stepped in and asked Miller to speed up the process. The new school is more than two months behind in construction.

'Overzealous' Voter Canvass Leads To Confusion Here

Confusion continued yesterday throughout the Northwest suburbs about what was alternately called "overly aggressive" and "sloppy" techniques by election canvassers attempting to wipe the names of no-longer-eligible voters from the registration rolls.

The canvassers, it seems, challenged at least 4,000 eligible voters at the same time. Those voters have been barraging local village and township offices with their complaints.

Some 150,000 notices informing persons that their names will be stricken from registration lists unless they appear in the Chicago office of the Cook County Clerk's office were distributed late last week and early this week throughout suburban Cook County.

The distribution appeared not to be politically motivated, but was widespread in Democratic as well as Republican areas. Each notice was signed by a Democratic and a Republican Canvasser.

CONFUSION AROSE as some suburban officials told irate callers that they must appear at the Cook County Clerk's office as of 9 p.m. yesterday in order to revalidate their voter registration, as indicated in the notices.

The election division of the clerk's office, however, has indicated a willingness to waive that requirement in most cases.

Federal laws that protect the right of persons to vote can be interpreted in such a way as to allow challenged voters who have not moved or changed names to sign the backs of the notices they received as an affidavit of their eligibility to vote, according to election supervisor Thomas King.

"Some people work or just can't make it to Chicago," he said. "We try to work something out. We're not here to take people arbitrarily off the rolls."

Signed notices mailed to the clerk's office should have been postmarked by 9 p.m. Tuesday, King said, but may be accepted later if the voter calls the clerk's office and explains the circumstances.

King estimated that some 4,000 of the 150,000 persons who received notices challenging their eligibility are duly registered and will be allowed to vote.

KING SAID THAT the election canvassers in each precinct, one Democrat and one Republican, are supposed to be reasonable certain that an individual no longer lives at the address at which he is registered before leaving a warning form indicating his voter registration may be canceled.

The warning is to be followed by a post card. However, many residents said they never received a warning notice.

Des Plaines City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach attributed the widespread distribution of notices to "sloppy canvassing."

Meet To Eye Panel Membership Cuts

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling trustees have scheduled a meeting Oct. 30 with members of four village commissions to discuss the possibility of reducing the commissions' membership to five.

The trustees decided to arrange the meeting at a committee meeting Monday night after voicing strong opinions in favor of reducing the membership of the human relations, public relations, industrial and youth commissions.

Trustee Albert Lang originally proposed the reduction in July, saying that smaller commissions would be more workable because of smaller quorum requirements.

Presently there are nine positions on the public relations commission and industrial commission, and seven positions each on the youth and the human relations commissions. Each of these commissions has at least two vacancies in their membership.

TRUSTEE Ron Bruhn said he favored the membership reduction. "I think sometimes the collective thinking of five is better than the collective thinking of nine," he said. He added that with five people it is often easier to reach agreement.

When the idea was first proposed, members of the youth and the public relations commission expressed strong opposition to the membership cut.

Members of the public relations commission had objected to the reduction, saying it would not help overcome current commission problems. They said that lack of cooperation from the village board was responsible for commission's inability to follow through on projects.

In a letter to the village board, June Orlovski, chairman of the youth commission, said more people were needed to properly handle all facets of her commission. Instead of a membership cut, she suggested increasing the commission membership to 10.

"IT IS NECESSARY and important that the commission have sufficient manpower to keep abreast with all the 'youth work' now going on and being prepared," Mrs. Orlovski wrote. "We must be able to fully investigate splinter group activities, identify duplication of effort and then urge consolidation of their efforts to conserve manpower and money."

She added that members of the youth commission have "reached a saturation point, and I doubt very much that any one of us could accept an assignment to attend another meeting."

Because the trustees expect lengthy discussion with the commission members about the proposed reduction, the meeting has been scheduled for the fifth Monday of the month when no other meeting is planned.

The trustees are asking that only two members of each commission attend, and suggested that the chairmen and secretaries represent their commissions at the meeting. "I wouldn't want the entire membership," Trustee Michael Valenza said.

EARLIER in the committee meeting, the trustees interviewed two applicants for vacant commission seats. Park Supt. Dave Phillips interviewed for the youth commission and Chuck Kohlstedt interviewed for the plan commission. Two other applicants for seats on the industrial commission did not keep their interview appointments.

During the interviews, the trustees emphasized their desire to have commission members who would go through proper channels in case of a disagreement. They told both applicants that commission members should be pro-Wheeling, and therefore should not generate any bad publicity for the village.

The trustees decided to recommend appointment for both applicants interviewed. They will submit their recommendations to Village Pres. Ted Scanlon, who will then decide whether to appoint the two. Action on the appointments is not expected until after the meeting with commission members.

Car Kills Texan On Wolf Rd.

A 19-year-old youth struck and killed by a car in Prospect Heights Monday night was identified early yesterday as Charles Crawford of Arlington, Tex.

Cook County Sheriff's Police said the youth, who may have been hitchhiking to Wheeling, was identified by his brother, also of Texas. The accident occurred at 7 p.m. on Wolf Road, just north of Euclid Avenue.

A Cook County Coroner's inquest into the death will be held in several weeks. Meanwhile, Antonio Campos, 29, of Wheeling has been charged with passing on the right and driving too fast to avoid an accident. Police said Campos, 200 S. Wheeling Rd., was passing on the right shoulder when the car he was driving struck Crawford. He is scheduled to appear in Niles court Dec. 6.

Crawford was taken to Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nixon's chief Vietnam adviser, Henry Kissinger, met with North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris then headed for Saigon to consult with South Vietnamese President Ngy Nguyen Van Thieu. The stepped up activity fueled speculation that progress was being made in the peace talks.

South Korean President Park Chung Hee proclaimed martial law in a surprise move he said was to protect the nation from unfavorable changes in the country.

At least four persons including two foreigners have been arrested by military authorities for involvement in an alleged Communist assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

The Nation

A squadron of 40 search planes flew through fog, wind, and rain along the southern Alaska coast seeking a missing plane carrying House Democratic leader Hale Boggs, Alaska's lone congressman and two other men.

Law enforcement sources in New York disclosed 100 policemen were among 677 persons with alleged mob involvement subpoenaed in what officials called the biggest crackdown on the Mafia in history.

Hoping that he has found an issue that Democrats will rally around, George McGovern stepped up his attacks against what he called Republican sabotage and subversion.

The State

A 28-year-old Chicago man was arrested after a robber took a secretary hostage and was given $10,533 in a brown paper sack at the First Bank of Oak Park.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears charged that State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan has closed his eyes after the 1969 Black Panther police raid to everything but the police version of the case.

Gov. Richard Ogilvie said he will order a complete reassessment of property in Cook County if the county assessor does not make drastic changes in his operation next year.

The War

Communist troops believed working under a "plant the flag" directive called the "X-10" resolution" seized five Central Highlands hamlets and an artillery base, but South Vietnamese forces quickly recaptured one hamlet and retook the artillery position.

Village To Pay Half Signal Cost

by LYNN ASINOF

The Wheeling Village Board formally agreed Monday night to pay half the cost of installing traffic lights at the corner of Dundee and Schoenbeck roads.

According to the agreement, the state and the village each will pay $23,000 for the project. The work will be handled by the state, and Wheeling will assume the power costs for operating the lights.

The signals are being installed in conjunction with the widening of Dundee Road. Village Mgr. George Passolt said he did not expect work on the project to begin for another eight or nine months.

The lights were approved by the state based on traffic counts taken in June on Dundee Road, Schoenbeck Road and St. Armand Lane. Heavy cross traffic on Schoenbeck Road and St. Armand Lane made the intersection eligible for traffic lights according to state standards.

EARLIER ATTEMPTS by the village to have traffic signals installed at the intersection failed because state surveys did not show sufficient traffic volumes.

Under normal circumstances, the village would not have to pay for the signals if they decided to be put on the waiting list for traffic lights. The village would have had to wait several years to have the lights installed this way.

Village officials decided to speed up the process by paying for the lights according to a state formula. The proportion paid was determined by the number of streets entering the intersection that are maintained by the village.

The board also approved a resolution that will allow officials to pay for the project with state Motor Fuel Tax funds.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board presented the Wheeling-Elmhurst Grove United Fund with $2,000 to help kick off this year's fund-raising campaign.

Bids for the Anthony Road storm sewer that will run into Husky Park were opened, and the project was awarded to the M-W Construction Co., low bidder at $15,609.23. Work on the project, which is designed to alleviate flooding in that area, is expected to be finished this year.

This is the first part of a comprehensive flood control program proposed by Trustee Bill Hein to be put into action.

Bids also were opened for a water meter cleaner and a 1973 engine analyzer. (The bid sheets will be reviewed by the village manager and awarded at next week's board meeting.)

THE BOARD ALSO passed an ordinance prohibiting parking along Dundee Road from the Des Plaines River to Landwehr Road. Although the village currently does not allow parking along this strip, the county requested that the ordinance be passed to facilitate the widening of Dundee Road to a four-lane highway with median strip there.

Begin Yoga Class

A yoga class sponsored by the Prospect Heights Park District will begin this afternoon.

The class which will run for eight weeks will begin at 1:30 p.m. and last until 2:30 p.m. at the park district office, 9B Elmhurst Rd. Fee is $12.

Decoupage will begin next Tuesday at 7 p.m. The two-hour class will be held at Hersey High School in Arlington Heights. Fee is $12 for eight weeks.

Knitting and crocheting classes have been postponed until next year due to the illness of the instructor.

The trustees voted to reduce bond for Fairway Greens and the Chalet Apartments (VIP Apartments). Both had completed a substantial amount of work guaranteed by the bond, and therefore were eligible for bond reduction.

After other business of the meeting was completed, the board met in executive session to discuss acquisition of land and personnel. Village Pres. Ted Scanlon was absent.

Driver Ticketed In Fatal Crash

Spencer Askfeldt, 22, of unincorporated Palatine Township, has been ticketed in connection with an auto accident Monday night which claimed three lives.

Askfeldt, of Rural Route 3, Rand Road, was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid a collision.

The car he was driving eastbound on Lake-Cook Road struck a southbound car on Quentin Road which apparently went through a stop sign, according to Cook County Sheriff's police.

The driver of the car, Thomas K. Deuel, 19, of 189A White Pine Rd., Long Grove, his sister, Jean T., 6, and another passenger, Cheryl Wakeman, 16, of 555 Carpenter Dr., Palatine, were killed in the crash.

Askfeldt was treated and released from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

Deuel was a 1971 graduate of Palatine High School, where Miss Wakeman was a junior. Jean Deuel was a student at Quentin Elementary School in unincorporated Palatine Township.

An inquest in the deaths is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Oct. 26 at the Alhgrim and Sons Funeral Home, Palatine.

Assessment Appeal Deadline Nears

Homeowners in Wheeling Township have only until Monday to appeal property tax assessments to the Cook County Board of Appeals.

The township books were received Friday by the board of appeals, which allows ten days for appeals to be made. If there is any reason to believe that the county assessor's decision on value of your property was in error, now is the time to appeal "or forever hold your peace," said Marshall Theroux, Wheeling Township assessor.

Theroux suggests that the best evidence in making an appeal is to learn the assessments of comparable property in your neighborhood. He said his office is prepared to help residents get this information.

Teacher-Board Pact Meeting

Mediation over a 1972-73 contract dispute in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 will begin Nov. 18.

Both teacher and school board negotiation teams have agreed to hire David Dolnick of the American Arbitration Association (AAA) as mediator. Dolnick's fee of $150 a day will be paid by the board and the Prospect Heights Education Association (PHEA).

Bob Atterbury, head of the PHEA bargaining team, said Friday he is unsure if mediation will settle the dispute. "It's really hard to say because we have never been through mediation before," he said. "But I would like to be optimistic that we can settle on Nov. 18."

ITEMS TO BE mediated include salary and extra-duty pay. The two teams agreed to mediation last month after they failed to reach an agreement during their thirteenth bargaining session. Last May both sides agreed to seek mediation but changed their minds because of the cost involved.

If mediation fails, the next step is fact-finding in which each side files a brief supporting their stand. The fact-finder then investigates the facts in the case, including the district's budget, and makes a recommendation. In Dist. 23, the recommendation is not binding.

"In the end, it's still up to the school board," Atterbury said.

The board's latest contract offer includes a total merit pay fund of $16,725, the same as granted teachers last year, and $14,438 in extra-duty pay funds. The board has also offered teachers a 2.6 per cent cost-of-living salary increase, which would cost the district $18,238 more than last year.

The PHEA has requested $47,000 in merit funds and have indicated teachers would agree to the 2.6 per cent salary increase if they received their merit pay request.

The township office is located at 1818 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

A new assessment procedure went into effect this year. Assessors no longer figure an automatic depreciation factor in determining assessments, but base assessments on "fair market value," or what the house would bring if sold.

Theroux said that in most cases this will mean an increase in taxes for older homes, because past tax bills have been based on a figure that was less than what the home actually was worth. New homes, on the other hand, probably have seen a reduction in assessed valuation, he said.

THE INCREASE in taxes for older homes could mean savings that would have been realized under the old assessment system by elderly homeowners using the Homestead Exemption "come close to being wiped out." But, he added that the Homestead Exemption is still valuable in that elderly persons' taxes would be even higher than they are now had they not applied for the exemption.

Residents who have made certain improvements to their homes during the past year may also notice an increase in their tax bills, Theroux said. Some improvements do not increase the assessed valuation of a home, but others will increase taxes as the value of the home is increased. This has been true in the past, and is not an effect of the new assessment procedures.

A two-car crash at Lake-Cook and Quentin roads Monday night killed two persons and injured several others.

TV Tags Him 'Mr. Average American'

by TONI GINETTI

Richard Johnson, Rolling Meadows' nationally known "average American," might consider dubbing himself with another title, that of a bonafide television celebrity.

The tag seems fitting in view of the fact that Johnson is now a veteran of three TV telecasts produced by the National Public Affairs Center for Television (NPACT) based in Washington, D. C. Each show was designed to focus on the plight of the typical middle-income American as seen through a study of a scientifically-chosen prototype, Johnson.

In the first, televised in February, he was the average guy caught in the middle of the economic squeeze, earning enough to live comfortably but not having much left after the bills get paid.

The second show, seen last month, followed Johnson on behind-the-scenes look at a presidential campaign with Democratic hopeful Sen. George McGovern. The latest telecast, aired Monday night on WTTW-TV (Channel 11) was actually a repeat of the second show.

"THE COMMENTS from NPACT on the show have been very good," Johnson said yesterday. "I was kind of surprised at the comments I made at the end, but I thought the photography and the editing was excellent."

As a barnstormer on the campaign trail, Johnson traveled almost 8,500 miles and visited ten cities in one week. The pace was hectic, and Johnson admits he marvels at how any man could stand the kind of campaigning a presidential race requires.

"I can't imagine how anyone can endure that kind of campaigning for three or four months. It's really an effort for a human being. I know I was completely exhausted after just five days."

Johnson says he hasn't been asked to "star" in any more shows, but that doesn't necessarily mean the end of his celebrity career. "I've written my memoirs of the trip and sent them to NPACT in Washington and I'm hoping they'll publish them."

"AS FAR AS any future activities, I don't know of any. But I suppose I'll be getting calls just before the election asking me what I think of the candidates and who I'll vote for."

At the time he took the trip, Johnson said he hadn't made up his mind as to whom his choice for the presidency would be. Asked if he had made up his mind yet, he said, "I'm still undecided, but I'm still leaning toward the President."

"I see a little bit of good in both men, but I guess I won't be able to say for sure who I'll vote for until after I've pulled the lever on Nov. 7," he added with a laugh.

Johnson says he has received no reaction from the McGovern staff on the telecast of the trip but adds with a touch of annoyance in his otherwise cheerful voice, "I keep getting literature from the California headquarters of John Schmitz," American Independent Party candidate for president, trying to discourage him from voting for either Nixon or McGovern.

OTHER THAN that, he says his privacy has only been interrupted by occasional unsigned letters criticizing him for saying he would have rather seen Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) win the Democratic presidential nomination.

McDonald Creek Project Phase I Is On Schedule

Work on the first phase of the McDonald Creek improvement project is on schedule despite recent heavy rains, according to Frank Herlihy of the Herlihy Mid-Continent Co.

The Chicago construction firm has been awarded a $128,943 contract to enlarge the railroad bridge over the creek just south of the Euclid Avenue and Wolf Road intersection in Mount Prospect. The new culvert is expected to help alleviate flooding in sections of Prospect Heights along the north end of the creek.

Herlihy said men are now installing sheet piling along the creekbed to prevent homes in the area from flooding while work is being done.

Phase I will probably be completed by the December deadline, Herlihy said. "If not, we'll just keep on working until it is done," he said. All work now being done is temporary to allow the Soo Line Ry. to reroute part of the railroad tracks while permanent construction is done on the culvert. Herlihy said he expects temporary track to be laid within 10 days.

The culvert will not be opened until the second phase of the project begins. Phases two, three and four will include widening and improving the creek downstream from the bridge. All phases of the project have been designed by the Illinois Division of Waterways.

The Illinois General Assembly must approve further funds for the remaining phases. According to State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, the improvements would be part of a division of waterways bill which will include requests for approval of a variety of water projects in the state. He expects the bill to be introduced when the legislature reconvenes next year.

Miller Moves Dirt Finally

Rock Road Construction Co. was contacted by Miller to move the dirt, but when the firm discovered it was contaminated fill (topsoil mixed with clay) it wouldn't take it.

LARSON ADDED that Miller had to find someone else to move the dirt. He said that this problem, plus the problem of the wet weather, has caused most of the holdup.

Barger said yesterday afternoon that the contractors for the Irving school have begun to survey the land and are working around the earth-moving crews. "We are ready to move in as soon as the dirt is moved," he said.

Barger added that he was awaiting a return call from Miller Builders to see how long it would take the earthmovers to complete the job.

STILL WITHOUT GLASS in the windows, the new Prospect Heights Public Library stands empty at its Elm Street site in Prospect Heights. Opening of the new building, originally slated for Aug. 1, has been postponed until mid-November because of construction delays due to heavy rains. Ground as broken for the new building in October 1971. Plans for the $400,000 library and three-acre site were approved by voters in February, 1971.

Miller Moving Dirt From School Site — Finally

by RICH HONACK

The dirt on the Washington Irving School site in the Mill Creek subdivision of Buffalo Grove is finally being moved — and not at the expense of the taxpayers.

It was feared that Dist. 21 would have to take almost $12,000 from its tax funds to have the dirt removed because Miller Builders was almost two months behind in getting the job done.

Miller, in an agreement with the school district and the Village of Buffalo Grove, had promised to remove the dirt at no cost to either.

School authorities had said the dirt was to be removed before Aug. 30, but because it wasn't, construction on the new school is more than two months behind.

THE SCHOOL BOARD late Thursday night called on the village to help in the cause, and Supt. Kenneth Gill said, "we are at the village's mercy." He said that if the village didn't get Miller to move the dirt Dist. 21 would have to move it.

A private contractor was to begin the work for the school district yesterday morning. However, the contractor was called off after Buffalo Grove Village Mgr. Daniel Larson called Assistant Superintendent John Barger last Monday night and assured him Miller would start moving the excess earth Tuesday morning.

Miller had crews working all day yesterday in an effort to get the dirt moved and workmen are expected to clear the land as soon as possible.

THE BUFFALO GROVE Village Board became involved in the case Monday night and ordered Larson to do whatever was necessary to get the dirt moved, starting at 7 a.m. yesterday.

The board looked for some type of legal action that could possibly be taken to get the dirt moved. One suggestion was to issue a stop-work order against Miller Builders until the work was completed.

"In my opinion, they have delayed something that they promised to do four to six weeks ago," said Trustee James Shirley. Village Pres. Gary Armstrong agreed, saying, "We were given absolute assurance that the dirt would be moved."

excess earth from the site. Dist. 21 officials planned to have their own contractor remove the dirt at a cost of more than $12,000 yesterday, before the Village of Buffalo Grove stepped in and asked Miller to speed up the process. The new school is more than two months behind in construction.

'Overzealous' Voter Canvass Leads To Confusion Here

Confusion continued yesterday throughout the Northwest suburbs about what was alternately called "overly aggressive" and "sloppy" techniques by election canvassers attempting to wipe the names of no-longer-eligible voters from the registration rolls.

The canvassers, it seems, challenged at least 4,000 eligible voters at the same time. Those voters have been barraging local village and township offices with their complaints.

Some 150,000 notices informing persons that their names will be stricken from registration lists unless they appear in the Chicago office of the Cook County Clerk's office were distributed late last week and early this week throughout suburban Cook County.

The distribution appeared not to be politically motivated, but was widespread in Democratic as well as Republican areas. Each notice was signed by a Democratic and a Republican Canvasser.

CONFUSION AROSE as some suburban officials told irate callers that they must appear at the Cook County Clerk's office as of 9 p.m. yesterday in order to revalidate their voter registration, as indicated in the notices.

The election division of the clerk's office, however, has indicated a willingness to waive that requirement in most cases.

Federal laws that protect the right of persons to vote can be interpreted in such a way as to allow challenged voters who have not moved or changed names to sign the backs of the notices they received as an affidavit of their eligibility to vote, according to election supervisor Thomas King.

"Some people work or just can't make it to Chicago," he said. "We try to work something out. We're not here to take people arbitrarily off the rolls."

Signed notices mailed to the clerk's office should have been postmarked by 9 p.m. Tuesday, King said, but may be accepted later if the voter calls the clerk's office and explains the circumstances.

King estimated that some 4,000 of the 150,000 persons who received notices challenging their eligibility are duly registered and will be allowed to vote.

KING SAID THAT the election canvassers in each precinct, one Democrat and one Republican, are supposed to be reasonable certain that an individual no longer lives at the address at which he is registered before leaving a warning form indicating his voter registration may be canceled.

The warning is to be followed by a post card. However, many residents said they never received a warning notice.

Des Plaines City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach attributed the widespread distribution of notices to "sloppy canvassing."

Developer Donation Bill Gains

by JILL BETTNER

After several delays and more than 11 months of debate, the Buffalo Grove Village Board Monday night firmed up its requirements for donations from local developers to area school and park districts.

The trustees directed Village Atty. Richard Raysa to draw up a resolution based on a Naperville ordinance. That ordinance includes a formula based on land value and the number of children expected to be generated from a development, to determine the builder's donation to the affected school and park districts.

The resolution will be considered at a meeting next Tuesday night because of the Veteran's Day holiday observance Monday.

THE DONATION, either in land or cash, is designed to offset the tax lag until residents of the development began paying property taxes.

To avoid possible legal action from disgruntled builders, the trustees voted to adopt the resolution, which will affect only those developers who negotiate an annexation agreement with the village. The board opted for this alternative rather than enacting an ordinance, which would affect developers of land already in the village.

"I think it's almost inevitable that we would be sued if an ordinance is passed," said Trustee Tom Mahoney. He added that the purpose of the resolution is to define policy and eliminate the necessity of dicker with individual developers. Hopefully, he said, the resolution will be able to accomplish the same things as an ordinance with a lesser chance of a lawsuit.

Trustee Jim Shirley repeated his motion of two weeks ago that the board adopt the school site sizes as outlined in the Naperville ordinance. The first vote on that point ended in a 3-3 tie and Village Pres. Gary Armstrong declined to vote to break it.

Armstrong said at the outset of talks on the developer donation ordinance that he would not participate in the discussion because it could be construed as a conflict of interest.

Shirley's motion carried Monday night with Tom Mahoney reluctantly voting in favor of adopting the following sizes:

—11 acres for an elementary school with 600 students.

—19 acres for a junior high school with 900 students.

—48 acres for a high school with 2,300 students.

Mahoney favored slightly lower figures on each of the site sizes.

The trustees may decide to change the site size requirement when the resolution is considered in its final form.

Armstrong Handed Petitions

The signatures of 2,101 Buffalo Grove residents on petitions asking for the resignation of Village Pres. Gary Armstrong were presented to Armstrong Monday night at the village meeting.

Members of the Concerned Citizens of Buffalo Grove began circulating the petitions shortly after Armstrong announced he had accepted a position as director of marketing for the James Oils Development Co. of Northbrook.

The CCBG hopes to force Armstrong to resign under the pressure of public opinion.

REPRESENTING THE CCBG, Al Kezells quoted a passage from campaign literature circulated by Armstrong prior to his election in April, 1971.

The passage read:

"There is a lack of confidence among the people of Buffalo Grove in the present administration of our village government. Gary believes that political office is indeed a trust, and as president of our village, he will act upon that belief. Under his administration, the voices of the people will be heeded in the village hall."

"I give you, sir, 2,101 voices," Kezells said as he handed Armstrong the petitions.

A capacity audience of about 70 persons applauded the action.

Armstrong declined to make any statement, saying that he would reply at next Tuesday night's meeting.

4,000 Eligibles Also Challenged

Library Left Out Of Development

The Palatine Plan Commission decided last night to recommend approval of a rezoning request for a bank and office-shops development on Northwest Highway. But for the time being, at least, a new Palatine Public Library will not be a part of the development.

Winn C. Davidson, attorney for the developers, asked that the library be severed from the plans for developing the seven-acre site on the south side of the highway between Benton Street and Plum Grove Road.

He said that because of uncertainties regarding where the library is to be built, the developers would reserve space for the library, "and if they want it, they can have it."

Library board members had expressed interest in building a library along with the commercial development on Northwest Highway, but members of the village board, who have to approve the site selection, have made it clear that they prefer that the library remain near downtown Palatine.

IN RECOMMENDING village board approval of the rezoning request for B-1, shopping center district, the plan commission included in its recommendation a study by Wilton L. Battles of the Rolf C. Campbell and Associates land planning firm.

Battles' recommendations basically reaffirmed what the plan commission had discussed at previous meetings—that entrances and exits be redesigned and limited for safer and more convenient use and that a landscape buffer be provided along the south and east edges of the property to screen noise and light from nearby homes.

In addition, Battles recommended that 300 rather than 365 parking spaces be provided and that sidewalks be installed along the north, east and west property lines. The developer is to improve adjacent streets as well.

The Battles report did not deal with the issue of storm water retention, a major concern of area resident recommendations a provision that adequate drainage and storage be provided.

Engineering plans must be approved by village and Metropolitan Sanitary District engineers before a zoning change would be granted.

Final Statements Heard In Inverness Lawsuit

Attorneys in an Inverness lawsuit made their closing statements yesterday in the village's battle to block the pullout of 40 acres of land from Inverness boundaries by resident Robert Lenz.

Cook County Circuit Judge Helen McGillicuddy will rule on the case Nov. 2 at 10:15 a.m.

After nearly five full days of testimony, lawyers for both sides based their closing arguments on a state statute describing the conditions for withdrawing property from a municipality.

Zoning and services are the central issue in the lawsuit. Lenz filed his petitions to remove his land from the village several months ago to escape strict zoning regulations in Inverness.

Currently, every residence in Inverness is built on at least one acre of land, and many have two or more acres for each unit. Under those restrictions, Lenz would not be able to get building permits for higher density, multi-family housing on his property, which is west of Roselle Road across from Harper College.

AN AUGUST MEETING between Lenz and several village officials reportedly started with Lenz wanting 15 units per acre for his 40 acres, including 12 story buildings in the plan.

Village officials suggested nine or ten units probably would be acceptable, according to early testimony by village Trustee James A. Vallerre.

Attorney J. William Braichwalte, the village's lawyer, attempted to prove that withdrawal of the land would cost the village future tax revenue and would hurt the prospects for increasing the population of Inverness.

Padre Pio Film To Be Presented Tomorrow

A motion picture on the life of Padre Pio, an Italian Capuchin priest, will be presented at St. Joseph's Home for the Elderly, 80 W. Baldwin Rd., Palatine, tomorrow at 1:30 p.m.

Vera Calandra, who has traveled throughout the country for the cause of Beatification of Padre Pio, will narrate the movie. Many articles of the priest's clothing and personal effects will be on exhibit, as well as books and religious materials.

Admission is free.

Padre Pio was a priest who lived the last 50 years of his life stigmatized, bearing marks of the wounds of the crucifixion of Jesus. Beatification is usually the first step in the process of having a deceased individual canonized a saint.

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nixon's chief Vietnam adviser, Henry Kissinger, met with North Vietnamese negotiators, in Paris then headed for Saigon to consult with South Vietnamese President Ngy Nguyen Van Thieu. The stepped up activity fueled speculation that progress was being made in the peace talks.

South Korean President Park Chung Hee proclaimed martial law in a surprise move he said was to protect the nation from unfavorable changes in the country.

At least four persons including two foreigners have been arrested by military authorities for involvement in an alleged Communist assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

The Nation

A squadron of 40 search planes flew through fog, wind, and rain along the southern Alaska coast seeking a missing plane carrying House Democratic leader Hale Boggs, Alaska's lone congressman and two other men.

Law enforcement sources in New York disclosed 100 policemen were among 677 persons with alleged mob involvement subpoenaed in what officials called the biggest crackdown on the Mafia in history.

Hoping that he has found an issue that Democrats will rally around, George McGovern stepped up his attacks against what he called Republican sabotage and subversion.

The State

A 28-year-old Chicago man was arrested after a robber took a secretary hostage and was given $10,523 in a brown paper sack at the First Bank of Oak Park.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears charged that State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan has closed his eyes after the 1969 Black Panther police raid to everything but the police version of the case.

Gov. Richard Ogilvie said he will order a complete reassessment of property in Cook County if the county assessor does not make drastic changes in his operation next year.

The War

Communist troops believed working under a "plant the flag" directive called the "X-10" resolution" seized five Central Highlands hamlets and an artillery base, but South Vietnamese forces quickly recaptured one hamlet and retook the artillery position.

Bears On Home TV?

They Drive You To 'Drink'

by MARY HOULIHAN

The neighborhood tavern. Since time immemorial, this sanctuary away from kith and kin, weekend chores and other such crises in life, has held a hallowed spot in the hearts of males. Besides its usual convivial offering of good drink and cheer, the corner bar has also been, in recent years, one of the few places where a fan could see a Chicago Bears home football game.

This has been the case since 1961 when Congress allowed the National Football League (NFL) to black out televised games in the cities where they were being played. The NFL had argued successfully that its financial survival depended on television contracts and on protecting home gate revenues by not televising home contests.

Through a blow to local Bears' fans, the ruling brought an unexpected chance to make money for local tavern owners. Owners pirated games from either Rockford or South Bend, buying expensive ultra-high frequency equipment. And the pirating turned out to be very lucrative. As one tavern owner commented, "When home games are on, there isn't an empty chair in the place."

There is no charge for the advantage of seeing a home game at the local bar. Though tavern owners spend anywhere from $200 to $1000 on the UHF equipment to televise the game, they make up the cost only through the sale of liquor.

LAST WEEK — it appears — a mortal blow might be struck to the corner taverns who pirate the games with the news that President Nixon supports proposed legislation prohibiting professional sports from imposing television blackouts of home games. But from a random survey of local tavern owners, it doesn't seem that anyone is in a state of panic.

To be sure, the tavern owners are not happy about the idea, but they're not planning on declaring bankruptcy because of it either. "We'll miss a few people, but they (meaning the fans) will be here anyway," Ed Weight, manager of the Old Town Inn in Mount Prospect, explained. "We won't be as busy because it won't be a novelty anymore, but win or lose, we'll still get the crazy fans."

Indeed, Weight's opinion seemed to be the general consensus among tavern owners in the area who show Bear's home games on Sundays.

"It'll hurt business of course, but again, fellas like to get out and yell and scream and act like little kids," James Di-Falco of Jake's Pizzeria in Elk Grove Village, said. "I don't think they can do that at home."

George Callahan of Cal's Place in Arlington Heights agreed. "What can you do about it?" he asked. "Besides you'll always have customers," he said.

Charles Romano, of Romano's Restaurant in Des Plaines, said he is in favor of the blackout. "But eliminating it wouldn't hurt me at all," Romano jokes. "They (the fans) don't enjoy the game at home with their wives. They wouldn't have anyone to argue with. They want to get together and yell and scream at each other. That's boys for you."

THE ONLY establishment showing pirated editions of the Bear's home games that might not make out too well if the blackout is ended is not a tavern, but the Wheeling Park District. The park district bought a UHF antenna last year for about $750. The district asks for a donation of 50 cents for children and $1 for adults. "But this just covers the cost of paying the staff during that time," Dave Phillips, park director explained. Though there is a concession stand run by the district during the game, Phillips said the district just breaks even.

As for the patrons of the bars where pirated games are televised, the opinions on the possible end to the blackout are divided. About half said they will continue to watch the game at the corner tavern. The other half are definitely homebodies.

Dale Malzahn, a patron of the Old Town Inn, is probably the most representative of the tavern-watchers. "I'd much rather watch it (the game) in a bar where I can talk to people," Malzahn said.

Bobby McGregor perhaps explained it better. "I'd rather get out of the house and go drinking," he said.

But the homebodies say watching the game on your own TV has a lot of advantages. "I'm in my own atmosphere and the beers a little freer and a little colder," said Hank DeGeorge of Schaumburg. Robert Pomrenberg of Chicago concurred: "I like to stay home on Sunday and have Sunday dinner and so forth," he said.

No matter how you change things, there's bound to be someone who's not satisfied however. Asked his reaction to the possible end to the blackout, Jim Bickman, a patron of the Old Town Inn, could only say, "I wouldn't watch the Bears in either place."

Driver Ticketed In Fatal Crash

Spencer Askfeldt, 22, of unincorporated Palatine Township, has been ticketed in connection with an auto accident Monday night which claimed three lives.

Askfeldt, of Rural Route 3, Rand Road, was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid a collision.

The car he was driving eastbound on Lake-Cook Road struck a southbound car on Quentin Road which apparently went through a stop sign, according to Cook County Sheriff's police.

The driver of the car, Thomas K. Deuel, 19, of 189A White Pine Rd., Long Grove, his sister, Jean T., 6, and another passenger, Cheryl Wakeman, 16, of 555 Carpenter Dr., Palatine, were killed in the crash.

Askfeldt was treated and released from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

Deuel was a 1971 graduate of Palatine High School, where Miss Wakeman was a junior. Jean Deuel was a student at Quentin Elementary School in unincorporated Palatine Township.

An inquest in the deaths is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Oct. 26 at the Ahlgren and Sons Funeral Home, Palatine.

Jaycee Wives Set Pumpkin Sale

Pumpkin-less families can fill that void in time for Halloween and make a contribution to charity at the same time.

Members of the Palatine Jaycees wives' organization will sponsor a pumpkin sale from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday in Community and Maple parks.

In addition, a pumpkin wagon will circulate in the Winston Park subdivision.

Prices will range from 50 cents to $1 per pumpkin. Proceeds will go toward local charities.

Costumes A Must At Park District Halloween Party

Costumes are a must for the Rolling Meadows Park District Halloween parties Saturday, Oct. 28, at the sports complex, 5900 Owl Dr.

A Halloween party for preschool through sixth grade students will get under way at 7 p.m. The party will feature a movie entitled "Beware of Spooks" and a costume parade from the complex to Kimball Hill Park. Prizes will be awarded for the spookiest, ugliest, prettiest, most original and best TV story character costumes. There will be a bonfire in the park and treats for everyone.

A second Halloween party open to everyone will be held from 10:30 p.m. to midnight at the ice arena. There will be no admission charged but costumes are necessary to get on the ice. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes.

School District OKs House For Family

Lease of a house to a Wheeling family for $250 a month has been approved by the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education.

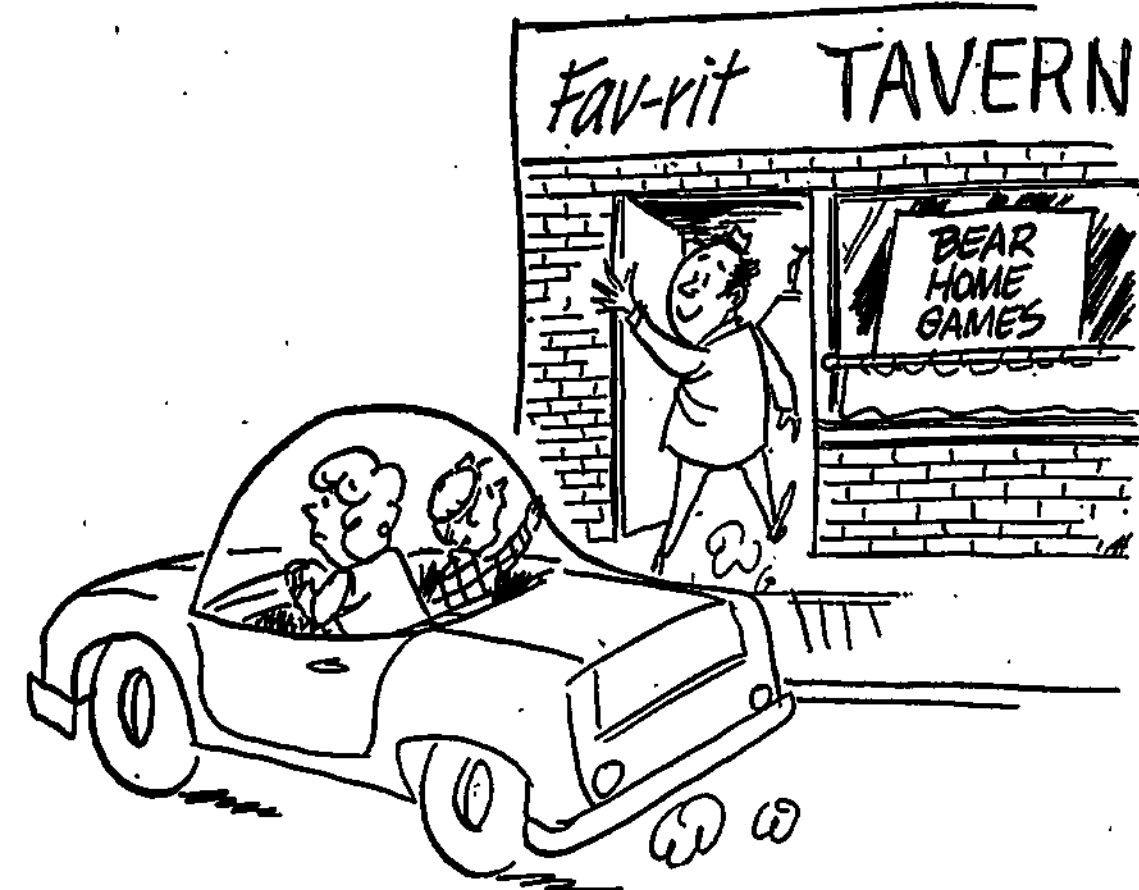

The house owned by the school district is located on three acres of land directly adjacent and north of Palatine Hills Junior High School on Smith Street.

A clause in the lease allows either party to terminate it after 30 days notice.

Schedule Happy Hour

St. Colette Women's Club will hold a "happy hour" on Sunday, Oct. 29 at 3 p.m. in the church hall for women of the parish.

Activities planned by the Women's Club for the coming year are a Christmas bazaar, bake sale, international dinner, fashion show and installation dinner.

Village Takes Critical Look At DAMP

Palatine officials have decided to review the status of the DAMP water commission's efforts to obtain water from Lake Michigan for its four Northwest suburban members.

The water commission, named for Des Plaines, Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Palatine, is seeking $1,500 from each member community for legal fees to fight two challenges to its authority to use Lake Michigan water.

One of the suits was filed by Highland Park and the other by the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago.

The DAMP plan is to construct a pipeline to the four Northwest suburbs, eliminating the need for well water.

The Palatine village board, in tabling a motion to immediately allocate the village's $1,500 share of legal expenses, indicated it was not seriously considering dropping out of damp but would like additional information on DAMP's activities.

The other three member towns already have appropriated their share of the legal costs.

Scouting News

Cub Scout Pack 321, sponsored by the Lake Louise School PTA, has started its schedule of weekly den meetings for both Cubs and Webelos. The first meeting was held in the Lake Louise multipurpose room with a flag ceremony by the Webelos. The group got a demonstration on racing the rockets which the boys will be making with their fathers for the October Rocket Derby. Awards were presented by Advancements Chairman Doug Carlile to the following scouts: Sean Edgerton, Aquanaut and Arrow of Light; Scott Edgerton, Aquanaut; Brent Wheat, Bobcat; Mike St. John, Webelos Colors; Phil Clape, Bear, Gold Arrow, 3 Silver Arrows and Webelos Colors.

A COURT of honor was held recently for Troop 69 in Palatine. Dan Chipe and Greg Garrison received progress awards of Life Scout. Mark White was elevated to First Class Scout, and Chip Lorenz and Steve Zonner were advanced to Second Class Scout.

Several merit badge awards were given to scouts that earned them during summer camp at Canyon Camp in Freeport. During the summer, the troop took a seven-day canoe trip on the Pine River in Manistee National Forest.

Troop 69 meets every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Sanborn School. For more information, call Peter Flick, the troop's scoutmaster, at 358-3243 after 6 p.m.

A continuance was granted yesterday by Judge Frank B. Machala in the case of Leo Clark Jennings, who is charged with the murders last month of Mrs. Barbara Flanagan, 27, and her 18-month-old daughter, Renee.

Jennings, who earlier had stated he would defend himself, was represented in court yesterday by a public defender who asked for the continuance to Nov. 14. The assistant state's attorney handling the case, Patrick Driscoll, raised no objections to the continuance request.

Jennings was charged with the murders Oct. 1. The Flanagan's nude and beaten bodies were found Sept. 11 in the Community Presbyterian Church parking lot, 407 N. Main St., Mount Prospect.

Nixon Leads In 'Straw' Poll

Richard Nixon is the presidential choice of over 70 per cent of soda pop drinkers in Mount Prospect — at least at those attending the Randhurst Cinema and the Mount Prospect Cinema.

These local movie houses, along with almost 400 others in the nation-wide General Cinema Corp. chain, are conducting a "Straw '72 Presidential Preference Poll."

The poll structure is simple. You buy a drink at the candy counter and then indicate your choice of whether you would like a Nixon or a George McGovern straw with your drink. They even have a neutral straw for the uncommitted.

WHEN YOU MIX politics and movies like this, you come up with a lot of Nixon supporters (not California gubernatorial candidates as one might expect). Maybe the fact that Nixon likes John Wayne movies is getting the wide-screen addicts' votes.

At the Randhurst Cinema, Nixon leads McGovern 78.7 per cent to 24.3 per cent, according to theater manager Ray Helon. John Misavice, manager at Mount Prospect Cinema, reports percentages of 70 per cent for Nixon and 30 per cent for McGovern.

Nation-wide, the poll, about a month old, shows Nixon with a slim 54.3 per cent to 45.7 per cent lead over McGovern, according to Helon at Randhurst.

A similar poll was conducted in 1968 when Nixon won over Hubert Humphrey by a 20 per cent margin.

Television Has Tagged Him 'Mr. Average American'

by TONI GINETTI

Richard Johnson, Rolling Meadows' nationally known "average American," might consider dubbing himself with another title, that of a bonafide television celebrity.

The tag seems fitting in view of the fact that Johnson is now a veteran of three TV telecasts produced by the National Public Affairs Center for Television (NPACT) based in Washington, D. C. Each show was designed to focus on the plight of the typical middle-income American as seen through a study of a scientifically-chosen prototype, Johnson.

In the first, televised in February, he was the average guy caught in the middle of the economic squeeze, earning enough to live comfortably but not having much left after the bills get paid.

The second show, seen last month, followed Johnson on behind-the-scenes look at a presidential campaign with Democratic hopeful Sen. George McGovern. The latest telecast, aired Monday night on WTTW-TV (Channel 11) was actually a repeat of the second show.

"THE COMMENTS from NPACT on the show have been very good," Johnson said yesterday. "I was kind of surprised at the comments I made at the end, but I thought the photography and the editing was excellent."

As a barnstormer on the campaign trail, Johnson traveled almost 8,500 miles and visited ten cities in one week. The pace was hectic, and Johnson admits he marvels at how any man could stand the kind of campaigning a presidential race requires.

"I can't imagine how anyone can endure that kind of campaigning for three or four months. It's really an effort for a human being. I know I was completely exhausted after just five days."

Johnson says he hasn't been asked to

"star" in any more shows, but that doesn't necessarily mean the end of his celebrity career. "I've written my memoirs of the trip and sent them to NPACT in Washington and I'm hoping they'll publish them."

"AS FAR AS any future activities, I don't know of any. But I suppose I'll be getting calls just before the election asking me what I think of the candidates and who I'll vote for."

At the time he took the trip, Johnson said he hadn't made up his mind as to whom his choice for the presidency would be. Asked if he had made up his mind yet, he said, "I'm still undecided, but I'm still leaning toward the President."

"I see a little bit of good in both men, but I guess I won't be able to say for sure who I'll vote for until after I've pulled the lever on Nov. 7," he added with a laugh.

Johnson says he has received no reaction from the McGovern staff on the telecast of the trip but adds with a touch of annoyance in his otherwise cheerful voice, "I keep getting literature from the California headquarters of John Schmitz," American Independent Party candidate for president, trying to discourage him from voting for either Nixon or McGovern.

OTHER THAN that, he says his privacy has only been interrupted by occasional unsigned letters criticizing him for saying he would have rather seen Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) win the Democratic presidential nomination.

"There hasn't been any real infringement on my private life," Johnson says. The only thing he didn't like of the whole experience was the title of one of the shows, he adds.

"I think they called one of the segments 'I Am the People.' Good grief, I don't profess to speak for all the people. I'm only one man."

4,000 Eligibles Also Challenged

'Overzealous' Voter Canvasser Leads To Confusion Here

Confusion continued yesterday throughout the Northwest suburbs about what was alternately called "overly aggressive" and "sloppy" techniques by election canvassers attempting to wipe the names of no-longer-eligible voters from the registration rolls.

The canvassers, it seems, challenged that their names will be stricken from registration lists unless they appear in the Chicago office of the Cook County Clerk's office were distributed late last week and early this week throughout suburban Cook County.

Some 180,000 notices informing persons that their names will be stricken from registration lists unless they appear in the Chicago office of the Cook County Clerk's office were distributed late last week and early this week throughout suburban Cook County.

The distribution appeared not to be politically motivated, but was widespread in Democratic as well as Republican areas. Each notice was signed by a Democratic and a Republican Canvasser.

CONFUSION AROSE as some suburban officials told irate callers that they must appear at the Cook County Clerk's office as of 9 p.m. yesterday in order to revalidate their voter registration, as indicated in the notices.

The election division of the clerk's office, however, has indicated a willingness to waive that requirement in most cases.

Federal laws that protect the right of persons to vote can be interpreted in such a way as to allow challenged voters who have not moved or changed names to sign the backs of the notices they received as an affidavit of their eligibility to vote, according to election supervisor Thomas King.

"Some people work or just can't make it to Chicago," he said. "We try to work something out. We're not here to take people arbitrarily off the rolls."

Signed notices mailed to the clerk's office should have been postmarked by 9 p.m. Tuesday, King said, but may be accepted later if the voter calls the clerk's office and explains the circumstances.

King estimated that some 4,000 of the 150,000 persons who received notices challenging their eligibility are duly registered and will be allowed to vote.

KING SAID THAT the election canvassers in each precinct, one Democrat and one Republican, are supposed to be reasonable certain that an individual no longer lives at the address at which he is registered before leaving a warning form indicating his voter registration may be canceled.

The warning is to be followed by a post card. However, many residents said they never received a warning notice.

Des Plaines City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach attributed the widespread distribution of notices to "sloppy canvassing."

City Last To Seek Flood Insurance

Rolling Meadows is one of the last communities in the area to apply for federally subsidized flood insurance benefits.

City Mgr. James Watson said yesterday he was unfamiliar with the program which provides comprehensive flood insurance coverage at minimal costs to homeowners and businesses. He added, however, that he would contact local representatives of State Farm Insurance, the company providing the coverage in Illinois, as well as officials in Arlington Heights and Palatine to learn more about the program.

A number of area municipalities, including Arlington Heights and Palatine, have already qualified for the coverage. The insurance is provided to homeowners and businesses within a community, with the federal government paying 90 per cent of the premiums.

However, before individuals can apply for the coverage, their municipality must be federally approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the federal insurance administrator's office.

UNDER THE PLAN, up to $17,500 in coverage can be provided on homes, and $5,000 on belongings within the home. Apartment units and small businesses can apply for up to $30,000 coverage.

Applications for the insurance from flood-ravaged towns in the area swamped government offices following the record rainfalls of late August and early September.

The city also expects to receive partial payment of federal relief funds for flood damage before the end of the year, according to John Hennessy, superintendent of public works.

Hennessy said yesterday he made the request for almost $3,400 one week after the rains of Aug. 25. The funds were requested to cover costs of manpower expended by the public works department and equipment wear and tear in the removal of debris resulting from the flooding.

Hennessy said he hopes to receive the money "within the next several months."

Further requests for funding will also be made soon to recoup money for damage done to lift stations around the city, Hennessy said. Before that can be done, however, federal inspections of the facilities must be made, he added.

According to Hennessy, the city qualifies for the funding under provisions of emergency flood relief declarations covering the Northwest suburbs. The federal money is being distributed through the state's civil defense department, he added.

He's Second Lt.

Open House Set For Awana Club

The Awana Clubs will have an open house on Sunday, Oct. 29 from 2 to 5 p.m. at the organization's headquarters at 3215 Algonquin, Rolling Meadows.

The Awana Clubs are a service organization for students in third grade through high school. The clubs main emphasis is on a study of the Bible and games and athletics.

"We try to get them (young people) into the word of God and make God relevant to their lives," said a spokesman for the Awana Clubs.

There are more than 3,000 Awana Clubs in the United States and foreign countries. The organization is interdenominational and the clubs are held in local churches under the direction of lay people trained by Awana.

The open house is designed to acquaint local people and leaders from local churches with the programs conducted by Awana. There will be a tour of the headquarters and several materials will be on display.

Halloween Storybook Party At Library

The annual Halloween Storybook Party will be held at the Rolling Meadows Public Library on Friday, Oct. 27 from 6 to 8 p.m.

The party, which is sponsored by the Friends of the Library, will feature a surprise entertainment, a trick-or-treat parade and refreshments.

Remodeling of the library has placed space limitations on the party and attendance will be restricted to 75 first through sixth grade students. Students may pick up invitations at the library. Prizes will be awarded to students who best represent storybook characters.

Village Takes Critical Look At DAMP

Palatine officials have decided to review the status of the DAMP water commission's efforts to obtain water from Lake Michigan for its four Northwest suburban members.

The water commission, named for Des Plaines, Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Palatine, is seeking $1,500 from each member community for legal fees to fight two challenges to its authority to use Lake Michigan water.

One of the suits was filed by Highland Park and the other by the Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago.

The DAMP plan is to construct a pipeline to the four Northwest suburbs, eliminating the need for well water.

The Palatine village board, in tabling a motion to immediately allocate the village's $1,500 share of legal expenses, indicated it was not seriously considering dropping out of damp but would like additional information on DAMP's activities.

The other three member towns already have appropriated their share of the legal costs.

Final Statements Heard In Inverness Lawsuit

Attorneys in an Inverness lawsuit made their closing statements yesterday in the village's battle to block the pullout of 40 acres of land from Inverness boundaries by resident Robert Lonze.

A continuance was granted yesterday by Judge Frank B. Machala in the case of Leo Clark Jennings, who is charged with the murders last month of Mrs. Barbara Flanagan, 27, and her 18-month-old daughter, Renee.

Jennings, who earlier had stated he would defend himself, was represented in court yesterday by a public defender who asked for the continuance to Nov. 14. The assistant state's attorney handling the case, Patrick Driscoll, raised no objections to the continuance request.

Jennings was charged with the murders Oct. 1. The Flanagan's nude and beaten bodies were found Sept. 11 in the Community Presbyterian Church parking lot, 407 N. Main St., Mount Prospect.

Nixon Leads In 'Straw' Poll

Richard Nixon is the presidential choice of over 70 per cent of soda pop drinkers in Mount Prospect — at least at those attending the Randhurst Cinema and the Mount Prospect Cinema.

These local movie houses, along with almost 400 others in the nation-wide General Cinema Corp. chain, are conducting a "Straw '72 Presidential Preference Poll."

The poll structure is simple. You buy a drink at the candy counter and then indicate your choice of whether you would like a Nixon or a George McGovern straw with your drink. They even have a neutral straw for the uncommitted.

WHEN YOU MIX politics and movies like this, you come up with a lot of Nixon supporters (not California gubernatorial candidates as one might expect). Maybe the fact that Nixon likes John Wayne movies is getting the wide-screen addicts' votes.

At the Randhurst Cinema, Nixon leads McGovern 76.7 per cent to 24.3 per cent, according to theater manager Ray Helon. John Misavice, manager at Mount Prospect Cinema, reports percentages of 70 per cent for Nixon and 30 per cent for McGovern.

Nation-wide, the poll, about a month old, shows Nixon with a slim 54.3 per cent to 45.7 per cent lead over McGovern, according to Helon at Randhurst.

A similar poll was conducted in 1968 when Nixon won over Hubert Humphrey by a 20 per cent margin.

Costumes A Must At Park District Halloween Party

Costumes are a must for the Rolling Meadows Park District Halloween parties Saturday, Oct. 28, at the sports complex, 3900 Owl Dr.

A Halloween party for preschool through sixth grade students will get under way at 7 p.m. The party will feature a movie entitled "Beware of Spooks" and a costume parade from the complex to Kimball Hill Park. Prizes will be awarded for the spookiest, ugliest, prettiest, most original and best TV story character costumes. There will be a bonfire in the park and treats for everyone.

A second Halloween party open to everyone will be held from 10:30 p.m. to midnight at the ice arena. There will be no admission charged but costumes are necessary to get on the ice. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes.

School District OKs House For Family

Lease of a house to a Wheeling family for $250 a month has been approved by the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education.

The house owned by the school district is located on three acres of land directly adjacent and north of Palatine Hills Junior High School on Smith Street.

A clause in the lease allows either party to terminate it after 30 days notice.

Bears On Home TV?

by MARY HOULIHAN

The neighborhood tavern. Since time immemorial, this sanctuary away from kith and kin, weekend chores and other such crises in life, has held a hallowed spot in the hearts of males. Besides its usual convivial offering of good drink and cheer, the corner bar has also been, in recent years, one of the few places where a fan could see a Chicago Bears home football game.

This has been the case since 1961 when Congress allowed the National Football League (NFL) to black out televised games in the cities where they were being played. The NFL had argued successfully that its financial survival depended on television contracts and on protecting home gate revenues by not televising home contests.

Though a blow to local Bears' fans, the ruling brought an unexpected chance to make money for local tavern owners. Owners pirated games from either Rockford or South Bend, buying expensive ultra-high frequency equipment. And the pirating turned out to be very lucrative. As one tavern owner commented, "When home games are on, there isn't an empty chair in the place."

There is no charge for the advantage of seeing a home game at the local bar. Though tavern owners spend anywhere from $200 to $1000 on the UHF equipment to televise the game, they make up the cost only through the sale of liquor.

LAST WEEK — it appears — a mortal blow might be struck to the corner taverns who pirate the games with the news that President Nixon supports proposed legislation prohibiting professional sports from imposing television blackouts of home games. But from a random survey of local tavern owners, it doesn't seem that anyone is in a state of panic.

To be sure, the tavern owners are not happy about the idea, but they're not planning on declaring bankruptcy because of it either. "We'll miss a few people, but they (meaning the fans) will be here anyway," Ed Weight, manager of the Old Town Inn in Mount Prospect, explained. "We won't be as busy because it won't be a novelty anymore, but win or lose, we'll still get the crazy fans."

Indeed, Weight's opinion seemed to be the general consensus among tavern owners in the area who show Bear's home games on Sundays.

"It will hurt business of course, but again, fellas like to get out and yell and scream and act like little kids," James Di Falco of Jake's Pizza in Elk Grove Village, said. "I don't think they can do that at home."

George Callahan of Cal's Place in Arlington Heights agreed. "What can you do about it?" he asked. "Besides you'll always have customers," he said.

Charles Romano, of Romano's Restaurant in Des Plaines said he is in favor of the blackout. "But eliminating it wouldn't hurt me at all," Romano jokes. "They (the fans) don't enjoy the game at home with their wives. They wouldn't have anyone to argue with. They want to get together and yell and scream at each other. That's boys for you."

THE ONLY establishment showing pirated editions of the Bear's home games that might not make out too well if the blackout is ended is not a tavern, but the Wheeling Park District. The park district bought a UHF antenna last year for about $750. The district asks for a donation of 50 cents for children and $1 for adults. "But this just covers the cost of paying the staff during that time," Dave Phillips, park director explained. Though there is a concession stand run by the district during the game, Phillips said the district just breaks even.

ue to watch the game at the corner tavern. The other half are definitely homebodies.

Dale Malzahn, a patron of the Old Town Inn, is probably the most representative of the tavern-watchers. "I'd much rather watch it (the game) in a bar where I can talk to people," Malzahn said.

Bobby McGregor perhaps explained it better. "I'd rather get out of the house and go drinking," he said.

But the homebodies say watching the game on your own TV has a lot of advantages. "I'm in my own atmosphere and the beers a little freer and a little colder," said Hank DeGeorge of Schaumburg. Robert Pomrening of Chicago concurred: "I like to stay home on Sunday and have Sunday dinner and so forth," he said.

No matter how you change things, there's bound to be someone who's not satisfied however. Asked his reaction to the possible end to the blackout, Jim Bickman, a patron of the Old Town Inn, could only say, "I wouldn't watch the Bears in either place."

Driver Ticketed In Fatal Crash

Spencer Askfeldt, 22, of unincorporated Palatine Township, has been ticketed in connection with an auto accident Monday night which claimed three lives.

Askfeldt, of Rural Route 3, Rand Road, was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid a collision.

The car he was driving eastbound on Lake-Cook Road struck a southbound car on Quentin Road which apparently went through a stop sign, according to Cook County Sheriff's police.

The driver of the car, Thomas K. Deuel, 19, of 169A White Pine Rd., Long Grove, his sister, Jean T., 6, and another passenger, Cheryl Wakeman, 16, of 555 Carpenter Dr., Palatine, were killed in the crash.

Askfeldt was treated and released from Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

Deuel was a 1971 graduate of Palatine High School, where Miss Wakeman was a junior. Jean Deuel was a student at Quentin Elementary School in unincorporated Palatine Township.

An inquest in the deaths is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Oct. 26 at the Ahlgren and Sons Funeral Home, Palatine.

Jaycee Wives Set Pumpkin Sale

Pumpkin-less families can fill that void in time for Halloween and make a contribution to charity at the same time.

Members of the Palatine Jaycees wives' organization will sponsor a pumpkin sale from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday in Community and Maple parks.

In addition, a pumpkin wagon will circulate in the Winston Park subdivision.

Prices will range from 50 cents to $1 per pumpkin. Proceeds will go toward local charities.

Schedule Happy Hour

St. Colette Women's Club will hold a "happy hour" on Sunday, Oct. 29 at 3 p.m. in the church hall for women of the parish.

Activities planned by the Women's Club for the coming year are a Christmas bazaar, bake sale, international dinner, fashion show and installation dinner.

Teichert: Tax Freeze Could Be Disastrous

Gov. Richard Ogilvie's plan to freeze local property tax levies would be "disastrous" for municipalities, Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert said yesterday.

Ogilvie's plan, announced Monday, would freeze the total dollar amount of tax revenue—not tax rates—a taxing district can get through real estate and personal property taxes. The freeze, to be discussed by the state legislature at a special session Nov. 26, would be based on levies used to calculate the 1973 tax bills.

"Under the plan, any increases in assessed valuation would be meaningless," Teichert said. "For example, if we annexed another portion of Prospect Heights and our levy was frozen, the tax rate would go down all over town. But we wouldn't have the money to provide services to new residents. And what good would it do for a municipality to have industry or growth since it won't bring in any more tax dollars, only increased demands for service?"

IF THE FREEZE goes into effect, Teichert said Mount Prospect may have to institute a utility tax, increase building fees, raise the sales tax or charge residents for garbage pick-up.

"We'll just have to shift to another tax base to get the money to pay for the services the village provides," he said.

Mount Prospect expects $145,000 next year as a result of federal revenue sharing, but the money won't make up for the loss in tax revenue, Teichert said.

"The $145,000 is only a drop in the bucket compared to what we get from property taxes," he said. "With his plan, Ogilvie has nullified the benefits of revenue sharing. And he has made a real thrust against home rule."

Teichert said that 18 per cent of the $3 million village budget comes from property taxes.

"If this plan is in the offing, I suppose we could all amend our tax levies," Teichert said. The levies, both for municipalities and school districts, were turned into the Cook County assessor's office in September. To change the levy, a taxing district would have to follow amending procedures.

Besides the freeze on levies, Ogilvie is also proposing an increase in state aid to public schools by committing the state's federal revenue sharing money, $82 million this year and $103 million in 1973, to the public schools.

"I WOULD LIKE to see how that $82 million is going to be split among the school districts," said Robert Novy, president of the Mount Prospect Dist. 57 School Board. "I don't think Dist. 57 would fare too well."

James Hendron, business manager for Prospect Heights School Dist. 23, said the plan would have little effect on Dist. 23. "We have planned to decrease our tax levies each year," he said. "But I can see some difficulties for school districts that are increasing and need the additional tax money."

Marshall Theroux, Wheeling Township assessor, sees Ogilvie's proposal as an attempt to "check" the use of revenue sharing funds.

"I think Ogilvie is trying to make sure municipalities keep providing the same services, but use the federal money to reduce the tax load instead of for additional spending," he said.

Paper Recycling Drive Saturday

A newspaper recycling drive will be held Saturday by Boy Scout Troop 153.

Residents are asked to bring old newspapers to Gregory School, 400 E. Gregory St., between 9 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Boy Scouts will pick up papers at the curb in that part of Mount Prospect bounded by Gregory Street, Rt. 83, Well-creek and Mount Prospect Road.

Persons in other areas of the village can have papers picked up at their homes by calling Leonard Mosher at 253-8043.

Car Kills Texan On Wolf Rd.

A 19-year-old youth struck and killed by a car in Prospect Heights Monday night was identified early yesterday as Charles Crawford of Arlington, Tex.

Cook County Sheriff's Police said the youth, who may have been hitchhiking to Wheeling, was identified by his brother, also of Texas. The accident occurred at 7 p.m. on Wolf Road, just north of Euclid Avenue.

A Cook County Coroner's inquest into

the death will be held in several weeks. Meanwhile, Antonio Campos, 29, of Wheeling has been charged with passing on the right and driving too fast to avoid an accident. Police said Campos, 200 S. Wheeling Rd., was passing on the right shoulder when the car he was driving struck Crawford. He is scheduled to appear in Niles court Dec. 6.

Crawford was taken to Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

STILL WITHOUT GLASS in the windows, the new Prospect Heights Public Library stands empty at its Elm Street site in Prospect Heights. Opening of the new building, originally slated for Aug. 1, has been postponed until mid-November because of construction delays due to heavy rains. Ground was broken for the new building in October 1971. Plans for the $400,000 library and three-acre site were approved by voters in February, 1971.

'Sloppy' Canvass Irks Local Voters

Confusion continued yesterday throughout the Northwest suburbs about what was alternately called "overly aggressive" and "sloppy" techniques by election canvassers attempting to wipe the names of no-longer-eligible voters from the registration rolls.

The canvassers, it seems, challenged at least 4,000 eligible voters at the same time. Those voters have been barraging local village and township offices with their complaints.

Some 150,000 notices informing persons that their names will be stricken from registration lists unless they appear in the Chicago office of the Cook County Clerk's office were distributed late last week and early this week throughout suburban Cook County.

The distribution appeared not to be politically motivated, but was widespread in Democratic as well as Republican areas. Each notice was signed by a Democratic and a Republican Canvasser.

CONFUSION AROSE as some suburban officials told irate callers that they must appear at the Cook County Clerk's office as of 9 p.m. yesterday in order to revalidate their voter registration, as indicated in the notices.

The election division of the clerk's office, however, has indicated a willingness to waive that requirement in most cases.

Federal laws that protect the right of persons to vote can be interpreted in such a way as to allow challenged voters who have not moved or changed names to sign the backs of the notices they received as an affidavit of their eligibility to vote, according to election supervisor Thomas King.

"Some people work or just can't make it to Chicago," he said. "We try to work something out. We're not here to take people arbitrarily off the rolls." Signed notices mailed to the clerk's office should have been postmarked by 9 p.m. Tuesday, King said, but may be accepted later if the voter calls the clerk's office and explains the circumstances.

'Walk For Jim' Slated Oct. 28

A Mount Prospect neighborhood is going to work to raise money for the medical expenses of a 14-year-old boy hospitalized for the last six weeks with blood poisoning.

James O'Brien, who would have been a freshman this fall at Forest View High School, was hospitalized early in September with the infection. He has had several blood transfusions and is scheduled for an operation at the end of this week. Medical bills have exceeded the family's hospitalization policies. James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Brien, 923 See-Gwyn Ave., Mount Prospect.

About 20 neighbors of the O'Briens have planned a "Walk for Jim" on Oct. 28. Volunteers will hike 15 miles to raise funds for the medical expenses. The neighbors have also set up a trust fund for James O'Brien at the Mount Prospect State Bank.

THOSE WORKING on the project are seeking prospective volunteers and donors for the hike. Donors will pledge a sum to volunteers for each mile walked.

The route will be 15 miles long and will run through Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights. It will begin at St. Raymond Catholic Church in Mount Prospect and end at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights. Volunteers to man checkpoints along the hike route are also needed.

Persons who want to donate to the trust

King estimated that some 4,000 of the 150,000 persons who received notices challenging their eligibility are duly reg-

fund are asked to make checks payable to the "James O'Brien Trust Fund" and mail them to the bank in Mount Prospect.

Volunteers are also asking that blood donations be made in James O'Brien's name. Donors can give blood at any local hospital.

Anyone who wants to be a volunteer or a donor for the hike can call Chris Hunsinger at 394-0425 or Betty Allen at 253-4944.

istered and will be allowed to vote.

KING SAID THAT the election canvassers in each precinct, one Democrat and one Republican, are supposed to be reasonable certain that an individual no longer lives at the address at which he is registered before leaving a warning form indicating his voter registration may be canceled.

The warning is to be followed by a post card. However, many residents said they never received a warning notice.

Des Plaines City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach attributed the widespread distribution of notices to "sloppy canvassing."

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nixon's chief Vietnam adviser, Henry Kissinger, met with North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris then headed for Saigon to consult with South Vietnamese President Ngy Nguyen Van Thieu. The stepped up activity fueled speculation that progress was being made in the peace talks.

South Korean President Park Chung Hee proclaimed martial law in a surprise move he said was to protect the nation from unfavorable changes in the country.

At least four persons including two foreigners have been arrested by military authorities for involvement in an alleged Communist assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

The Nation

A squadron of 40 search planes flew through fog, wind, and rain along the southern Alaska coast seeking a missing plane carrying House Democratic leader Hale Boggs, Alaska's lone congressman and two other men.

Law enforcement sources in New York disclosed 100 policemen were among 677 persons with alleged mob involvement subpoenaed in what officials called the biggest crackdown on the Mafia in history.

Hoping that he has found an issue that Democrats will rally around, George McGovern stepped up his attacks against what he called Republican sabotage and subversion.

The State

A 28-year-old Chicago man was arrested after a robber took a secretary hostage and was given $10,523 in a brown paper sack at the First Bank of Oak Park.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears charged that State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan has closed his eyes after the 1969 Black Panther police raid to everything but the police version of the case.

Gov. Richard Ogilvie said he will order a complete reassessment of property in Cook County if the county assessor does not make drastic changes in his operation next year.

The War

Communist troops believed working under a "plant the flag" directive called the "X-10" resolution" seized five Central Highlands hamlets and an artillery base, but South Vietnamese forces quickly recaptured one hamlet and retook the artillery position.

Two local couples recently observed wedding anniversaries in a special way.

Stanley and Elaine Korecky's four children surprised them with an 18th anniversary party. When they returned home early one evening, they found four neighborhood couples waiting there.

"After we got over the initial shock, it was fun," said Elaine. Helping with the party plans were Wayne, Cherie, Brian, and Teri Korecky.

Neighbors also helped Leo and Mickey Newhouse, 405 N. Dale Ave., celebrate their 22nd wedding anniversary. Casper and Pina Todaro and Warren and Vonnle Wangen took the anniversary couple out for a French dinner at La Titi de Paris.

"RESOLVED: Women's Place Is in the Home" was the topic of a lively debate at a recent meeting of the Women's Society of Christian Service at Trinity United Methodist Church. Taking opposing sides were Naomi McNeil, Elizabeth Metzenthin, Judy Williams, and Nancy Michalski.

McDonald Creek Project Phase I Is On Schedule

Work on the first phase of the McDonald Creek improvement project is on schedule despite recent heavy rains, according to Frank Herlihy of the Herlihy Mid-Continent Co.

The Chicago construction firm has been awarded a $128,943 contract to enlarge the railroad bridge over the creek just south of the Euclid Avenue and Wolf Road intersection in Mount Prospect. The new culvert is expected to help alleviate flooding in sections of Prospect Heights along the north end of the creek.

Herlihy said men are now installing sheet piling along the creekbed to prevent homes in the area from flooding while work is being done.

Phase I will probably be completed by the December deadline, Herlihy said. "If not, we'll just keep on working until it is done," he said. All work now being done is temporary to allow the Soo Line Ry. to reroute part of the railroad tracks while permanent construction is done on the culvert. Herlihy said he expects temporary track to be laid within 10 days.

The culvert will not be opened until the second phase of the project begins. Phases two, three and four will include widening and improving the creek downstream from the bridge. All phases of the project have been designed by the Illinois Division of Waterways.

The Illinois General Assembly must approve further funds for the remaining phases. According to State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, the improvements would be part of a division of waterways bill which will include requests for approval of a variety of water projects in the state. He expects the bill to be introduced when the legislature reconvenes next year.

Officials Weigh Participation In Flood Project

Officials in Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect have begun to map strategy for an effort aimed at boosting Northwest suburban priority in the Metropolitan Sanitary District's (MSD) deep tunnel flood control proposal.

Flood control committees in both villages are planning a series of joint meetings at which they will look at the MSD's deep tunnel plans and document the need for flood relief in the Northwest area.

The deep tunnel network, called the Chicago Underflow Plan, has been proposed as a means of temporarily storing water from combined storm and sanitary sewers during heavy rainfalls.

Under the present plan, construction work on the Northwest branch of the deep tunnel network would not begin until 1977.

"In the overall picture, combined sewer systems are the number one problem in this area and the deep tunnel is the best solution to that problem I've seen," George March, an engineer and the chairman of Mount Prospect's Drainage and Clean Streams committee said yesterday.

MARCH SAID his committee is already at work documenting the extent of damage in Mount Prospect from recent flooding.

A citizens committee against flooding in Arlington Heights, chaired by Trustee Frank Palmatier, also has mailed a questionnaire to residents asking information about the extent of storm water flooding in the village.

Although no date has been set for a meeting of the two committees, Palmatier said he would be meeting with March to arrange a joint meeting.

"We need to demonstrate to the MSD what the hardships here have been so they will have an accurate picture on which to set their priorities," March said.

John Woods, Arlington Heights village president, said he has met with Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Telchert to discuss the possibility of petitioning the sanitary district to give top priority to the Northwest suburbs in any deep tunnel plan.

If both village boards concur, Woods said he and Telchert would call on the Northwest Municipal Conference to join in support of higher priority for the Northwest branch.

"THIS IS JUST one more step in an effort to win higher priority for our area," Woods said.

March said the two village flood committees would also look at local flood control measures which might be undertaken jointly by Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

Specifically, he said the continued deepening and widening of Weller Creek and the construction of a retention basin north of Central Road and somewhere west of Busse Road were projects in which both villages had an interest.

"There are important things to be done locally but ultimately complete flood control will be beyond the financial capability of individual communities," March said.

"That's why it's important that the Northwest interceptor have a high priority (in the deep tunnel plan) and the sooner this is brought to the MSD's attention the better," he added.

The MSD recently delayed adoption of the Chicago Underflow Plan until a meeting of mayors and engineers from communities that would be affected by the $2.65 billion proposal can be held to explain the project.

Nearly $1.5 million partial funding for the project already has been approved by Congress.

Police Dispatch System To Change

Police cars from Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Arlington Heights will be dispatched from the same location starting at 11 p.m. tomorrow.

Acting Mount Prospect Police Chief John Savage said the date had been moved up from midnight Saturday however, a new radio frequency for the system will not be used by the three communities for "another two to three weeks."

"They are still testing encoders, satellites and other equipment," Savage said. He added that the frequency that will be used is an ultra-high one as used for television stations. As to whether television viewers may be able to pick up the police signals, Savage said, "That's one of the things they're checking."

All-America City Hopes Are Dashed

Mount Prospect's hopes for the All-America City award this year have ended, but village officials promise to try again.

"We've done the best we could and we'll be back again," Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said yesterday. Eppley is chairman of the All-America City committee.

According to Eppley, Tom Leo, committee vice chairman, received a letter over the weekend informing committee that Mount Prospect had not made the finals. Only 21 of the approximately 150 entrants will be named finalists.

Car Theft Reported

A 1969 four-door blue Ford Galaxy 500, valued at $1,900, was stolen sometime Sunday night from a parking lot at Elm and Highland streets in Mount Prospect. The car is owned by Ronald Moehling, 224 E. Highland St., who reported the theft to police.

Cases Continued

The cases of two 19-year-old youths, charged with the Sept. 20 robbery of a Mount Prospect White Hen Pantry store, were continued to Nov. 14 yesterday in Niles branch of circuit court.

James P. LaRocco, 8414 Greenwood, Niles, and Michael J. Taylor, 500 W. Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Township, have been accused in the incident in which $524 was taken from the store at 1580 S. Busse Rd. Charges have also been filed against the two in connection with a Des Plaines burglary.

The program, partially funded with a federal grant, is designed to increase the speed with which policemen can answer emergency calls. Only the three communities will use the radio frequency. Also, policemen will use portable radios which can be carried on their person.

Mount Prospect residents who visit the Mount Prospect Police Station will notice a change after Thursday. With the radio personnel moved up to Arlington Heights for use on the central dispatch equipment, the shift commander's office will be moved to the local radio room. He will handle all non-emergency police calls.

Savage stressed that after 11 p.m. Thursday, all emergency Mount Prospect police calls will continue to be handled at 253-2151, while non-emergency calls will now be handled at 392-6000.

A continuance was granted yesterday by Judge Frank B. Machala in the case of Leo Clark Jennings, who is charged with the murders last month of Mrs. Barbara Flanagan, 27, and her 18-month-old daughter, Renee.

Jennings, who earlier had stated he would defend himself, was represented in court yesterday by a public defender who asked for the continuance to Nov. 14. The assistant state's attorney handling the case, Patrick Driscoll, raised no objections to the continuance request.

Jennings was charged with the murders Oct. 1. The Flanagan's nude and beaten bodies were found Sept. 11 in the Community Presbyterian Church parking lot, 407 N. Main St., Mount Prospect.

Woman Sustains Neck Injury In 2-Car Crash

A Des Plaines woman was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with a neck injury after an accident Monday in Mount Prospect.

Judith Paruba, 29, of 700 Elizabeth, was kept at the hospital, while William Poruba, 5, Mark Hoover, 2, Gary H. Hoover, 7 weeks, and Marilyn Hoover, 33, all of 663 W. Cordial Dr., Des Plaines, were treated and released.

The accident occurred shortly before 3 p.m. at the intersection of Main and Gregory streets. All the injured were in a vehicle operated by Marilyn Hoover. That vehicle, southbound on Main, struck a car operated by Eugene Hooten, 44, of 313 N. Main St., Mount Prospect, as Hooten was making a left turn onto Gregory from a northbound Main Street lane.

Police said that after the Hooten vehicle was struck, it spun around and collided with an eastbound car on Gregory Street. The third vehicle, stopped for a red light, was operated by Lois A. McCord, 63, of 403 W. Miller Rd., Des Plaines.

Hooten was charged with making an improper left turn and Mrs. Hoover was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident. Both will appear Nov. 29 in Mount Prospect court.

4,000 Eligibles Called To Clerk's Office

'Sloppy' Canvass Irks Local Voters

Confusion continued yesterday throughout the Northwest suburbs about what was alternately called "overly aggressive" and "sloppy" techniques by election canvassers attempting to wipe the names of no-longer-eligible voters from the registration rolls.

The canvassers, it seems, challenged at least 4,000 eligible voters at the same time. Those voters have been barraging local village and township offices with their complaints.

Some 100,000 notices informing persons that their names will be stricken from registration lists unless they appear in the Chicago office of the Cook County Clerk's office were distributed late last week and early this week throughout suburban Cook County.

The distribution appeared not to be politically motivated, but was widespread in Democratic as well as Republican areas. Each notice was signed by a Democratic and a Republican Canvasser.

CONFUSION AROSE as some suburban officials told irate callers that they must appear at the Cook County Clerk's office as of 9 p.m. yesterday in order to revalidate their voter registration, as indicated in the notices.

The election division of the clerk's office, however, has indicated a willingness to waive that requirement in most cases.

Federal laws that protect the right of persons to vote can be interpreted in such a way as to allow challenged voters who have not moved or changed names to sign the backs of the notices they received as an affidavit of their eligibility to vote, according to election supervisor Thomas King.

"Some people work or just can't make it to Chicago," he said. "We try to work something out. We're not here to take people arbitrarily off the rolls."

Signed notices mailed to the clerk's office should have been postmarked by 9 p.m. Tuesday, King said, but may be accepted later if the voter calls the clerk's office and explains the circumstances.

King estimated that some 4,000 of the 150,000 persons who received notices challenging their eligibility are duly registered and will be allowed to vote.

KING SAID THAT the election canvassers in each precinct, one Democrat and one Republican, are supposed to be reasonable certain that an individual no longer lives at the address at which he is registered before leaving a warning form indicating his voter registration may be canceled.

The warning is to be followed by a post card. However, many residents said they never received a warning notice.

Des Plaines City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach attributed the widespread distribution of notices to "sloppy canvassing."

Home TV? Bears Drive You To Drink

by MARY HOULIHAN

The neighborhood tavern. Since time immemorial, this sanctuary away from kith and kin, weekend chores and other such crises in life, has held a hallowed spot in the hearts of males. Besides its usual convivial offering of good drink and cheer, the corner bar has also been, in recent years, one of the few places where a fan could see a Chicago Bears home football game.

This has been the case since 1961 when Congress allowed the National Football League (NFL) to black out televised games in the cities where they were being played. The NFL had argued successfully that its financial survival depended on television contracts and on protecting home gate revenues by not televising home contests.

Though a blow to local Bears' fans, the ruling brought an unexpected chance to make money for local tavern owners. Owners pirated games from either Rockford or South Bend, buying expensive ultra-high frequency equipment. And the pirating turned out to be very lucrative. As one tavern owner commented, "When home games are on, there isn't an empty chair in the place."

There is no charge for the advantage of seeing a home game at the local bar. Though tavern owners spend anywhere from $200 to $1000 on the UHF equipment to televise the game, they make up the cost only through the sale of liquor.

LAST WEEK — It appears — a mortal blow might be struck to the corner taverns who pirate the games with the news that President Nixon supports proposed legislation prohibiting professional sports from imposing television blackouts of home games. But from a random survey of local tavern owners, it doesn't seem that anyone is in a state of panic.

To be sure, the tavern owners are not happy about the idea, but they're not planning on declaring bankruptcy because of it either. "We'll miss a few people, but they (meaning the fans) will be here anyway," Ed Weight, manager of the Old Town Inn in Mount Prospect, explained. "We won't be as busy because it won't be a novelty anymore, but win or lose, we'll still get the crazy fans."

Indeed, Weight's opinion seemed to be the general consensus among tavern owners in the area who show Bear's home games on Sundays.

"It will hurt business of course, but again, fellas like to get out and yell and scream and act like little kids," James Di Falco of Jake's Pizza in Elk Grove

Village, said. "I don't think they can do that at home."

George Callahan of Cal's Place in Arlington Heights agreed. "What can you do about it?" he asked. "Besides you'll always have customers," he said.

Charles Romano, of Romano's Restaurant in Des Plaines said he is in favor of the blackout. "But eliminating it wouldn't hurt me at all," Romano jokes. "They (the fans) don't enjoy the game at home with their wives. They wouldn't have anyone to argue with. They want to get together and yell and scream at each other. That's boys for you."

THE ONLY establishment showing pirated editions of the Bear's home games that might not make out too well if the blackout is ended is not a tavern, but the Wheeling Park District. The park district bought a UHF antenna last year for about $750. The district asks for a donation of 50 cents for children and $1 for adults. "But this just covers the cost of paying the staff during that time," Dave Phillips, park director explained. "Though there is a concession stand run by the district during the game, Phillips said the district just breaks even."

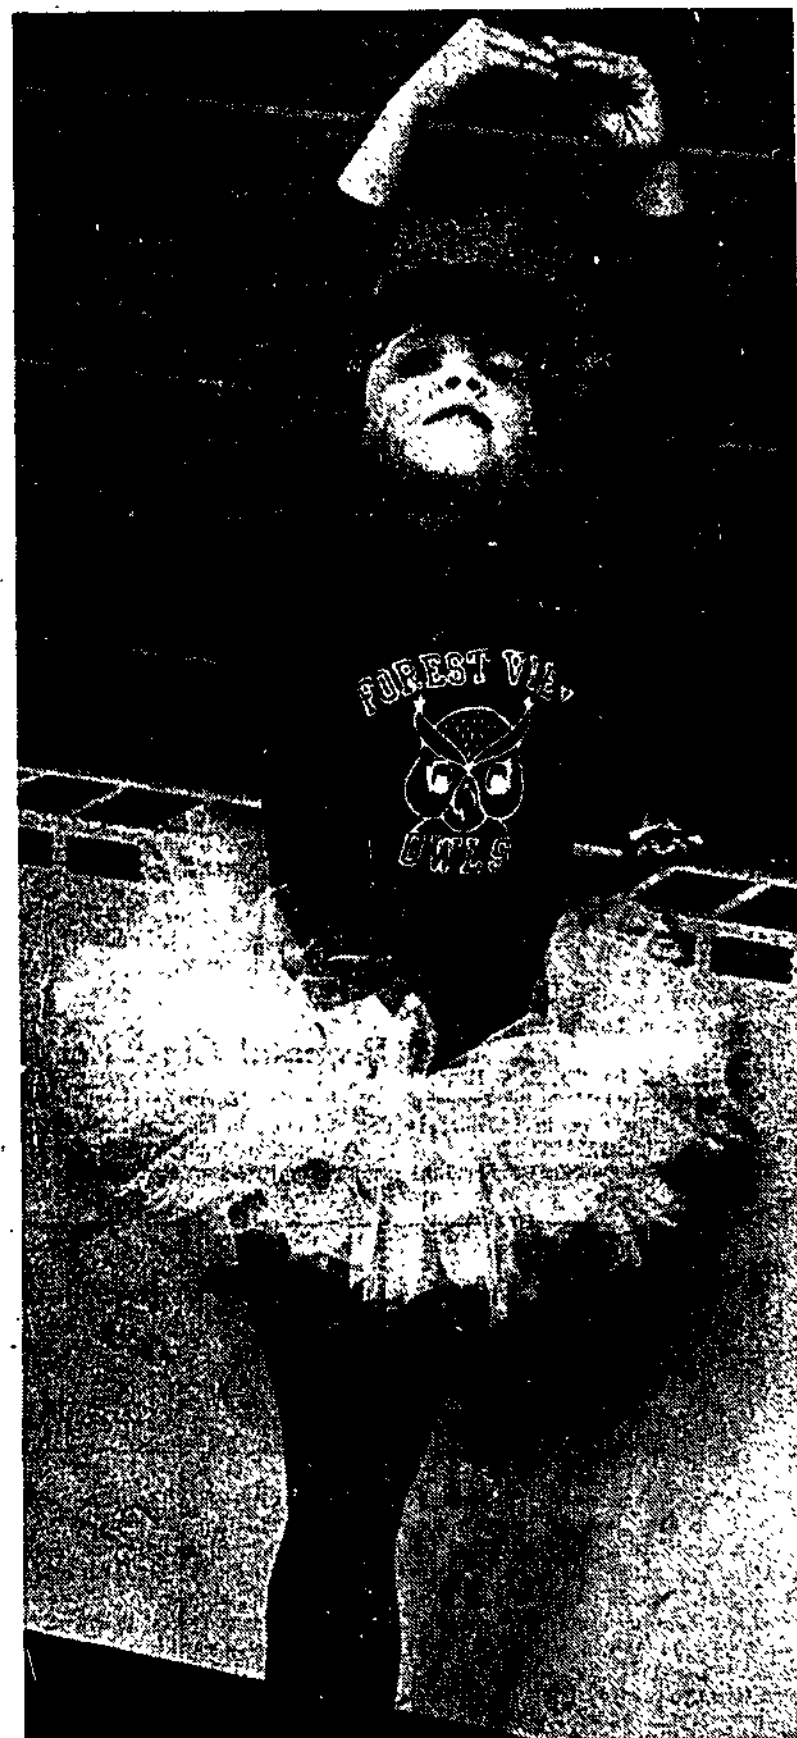

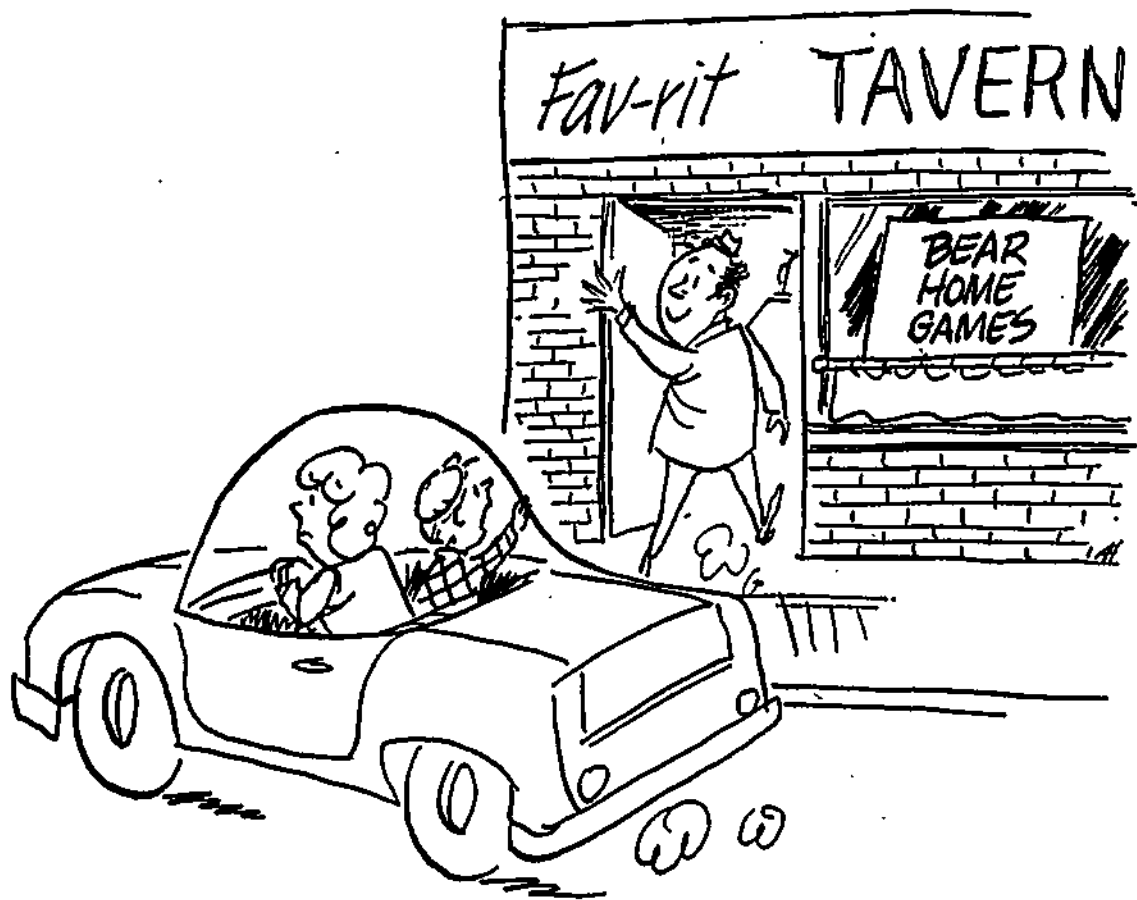

As for the patrons of the bars where pirated games are televised, the opinions on the possible end to the blackout are divided. About half said they will continue to watch the game at the corner tavern. The other half are definitely homebodies.

Dale Malzahn, a patron of the Old Town Inn, is probably the most representative of the tavern-watchers. "I'd much rather watch it (the game) in a bar where I can talk to people," Malzahn said.

Bobby McGregor perhaps explained it better. "I'd rather get out of the house and go drinking," he said.

But the homebodies say watching the game on your own TV has a lot of advantages. "I'm in my own atmosphere and the beers a little freer and a little colder," said Hank DeGeorge of Schaumburg. Robert Pomeroy of Chicago concurred: "I like to stay home on Sunday and have Sunday dinner and so forth," he said.

No matter how you change things, there's bound to be someone who's not satisfied however. Asked his reaction to the possible end to the blackout, Jim Bickman, a patron of the Old Town Inn, could only say, "I wouldn't watch the Bears in either place."

THERE ARE still years of practice ahead for Debra Bell, 5, before she makes her debut as a ballerina at Forest View High School.

Free Vision Test

Scheduled Saturday

Vision testing, free of charge, will be held Saturday at Southminster Presbyterian Church, 916 E. Central Rd., Arlington Heights, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The program, sponsored by the Church and Arlington Heights Lions Club, is part of a Vision Conservation Institute S.O.S. "Save Our Sight" vision screening. The screening will be supervised by doctors from the North Suburban Optometric Society.

"Included in the program will be tests for near and far sightedness, muscle balance, field of vision, color perception and others," said Frank Soprano, local S.O.S. chairman.

The World

President Nixon's chief Vietnam adviser, Henry Kissinger, met with North Vietnamese negotiators, in Paris then headed for Saigon to consult with South Vietnamese President Ngy Nguyen Van Thieu. The stepped up activity fueled speculation that progress was being made in the peace talks.

South Korean President Park Chung Heo proclaimed martial law in a surprise move he said was to protect the nation from unfavorable changes in the country.

At least four persons including two foreigners have been arrested by military authorities for involvement in an alleged Communist assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

The Nation

A squadron of 40 search planes flew through fog, wind, and rain along the southern Alaska coast seeking a missing plane carrying House Democratic leader Hale Boggs, Alaska's lone congressman and two other men.

Law enforcement sources in New York disclosed 100 policemen were among 677 persons with alleged mob involvement subpoenaed in what officials called the biggest crackdown on the Mafia in history.

Hoping that he has found an issue that Democrats will rally around, George McGovern stepped up his attacks against what he called Republican sabotage and subversion.

The State

Soviet missile men have conducted their first long-term flight test of a beefed-up SS-11 intercontinental ballistic missile believed capable of carrying the Soviet Union's first U.S.-style multiple warhead.

A 23-year-old Chicago man was arrested after a robber took a secretary hostage and was given $10,523 in a brown paper sack at the First Bank of Oak Park.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears charged that State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan has closed his eyes after the 1969 Black Panther police raid to everything but the police version of the case.

Gov. Richard Ogilvie said he will order a complete reassessment of property in Cook County if the county assessor does not make drastic changes in his operation next year.

The War

Communist troops believed working under a "plant the flag" directive called the "X-10" resolution" seized five Central Highlands hamlets and an artillery base, but South Vietnamese forces quickly recaptured one hamlet and retook the artillery position.

Major Crimes Up 41.1 Per Cent In Des Plaines

by JACK PENCHOFF

Major crimes in Des Plaines increased 41.1 per cent in the first nine months of this year, including a 76.7 per cent rise in burglaries and a jump of 236 per cent in the number of robberies, as compared to the same period last year.

The crime rate figures were disclosed in the Des Plaines Police Department third quarter report released Monday night.

The figures show 37 robberies during the first nine months of this year, compared to 11 during the same period in 1971.

There were 495 burglaries in Des Plaines during the first nine months of 1972, according to the report. In 1971 there were 280 burglaries in the city in the same period.

DURING THE third quarter of 1972 there were 11 robberies compared to four in the third quarter of 1971, a 225 per cent increase.

The report says there were 183 burglaries committed in the city during the third quarter of this year, an 81 per cent increase over the 101 burglaries during the third quarter last year.

Other offenses included in the major crime category are murder, rape, aggravated assault, theft and auto theft.

The 41.1 per cent increase in major crimes was reflected in figures that show 1,960 incidents of such offenses for the first nine months of this year compared 1,389 major crime incidents reported in 1971.

The total crime rate in Des Plaines has increased 21.2 per cent during the first nine months of this year compared to last year.

POLICE HANDLED 3,600 reported major and minor crime incidents in the first nine months of this year compared to 2,969 total crime incidents in 1971.

Sgt. Kenneth Fredricks of the Des Plaines police yesterday said the soaring increases in burglaries and robberies can be attributed to drug use.

"A majority of our burglaries and robberies are committed by hard drug users," Fredricks told the Herald.

"If a guy has a $50 a day heroin habit, he's not going to find a regular job that can support him. He has to go out and burglarize or commit robberies," Fredricks said.

HE ADDED THAT the majority of the city's robberies and burglaries are committed by local drug users with a smaller number of those crimes done by persons from outside the Des Plaines area.

Thefts, including thefts from autos, increased 7.6 per cent during the third quarter of 1972. There were 407 reported thefts during July, August and September of this year compared to 378 in the same period last year.

The third quarter increase in thefts is consistent with the rate thefts increased during the first nine months of 1972. There were a total of 1,115 reported thefts the first nine months of this year compared to 1,047 during the same period last year, a 7.6 per cent increase.

A 34.8 per cent increase was reported in the total number of crimes, with 1432 major and minor crime incidents reported in the third quarter of this year compared to 1,062 last year.

THE TOTAL number of reported minor crimes during the first three quarters of the year rose 3.1 per cent from 1,840 reported minor crime incidents last year to 1,900 this year. However, the incidents of minor crimes in the city jumped more sharply during the third quarter of this year.

There were 665 minor crime incidents in July, Aug. and Sept. of this year compared to 533 such incidents during the same period last year, a 24.7 per cent increase.

Included in the minor crime category under the police department's reporting procedures are narcotics violations, vandalism, sex crimes other than rape, weapons, liquor law violations and driving a car while intoxicated.

There was a 11.7 per cent increase in the number of juvenile arrests during the first three quarters of this year. In 1971 there were a total of 1,087 juvenile arrests in the city during the first nine months of the year. This year there were 1,215 juvenile arrests.

THE MOST significant increase in juvenile offenses was in narcotics violations, with 67 juveniles arrested for drugs during the first nine months of this year compared to 49 during the same period last year, a 39.6 per cent rise.

The number of narcotics offenses by juveniles during the third quarter almost doubled, from 11 last year to 21 in 1972.

Charge 2 Men With Booking At A Hospital

Two Des Plaines men charged last weekend with running a $47,000-a-day syndicate gambling operation from public phones at O'Hare Airport were arrested again Monday for operating a similar bookmaking operation at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge.

Park Ridge police said yesterday that Gerald Glickman, 55, and his nephew, Joel Glickman, 37, both of 9035 Federal Ct., Des Plaines, were arrested Monday after they were observed taking bets at public phones in the foyer of the hospital.

Police said when they approached the Glickmans, the pair ran into a washroom where they were arrested.

Officers who used the phones after arresting the pair took bets on the World Series games from several callers.

Chicago police reportedly took over the phones the two Glickmans were using at the time of their arrest Saturday and took bets ranging from $25 to $500 on college football and World Series games, recording $47,000 in bets and confiscating sheets of paper listing bet records.

The Glickmans and a Chicago man, Edward Masor, are scheduled to appear in court Nov. 3 in Chicago for the O'Hare Airport arrests. A December court date has been set for the Park Ridge arrests.

Junior High Work Behind Schedule

Construction on Friendship Junior High School, 550 Friendship Ln., Des Plaines, is falling behind schedule.

This is the report that William Gross, of Berger-Kelly & Associates, architects for the building, gave to the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 School Board at the regular Monday meeting.

Gross said construction could be done on only half of the working days in August and September, work during the rest of the days was rained out.

"THE CONTRACTOR" assures us he will try to pick up the lost time," said Gross. "We are hoping for a break in the weather."

"If we can't make up the lost time, completion will have to be set back 30 days," said Gross.

Construction is scheduled to be completed at the end of February, 1973. The district had planned to open the school for classes in September, 1973.

Sixty per cent of the school is now under roof, Gross said. If the exterior work can be finished before severe winter weather sets in, the school will be completed on time.

This Morning In Brief

The World

President Nixon's chief Vietnam adviser, Henry Kissinger, met with North Vietnamese negotiators, in Paris then headed for Saigon to consult with South Vietnamese President Ngy Nguyen Van Thieu. The stepped up activity fueled speculation that progress was being made in the peace talks.

South Korean President Park Chung Hee proclaimed martial law in a surprise move he said was to protect the nation from unfavorable changes in the country.

At least four persons including two foreigners have been arrested by military authorities for involvement in an alleged Communist assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

The Nation

A squadron of 40 search planes flew through fog, wind, and rain along the southern Alaska coast seeking a missing plane carrying House Democratic leader Hale Boggs, Alaska's lone congressman and two other men.

Law enforcement sources in New York disclosed 100 policemen were among 677 persons with alleged mob involvement subpoenaed in what officials called the biggest crackdown on the Mafia in history.

Hoping that he has found an issue that Democrats will rally around, George McGovern stepped up his attacks against what he called Republican sabotage and subversion.

The State

A 28-year-old Chicago man was arrested after a robber took a secretary hostage and was given $10,523 in a brown paper sack at the First Bank of Oak Park.

Special Prosecutor Barnabas Sears charged that State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan has closed his eyes after the 1969 Black Panther police raid to everything but the police version of the case.

Gov. Richard Ogilvie said he will order a complete reassessment of property in Cook County if the county assessor does not make drastic changes in his operation next year.

The War

Communist troops believed working under a "plant the flag" directive called the "X-10" resolution" seized five Central Highlands hamlets and an artillery base, but South Vietnamese forces quickly recaptured one hamlet and retook the artillery position.

The Market

Stock prices gained on the New York Stock Exchange as investors were encouraged by some favorable economic news and the possibility of progress in the Vietnam peace talks. The Dow Jones industrial average closed up 4.82 at 926.48. The price of an average share of common stock was increased 28 cents. Advances outnumbered declines, 813 to 574, among 1,785 issues on the tape. Turnover amounted to 13,410,000 shares. Prices were mixed on the American Stock Exchange.

Bicycle Ordinance May Be Revised

The Des Plaines bicycle ordinance will be revised next month as part of the city's bicycle safety program.

The city council Monday gave first reading to the proposed ordinance recommended by police department, safety council and city officials.

Major changes in the five-page ordinance would:

1) Eliminate bicycle license fees. More than 700 persons have applied for free licenses since Sept. 1 when police began the policy, but the city code has not been changed.

2) Allow use of infant carriages, "properly manufactured and installed over the rear fender." The current ordinance prohibits all double riding on bicycles.

3) Authorize fines of $1 to $25 for ordinance violations or impounding of bicycles for up to 10 days.

THE PROPOSED ordinance, originated by former Akl Morgan O'Brien's traffic committee, will allow police officials to set up a bicycle violator court this fall. Lt. James Scheski, bicycle safety program director, said. The ordinance "specifically designates" the police department to enforce the bicycle code.

The court will apply to persons under 18 years old. By law, the juveniles cannot be ordered to bicycle court. Scheski said a follow-up letter will be mailed to violators warning of possible traffic court ticketing.

Adult bicycle violators can be ticketed for traffic court appearances, the ordinance states.

The proposed ordinance will eliminate nuisance enforcement provisions. The police department will no longer be required to stamp a city serial number on bicycles and will not require reports of bicycle sales from area dealers.

"All bicycles have their own serial numbers," Scheski said. "You can buy bicycles every place now and the ordinance (to report sales) wasn't enforced."

The ordinance requires compliance with posted traffic signs, riding on the right side of the road, single file riding, and yielding to pedestrians.

THE BICYCLE safety program was planned after 65 bicycle collisions with motor vehicles and one death last year.

Church Slates Dinner Dance This Saturday

St. John The Baptist Greek Orthodox Church of Des Plaines will hold a dinner dance this Saturday evening at Arlington Park Towers Hotel in Arlington Heights.

Mrs. Jo Bolger, dance chairwoman, promised a gala evening for the dance, whose theme is Autumn Leaves. Cocktails will begin at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 8 p.m., Mrs. Bolger said.

Five strolling violinists will provide dinner music and Perry Fols and his orchestra will be featured after dinner. For additional information and reservations, call Mrs. Nicholas Blase at 825-6400 or Mrs. William Terpinas at 967-7467.

District OKs School Boundary Changes

Boundary changes affecting most of the schools in Elk Grove Township District 59 were officially adopted by the school board Monday night.

The changes, effective in September, 1973, affect Byrd, Clearmont, Grant Wood, Frost, High Ridge Knolls and Brentwood schools, and Dempster, Holmes, Lively and Friendship junior high schools.

Students affected by the changes who would be entering the eighth grade in staying at the school they have been attending or transferring to the new junior high school for their district.

The changes were adopted by a 5-2 vote of the board.

Gerald Smiley, one of the dissenting voters, said he opposed the changes because it meant the board "dropped the neighborhood school concept." He said that busing children to schools to utilize empty classroom space was "like moving bags of potatoes to the marketplace, with the empty schools being the marketplace."

THE CHANGES adopted by the board followed the recommendations of the special citizens' committee on attendance boundaries. The committee was ordered by the board in April to review present and expected student population throughout the district and make any necessary recommendations to relieve overcrowding.

Members of the committee responded to Smiley's statement by saying the committee found there would be 1,000 empty seats throughout the district. The committee could not recommend additions to existing school buildings with that much space available.

The board did not adopt the committee's recommendation for a boundary change at Cook School in Elk Grove Village. The board did accept the committee's recommendation that the area warranted close attention because overcrowding might develop at the school.

A boundary change will be made at Cook if and when a review by the administration shows an overcrowding situation is possible.

Children in the Diamond Point housing development in Mount Prospect have the option this year of remaining at Brentwood School, Des Plaines or returning to Frost School, Mount Prospect.

The area was placed in the Brentwood boundary by an action taken in August by the school board. The boundary committee recommended that Diamond Point be returned to Frost.

IN OTHER ACTION at the meeting: —The board authorized disbursements with educational funds expenditures totaling $82,631.63.

—A financial statement for the three months ending Sept. 30, 1972 was presented to the board by Arthur Perry, assistant superintendent for administration.

—Board member Erwin Poklaski gave a report on the Northwest Educational Cooperative.

—Judith Zanca was appointed delegate to the Illinois School Board Association meeting. Poklaski was appointed alternate delegate.

—The board appointed Robert Brower as principal of Friendship Junior High School, which is scheduled to open for classes in September, 1973.

—The board raised the salaries for 29 teachers who have gone up in pay scale by furthering their education.

—Resignations were accepted from three teachers — LeArdyee Lowrie, Elise Perlen and Orval Rotra.

City Mailing 20,000 Flood Questionnaires

The City of Des Plaines will survey local flood damage next week.

The city council authorized $800 Monday for delivery of 20,000 one-page flood questionnaires by the Independent Postal Service.

The questionnaires will be delivered door-to-door and will include a self-addressed return envelope and request for information by Nov. 3.

Responses will be used to determine federal revenue sharing priorities and to meet criteria for membership in the federal flood insurance program, Mayor Herbert Behrel told city council Monday.

The city anticipates receipt of more than $325,000 in federal funds this month. Congress approved the program, which will return tax dollars to local communities, last week. The program requires municipalities to list expenses and priorities which could include flood control.

The insurance program, which allows Des Plaines residents to purchase low-cost, federally subsidized flood insurance, began Oct. 15 and requires the city to map flood areas.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE, which will be delivered to all residences and businesses, asks for dollar-damage estimates for foundations, superstructure, decorations, equipment, furnishings and personal belongings. Damage estimates also are requested for garages and other buildings, automobiles, grounds and landscaping, loss of income, medical expenses, evacuation and reoccupation.

Listed under "relevant data" are the number of residents, number of residence evacuation days, number of residence evacuation days and losses prevented by evacuation or emergency preparations.

The questionnaire asks, in capital letters, whether flood damage was caused by storm water or sewer backup.

A cover letter signed by Behrel states that "all damage figures will be confidential and only total damages for the community will be publicized."

The letter explains that the city is conducting a flood damage survey for August and September storms.

Behrel requests return of the questionnaire even if no damage occurred.

CITY OFFICIALS and secretaries were busy stuffing questionnaires into delivery envelopes yesterday. Comptroller Duane Biletz said the stuffing will be completed by tomorrow.

Delivery to homes, in plastic doorknob bags, will require about three days, a salesman for the independent postal delivery groups told the Herald yesterday. The group, located in 27 states through route ranches, previously delivered a park district pamphlet in Des Plaines.

In another letter to the council, Behrel outlined uses of the city's $328,273 in federal revenue funds — maintenance and operating expenses, public safety, environmental protection, public transportation, health, recreation, libraries, social services, financial administration and capital expenditures.

"I do not feel your mayor should decide these priorities by himself," the letter stated. Behrel asked the council Monday to appoint a priority committee.

Instead, the council set Nov. 1 for a committee of the whole meeting to discuss revenue funds.

BEHREL SAID yesterday, at his weekly press conference, that the funds could finance the proposed city hall. "But, I want to emphasize that it's not a high priority item."

The mayor denied that the council delayed the city hall and ward remap projects by demanding further "study" Monday.

"I would still like to see the city build an eight-story building," he said, contending the project would be "good for downtown redevelopment . . . a shot in the arm."

"From the taxpayers standpoint, five stories might be a smart idea," Behrel said.

Council members, at a committee of the whole meeting last week, favored reduction in proposed building size to five or six stories and abandoned plans for part-city and part private ownership of the structure.

The council Monday authorized city officials, including Behrel, to investigate financing of the project. "We've got to find out if local banks are willing to make a loan on a 5, 10 or 20 years basis without going through a referendum," Behrel said. "There's a question in my mind whether our local bank can handle a job like $1.5 or $1.25 million."

Four Businesses Burglarized; Haul $5,000

Four Des Plaines businesses were burglarized Monday night, with more than $5,000 worth of office machines and electrical equipment and $161 in cash stolen.

According to reports, thieves broke a window to enter Lake-Cook Farm Supply, 997 Lee St., to steal $161 in cash. Police said the burglars stole the money from a cash box in the office area.

Three offices located near one another were all broken into by thieves who snapped the locks off doors to the firms. Police said a typewriter valued at $246 was stolen from the office of V. C. White, an orthodontist, at 17 N. Broadway.

Three typewriters valued at $2,210 were stolen from offices of American Sign Indicator Corp., 29 N. Broadway.

A typewriter, two dictaphone machines and an adding machine all valued at $1,548 plus electrical equipment valued at $1,185 were stolen from offices at New Hampshire Ball Bearing, 27 N. Broadway.

Maine North High School's music department will present Joseph Stein's "Fiddler On The Roof" on Oct. 28, 29 and on Nov. 3, 4 at the school, 9611 Harrison, Des Plaines. Curtain time will be 8 p.m.

Parents Rap Basketball Program

A group of parents of Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 junior high school students have protested to the school board about this year's program for basketball competition.

The group presented its protest to the board at the meeting Monday night.

A special meeting of the curriculum committee of the school board will be held tonight to discuss the problem.

The meeting will be at 7:30, in Dempster Junior High School, 420 Dempster St., Mount Prospect.

This year the school administration, following board direction, implemented a new program for junior high school basketball.

The board's order for the new program came in June after several weeks of discussion by the curriculum committee.

The program calls for an intramural program to run during November and December. In January, an inter-school program will begin. The inter-school program will concentrate on district schools playing each other. A few games with out-of-district schools are possible.

For the inter-school teams, each school will have two teams at both the seventh and eighth grade level. The teams at each grade level will be "equal," there will be no "A" teams and "B" teams.

Each boy on an inter-school team must play at least one quarter each game. No boy may play more than three quarters in any game.

Tuesday, Sharrle Hildebrandt, a member of the curriculum committee, said the program was changed to broaden student participation in sports and to improve the instruction aspect of sports activity.

In a statement read to the board Monday, Joseph Woelfel, spokesman for the group, said, "Viewed athletically, this new program is unacceptable with its unreasonable restrictions and controls."

"We find the de-emphasis of the competitive atmosphere and the 'one school team' concept to be a denial of all students, of certain desirable educational experiences. Namely, unified involvement, allegiance to a cause, school spirit, and school pride."

Speaking Of . . .

A Woman On The Board

by KAY MARSH
According to a recent survey, members of the boards of directors of 44 "most successful U.S. industrial companies" spend an average of 11.3 hours a month at the job, and are most apt to be residents of New York.

The survey doesn't say so, but directors are also overwhelmingly apt to be male. Which brings us to my friend Gladys, the last person you'd pick to join a revolution. An attractive widow in her early sixties, Gladys knows her Guccis and her Puccis (if that's how you spell them) and drives a bright red car she calls her "gaudy Audi." The coupons she clips come, not from grocery ads, but from bearer bonds. And if she ever carries a sign in a protest march, you can bet she'll wear spotless white gloves. Yet Gladys, too, is a dues-paying, card-carrying member of what has been called our "adversary culture."

GLADYS, YOU SEE, has a cause. She believes that women should have more say-so in how American businesses are run. Specifically, she thinks there should be more women on corporate boards of directors. There are, she read somewhere, some 32.5 million shareholders in these United States, and more than half of the individual shareholders are women.

She also thinks that women deserve a voice because of their buying power and because they have special contributions to make in determining the standards under which business must operate to improve the quality of life. That's why Gladys pays close attention to what she calls a company's W/B ratio (for Women on the Board). And that's why Gladys, every time she has to send in a proxy or mail anything to the companies in which she owns stock, makes it a point to add a little note. "Why," she always asks, "don't we have a woman on our board of directors?"

SHE GETS ANSWERS: very polite letters, beautifully typed. All but one that she's received have been addressed to "Ms." And all but one have been signed with what Gladys judges to be a masculine name. (That one was from Mobil Oil, which says it "has no bias for or against the appointment of a woman to the board.")

Nobody says "no" to the idea. Standard Oil of New Jersey assures her that women "will be considered along with other qualified candidates." Northern Illinois Gas says "It is very possible that we will have one in the future." And CPC promises to "consider the qualifications of women who are available . . . as we have in the past."

Women have, of course, been directors in the past. (One of the earliest, born in 1830, was Sarah Gibson Humphreys, the first woman in the U.S. voted to the board of directors of a public road.) Today, an ever-growing number of corporations have women directors: IBM, CBS, Chase Manhattan, Consolidated Edison and the Washington Post, to name just a few. Oveta Culp Hobby has been a director of General Foods since 1968. But Gerber, the baby food company, elected its first woman member of the board this July. (She is Dr. Dena C. Cederquist, professor of nutrition, Michigan State University.) Just this year, too, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. named its first woman director (Dr. Roberta F. Fenlon, president of the California Medical Association).

GLADYS DOES NOT credit her letters for such progress. But she thinks they help. And she's encouraged that the subject now comes up at most annual meetings. In his June letter to shareholders, for instance, the president of Norfolk and Western Railway said that he was asked why a woman was not on the NW Board. "That's a good question," he replied, adding that "some day a woman may well be elected to directorship."

Helping "some" day come sooner is the Federation of Women Shareholders in American Business, Inc., headed by Mrs. Wilma Soss. Among other activities, the Federation attempts to nominate (and elect) women for directors. Such a proposal was presented at this year's General Motors stockholders meeting but overwhelmingly defeated.

Yet on Oct. 1, General Motors did elect its first woman director: Catherine B. Cleary, president of the First Wisconsin Trust Company of Milwaukee.

Now that the country's biggest manufacturer has a woman director, Gladys feels that more and more corporations are sure to follow suit. She, however, is taking no chances. And her advice to you is: if you own a single share of stock, keep those cards and letters coming, folks, and tell your company how you feel. Electing women to corporate boards may represent just one small step for womankind, but it's one that could well benefit us all.

These are the days when the youngsters come home from school looking for the cookie jar before they dash off to play. So here's a recipe for delicate, old-fashioned sugar cookies that not only will keep the young ones happy but that you can also serve if you have adult guests.

Mix well 1 cup each of margarine and sugar, 2 eggs and 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Then add 2 1/4 cups of flour, 1 teaspoon cream of tartar and 1 teaspoon of baking soda. Blend both mixtures together well and chill the dough for about an hour. Then form into balls and flatten with a glass dipped in flour (dip the glass in the flour for each cookie). Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 10 to 15 minutes — or until the cookies are a delicate brown. You'll rate this one high in your cookie recipe collection.

Dear Dorothy: Am commenting on the item about eggshells being crushed in the blender for spreading on the rose bed. Why waste electricity if you don't have to? A neighbor gave me this tip which works rather well. Get two tin cans, one slightly smaller than the other and put the dried eggshells in the larger can. Place the smaller can inside the larger one, right on top of the eggshells, and press. It makes a most satisfying crunching sound. Happy rose growing! —Mrs. Doreen J. Tingley

Dear Dorothy: I'm a great one on buying meats that are graded. However, I have run across meat that has no inspection stamps on it at all. How come? —Carol Helstein

Meat that has come across interstate lines must have the federal marking on it. I have seen butchers cut off these markings but have never understood why. Certainly the "choice" mark is nothing to be ashamed of.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 230, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Sportsman's Notebook

by Bob Holiday

THIS APPEARS TO have been Roland Martin's year on the professional bass fishermen's tournament trail. The 33-year-old Tulsa has emerged as the Jack Nicklaus of the play-for-pay fishing set.

Martin became the first two-time winner on this year's $100,000 pro circuit sponsored by the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society (B.A.S.S.) in winning the $15,500 All-American BASS tournament on Oklahoma's sprawling giant Lake Eufaula.

The $3,000 winner's purse lifted his winnings to $9,550 in the seven months of this year's events. It also marked his 17th straight finish in the official money and he now stands within easy reach of Bill Dance of Memphis, Tenn., for all-time money-winnings. Martin has accumulated $21,275 to Dance's $21,490. Martin has won four tournaments. Dance won seven BASS titles.

Since March, in six tournaments, Martin has won twice, finished second twice, third and fourth once each. Those finishes give Martin 203 points in the qualifying finals for the 1972 World's BASS Masters Classic. Only Tom Mann, the Jetty Worm king from Eufaula, Ala., was close with 157 points based on a grading scale of 35 for a first place finish, 34 for a second, etc. Martin's feat was, according to BASS president Ray Scott, on a par with battling 400 in baseball or winning back-to-back Masters tournaments. (People who promote things like tournaments tend to say things like that.)

Only two years ago, Martin found a disappointing 16th was the best he could do in the "pro" fishing company, but since then it has all been downhill for the former construction worker.

Martin approached the All-American on Eufaula much as a general goes to war. He flew aerial reconnaissance missions over the lake. He poured over topo maps and practiced . . . practiced . . . practiced. He says he had good reason to take the lake so seriously. It was this same impoundment that whipped him down to 16th two years ago.

One hundred twenty-nine other bass anglers from 19 states, including 42 Okies, paid the $150 entry fee, but they might as well have been buying tickets to watch Martin in his private duel with the lake. He broke the pack's back in the first round with a ten bass stringer that weighed 30 lbs. 8 oz. and he'd been sorting since noon! Billy Primos of Jackson, Miss., got a limit too, but his weighed a mere 19 lbs. 11 oz. In the second round Martin piled up 11 lbs. 14 oz. despite 35 mph winds and then checked in another limit catch of 20 lbs. 7 oz. in the final round.

His winning 62 lbs. 13 oz. on 26 fish represents the biggest creel this season and was accomplished on a lake that many fishermen consider one of the toughest on the tournament trail, which began this year in Florida. Runnerup was Jimmy Houston of Tahlequah, the current Oklahoma state champion, with 48 lbs. 4 oz. Biggest bass of the tournament was a 5 lbs. 11 oz. dandy landed by Calvia Hill of Bartlesville, Okla. He got the big one on the last day, using a Flip-tail plastic worm.

Spinnerbaits, diving lures and plastic worms accounted for most of the 601 bass taken by the pros at Eufaula and 92% of the fish were released alive after being totaled.

Next on the professional circuit is the big casino . . . the Bass Masters Classic, a winner-take-all $10,000 purse with the top 24 point scorers for the season competing on a "secret" lake. Only tournament officials know which lake will host the Classic. The top qualifiers meet a chartered jet, board it with all their gear and then, once underway, a sealed envelope is dramatically opened and the competitors are told where they are headed. It is reported that at that time the stewardess offers drinks which are ordered or not depending on the contestant's personal opinion of the plane's destination. Last year's Classic was held at Las Vegas, Nevada on Lake Mead, where the anglers found competition bass boats, and all the other necessities waiting for them. Bobby Murray of Hot Springs, Ark. won that one.

Martin and his competitors will get the airborne word next Monday morning.

WHEN MEL HAESSIG of Waukesha, Wis. caught a new state record chinook he also landed a place in the record books for Milwaukee county two weeks in a row. Haeessig's 36 pound, 8 oz. chinook came on the heels of a 22 pound 2 oz. coho caught by Donald Warzyn of Milwaukee. Milwaukee anglers are doing very well for their county, but they will have to go some to catch Green Lake county, which has four state records, including a 35 pound lake trout, and Winnebago county with four that includes a 180 lb. sturgeon.

SPEAKING OF "big deals." Last week's pin-up, Jack McGeady of Palatine who brought home a picture of his 235 lb. 8 foot black tip shark from Florida, just got back from Gillette, Wyo. with a 9 point (eastern count) mule deer buck. McGeady reported that the weather, typically, ranged from bad to rotten, but that the hunting was excellent for mule deer and antelope.

WISCONSIN DUCK hunters continue to moan about the bad hunting conditions the wet summer has bequeathed them. Ducks and geese alike are avoiding the usual ponds and lakes where hunters have erected blinds, preferring instead to sit it out safely in the fields and marshes, where the heavy rains have left them deep, comfortable, remote, pot holes. The birds, hunters report with distress, are out of range and out of reach. And the hunting season is quickly going by, day-by-passing day.

Illinois hunters can participate much the same problem, particularly in the area of the Chain of Lakes, where waters continue to be very high.

As conditions are right now, there will be no reason for the ducks to fly anywhere near any of the regular shooting areas, since there are plenty of sloughs and backwater channels where hunting is either impossible or illegal.

Chalk up one year for the birds.

Delores Harris Rolls 633 Series

Hoffman Sweeps In Classic Action

by GENE KIRKHAM.

Delores Harris of Doyle's — Des Plaines fired a fine season's high series of 633 with games of 260, 213, and 220 to top all individuals as the Paddock Women's Classic League bowled at Ten Pin Bowl in Barrington in its sixth week of action.

The match between Doyle's — Des Plaines and Arlington Park Towers was also highlighted by Winnie Lohse's 235 game and 602 series. Doyle's won the first game with a 962. The two teams tied with 907 in the second game and Arlington Park Towers won the third game.

Doyle's 2734 series was the deciding factor as they won four points to three. Top individual for Arlington was Donna Jean Sander who rolled a 236 game and a 580 series. Nan Hoffman added 543 and Donna Lohse had 502. For Doyle's Bonnie Kuhn rolled 513 and Nancy Porcellus had 503.

The only major change in the standings was caused by Hoffman Lanes' seven point sweep over Thunderbird Country Club. Hoffman moved from fourth place to second as they were led by

Delores Harris

Marilyn Lange who rolled a 599 series on games of 200, 218, and 181. Lois Kamenke and Joan Christensen added 545 and 503 for Hoffman. Mary Yurs led her Thunderbird team with a 544 series.

L - Tran Engineering continues to lead the league as they won five of seven points from Franklin - Weber Pontiac.

Lorrie Koch led her L - Tran team with a consistent 589 total to raise her league leading average to 189. Her teammates contributed four more 500's as Marlis Pleckhardt rolled 588, Vi Douglas 545, Tosh Inahara 537, and Isobel Kosal had 513.

L - Tran's 2772 series was high for the night and the second high team effort of the season. Franklin - Weber Pontiac was led by Lee Winski who fired 571. Joan Plywack helped out with 551 as Gloria Lucchesi and Betty Peterman added 512 and 509.

Striking Lanes defeated Morton Pontiac five points to two with Lu Schoenberger rolling 213, 219 and 183 for a 625 individual series.

The Striking Lanes team won the first game 837 to 812 and the second game with a 974 game. Morton Pontiac came back to win a one pin victory in the third game as they rolled 846 to Striking's 845.

For Striking Judy Croston had 526, Eunice Whitmore, 515, and Alice Schroder had 508. Ruth Baurhyte led her Morton team with 542 while Betty Parkhurst had 530 and Pam Cwik rolled 507.

The League resumes action at Striking Lanes this week. Morton Pontiac vs Hoffman Lanes, Thunderbird Country Club vs Striking Lanes, L - Tran Engineering vs Doyle's - Des Plaines, and Arlington Park Towers vs Franklin - Weber Pontiac will be the schedule at Striking.

Played Basketball

NEW YORK (UPI) — The matchups against today's basketball players might be slightly uneven but in his undergraduate days at Miami U in Ohio, Jets' football coach Weeb Ewbank was a star on the school's basketball team. Weeb also quarterbacked the football squad and was captain of the basketball team.

Principals To Decide

Outline Playoff Proposals

A proposal for a football playoff system for Illinois high schools, including specifics, was recently presented by the Illinois High School Association to principals around the state at several meetings.

The principals will have until January to decide whether or not they are in favor of the plan, then will vote on it.

Here are some provisions of the proposal:

Participation would be optional as it is in other IHSA activities.

Playoffs would be divided into five different classes, each with a 16-team bracket, for a total of 80 entries. (This year, 503 of the 785 IHSA member high schools have a football program).

Champions of each of the state's 64 conferences would qualify along with 16 at-large teams selected by the IHSA. In the event of co-championships, it would be up to each conference to have its own system of determining a playoff entry. Each bracket would have at least three independent teams.

The basis of the classifications would be average enrollment of all teams in the league. Enrollment of all-boys schools would be doubled in order to place them in a class.

Final playoff games would be completed on or before the final Saturday in November. They would begin after the sixth week of the season. If conducted in 1973 the schedule would be: Preliminary games Wednesday, Nov. 7; quarterfinal games Saturday, Nov. 10; semi-finals Saturday, Nov. 17 and finals Friday and Saturday, Nov. 23 and 24.

The plan would encompass by-law changes permitting the first games to be played on the first Friday after Labor Day and practice to begin the second Monday preceding Labor Day.

Playoff sites would be selected by the IHSA, which would follow a policy of selecting the stadium of the largest school participating in a game if its facilities are adequate.

Pairings would be on a geographical basis.

Lions-Dons On WWMM-FM Friday Night

Headliners in the Suburban Catholic and Mid-Suburban leagues have been selected as the next two high school games of the week by WWMM-FM of Arlington Heights.

St. Viator's battle with Notre Dame Friday evening at Elk Grove and the Rolling Meadows at Hersey encounter (Oct. 27) will be featured by the Arlington station at 92.7 on the FM dial.

The broadcasts will begin at 7:55 p.m. with pre-game shows.

Sports Director Dick Thomas of WWMM-FM will handle the play-by-play with Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk providing the color commentary.

A high school game of the week for Friday, Nov. 3, will be determined later.

WWMM-FM will also feature Harper's game with Illinois Valley this Saturday night at 7:25 p.m. from Rolling Meadows High School.

by GENE KIRKHAM
The Des Plaines Ace Hardware team swept the series from Gaare Oil to increase their lead to seven points in the men's Paddock Classic League. Bowling on their home Des Plaines Lanes, the Ace Hardware five was led by Tom Kourou's 693 series which included games of 237, 191, and 235. Kourou's series was the top individual effort of the night and was the big factor in dropping the Gaare Oil team to third place with their seven point loss to Ace Hardware. The Des Plaines team had a high game of 932 and a 2776 team series.

Hoffman Lanes was another seven point winner as they defeated Bank of Rolling Meadows in three games and the series. Ray Lofthouse led his Hoffman Lanes team with 183, 214, and 232 for a 609 series.
Morton Pontiac moved back into second place in the league by winning five points from Uncle Andy's Cow Palace. Uncle Andy's won the first game 910 to 895 while Morton won the second 945 to 912. Morton fired a 1008 third game to win the series point with a 2945 team series. Both the 1008 game and the 2945 series were the high totals for the night.

Ernie Koche led the Morton five with 200, 233, and 171 for a 604 series. Dick Baker was high for Uncle Andy's with a 589 total.
PCTL No. 3 was the five point victor in a close match with PCTL No. 2. The first game was won by PCTL No. 3 by one pin, 898 to 897. They won the second game 872 to 805 as PCTL No. 2 won their two points by winning the third game 907 to 868. The series point was won by the number three team 2636 to 2608. Bud Ewert of PCTL No. 3 led the scoring in this match with a 888 series.
The Paddock Classic League continues its action this week at Hoffman Lanes with Des Plaines Ace Hardware bowling second place Morton Pontiac. Other matches include Gaare Oil vs. Uncle Andy's, PCTL No. 3 vs. Hoffman Lanes, and Bank of Rolling Meadows vs. PCTL No. 2.

High Grades For Runners With Demons Still On Top

by MIKE KLEIN
A quickie cross-country report card: Give Maine East an "A." The Blue Demons keep rolling along and might not be stopped until the IHSA state meet on Nov. 4.

—Maine West and Northboth grade out at "B." The Warriors because of two dual meet wins but fourth place in a nine-school invitational.
And the Norsemen got their "B," make it a "B+" mostly for a fine effort against East and fifth place in the 17-school St. Ignatius Invitational.
A quick rundown of recent results shows East defeating North and Niles East. North also defeated Niles East prior to a fine showing at St. Ignatius.
The Warriors defeated Niles West and Highland Park before placing fourth at the Libertyville Invitational last Saturday.

The Blue Demons of John Coughlan are making a shambles of their opposition and rank as favorites for this Saturday's Central Suburban League meet at Locust Park in Wilmette.

Overall, East is 11-0 and holds a 10-0 CSL mark. The Demons have won two invitational and finished third in another.

Last Thursday, at North, the Blue Demons came close to a double shutout, demolishing North, 18-39, and Niles East, 17-44.

Four Demons paced the field, Gary Marshak leading the pack in 15:12 over the three-mile course. Right behind were teammates Pay Moyer (15:34), Lloyd Spitzer (15:39) and Dave Slattery (15:44).

But it was John Anderson of North who was highly pleased by his team's performance.
"The kids ran their best times of the year on a very muddy course," Anderson said. "Of course, running against Maine East is a heck of a challenge. Anytime you run a good school, your times are better."

North's Bill Fancher finished sixth (16:02) in the triangular. Two other Norsemen cracked the top 10: Mike Sharpe at seventh in 16:14 and Brad Furukawa, ninth in 16:21.

Anderson's other scorers were Bob O'Donnell (12th; 16:37) and Bob Lindquist (13th; 16:40).

Maine North salvaged a win in the triangular, stopping Niles East, 23-27. So the Norsemen carried an 8-6 overall dual meet record into the St. Ignatius Invitational.

With 187 points, the Norsemen finished fifth behind New Trier West (41), Marist (42), Lane Tech (81) and St. Ignatius (127).

Fancher finished fourth in the big meet with a 15:37 timing over three miles. Gordon Bess of New Trier West won the individual title in 15:23.

North's fourth place becomes more impressive considering Anderson dropped his three sophomores on varsity to the sophomore race.

The Norsemen sophs came up with a third place team finish, accumulating 108 points. Marist and Oak Park tied for first (84) and Taft finished fourth (127).

Maine North's three sophs, who dropped down from the varsity won trophies. Results showed Brad Furukawa fourth (16:23), Bob Lindquist eighth (16:34) and Mark Brodie ninth (16:35).

Two freshmen completed the soph team for North. Andy Sikorski earned 41st in 17:55 and Chuck DiPrima 46th in 18:13.

Maine West shut out Highland Park, 15-50, and defeated Niles West, 22-29, last Thursday at Niles West. The host Indians defeated Highland Park, 19-36.

The Warriors upped their Central Suburban record to 7-3 with the twin victories. Overall, Maine West takes an 8-5 record into this Saturday's CSL meet at Locust Park.

Coech Bill Barringer's runners captured first (Chip Barbour in 15:15), third (Greg Klebe in 15:37) and fifth through ninth at Niles.

Coming across in a 21-second split were Brian Dunavant, Brad Frost, Paul Mademann, Paul Frost and Scott Sedlack.

On Saturday, Barbour ran a strong race at Libertyville, finishing third in 14:26. He was beaten by Schaumburg's outstanding harrier, Arnold Jackson, who should make a strong bid for a state title.

Paul Hansen of Glenbard East finished second in 14:15, 29 seconds behind the fleet-footed Jackson. Barbour's time was 14:28.

Team champion Fremd swept fourth through eighth and it wasn't until Klebe took 16th in 15:02 that another Warrior crossed the line.

West's other scorers were Paul Frost (22nd—15:16), Mademann (25th—15:23) and Sedlack (34th—15:34).

Team totals at Libertyville showed fourth place Maine West preceded by champion Fremd plus Prospect and Glenbard East.

In other lower level competition, the Maine West sophs defeated Niles West, 15-50, and Highland Park, 23-29. The Warrior frosh also won twice, over Niles West, 20-40, and Highland Park, 16-45.

At Libertyville, Barringer's sophs finished fourth behind winner Fremd, Prospect and Schaumburg.

Fremd's Dave Scott won the sophomore race. Joe Paul of Maine West finished eighth in 15:41, 37 seconds behind Scott.

The West frosh finished second behind Conant at Libertyville. West scored 54 points and Conant 39. But Maine's Greg Koeller won the individual title.
